IT'S TIME AGAIN TO HELP...

WARM THE CHILDREN

Providing New Winter Clothing For Needy Children

For the ninth year, The Republican newspaper and the Civic Club of Oakland are asking for your help. Without it, many Garrett County children will go cold this winter.

Just what is the WARM THE CHILDREN PROGRAM?

The Republican's WARM THE CHILDREN PROGRAM is basically neighbors helping neighbors. We here at the paper are asking for monetary donations (tax deductible) from you, the readers. The collected funds are being used to purchase new winter clothing for Garrett County children in need. Because the newspaper administers the program, there are no added fees or overhead costs. Every penny donated is used to buy the winter items.

How are needy children being identified?

A special corps of volunteers is working right now to identify those in need this year. (Please do not call for the service. If you have been selected, you will be notified.)

How will the children's clothing be purchased?

Members of the Civic Club of Oakland are taking the families shopping at Wal-Mart. The children, with the help of their parents, may select their own new coats, hats, sweaters, long johns, jeans, boots, pajamas, or other needed winter items, spending up to $100 per child.

The Civic Club of Oakland is again heading up the volunteer/shopping coordination in the southern part of the county. Betty Ellington is the head coordinator, assisted by several other club members. For the northern part of the county, Lisa Broadwater will continue in her role as the coordinator of shopping at the LaVale Wal-Mart. Many other functions of the program are being handled by Civic Club members, for which the newspaper staff is very grateful. Dora Hanlin has again volunteered to help handle the applications, as she has from the beginning of the program. Her help is invaluable.

THE REPUBLICAN
GWFC Civic Club of Oakland

To make a donation, please complete the coupon below, cut it out, and mail it along with your tax-deductible contribution to the address noted. All checks should be made out to Warm the Children.

Donations should be postmarked by December 3, 2005. Those collected after December 3 will be saved for next year's campaign.

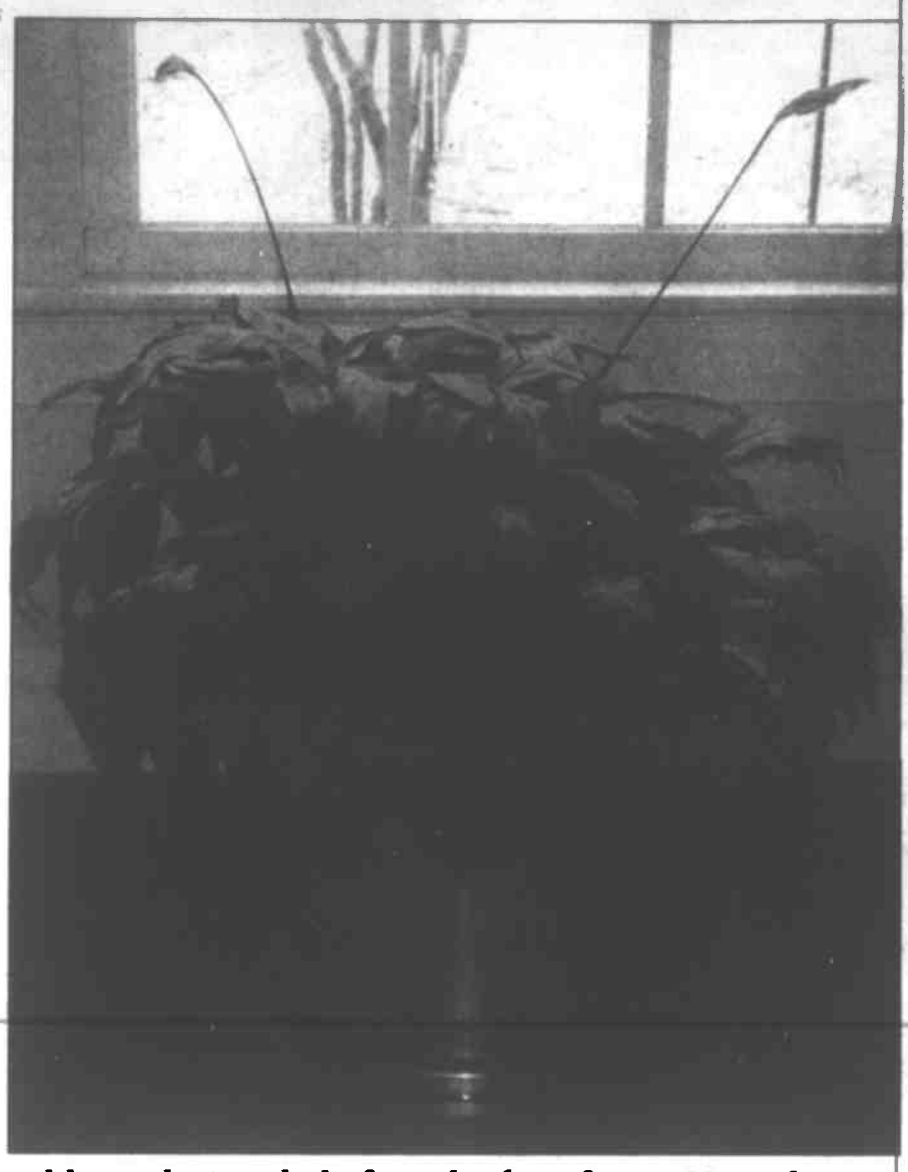
Planted in the House of the Lord



Winter is just around the corner. Reminders are all around. Mornings and evenings are colder, sometimes even cold enough to see your breath. Leaves have fallen from the trees after a brilliant blaze of color and bare, gray tree limbs make a silhouette against the sky. The grass has turned from green to brown, and summer flowers have disappeared.

The potted plants that sat outside all summer and fall have been carefully rescued and brought inside before the first frost. Now they shine like emeralds in the sunny window, oblivious to the season. They thrive in the house, warm and tended, lovingly watered and nourished.

As in nature, we also experience seasons of "winter" in our lives. From time to time we are overcome by cold winds of doubt, our hearts frozen with fear. We do not have to feel desolate. We, too, can be rescued.

Come into God's house. Warm your heart and nourish your spirit. Psalm 92:12-13 promises "...the righteous will flourish...planted in the house of the Lord."

GIVE THANKS

We all are taught at an early age to say 'please' and 'thank you,' and once we are old enough to pray, we are taught to extend these gracious words to God. Young children learn to thank God for their parents, their siblings, and for all of the other blessings bestowed on them. But, it can be difficult to explain to children, or adults for that matter, how and why we should be thankful for everything. In the First Epistle of Paul to the Thessalonians we are told to 'Rejoice always, pray constantly, and give thanks in all circumstances' (I Thessalonians 5. 16 18). Perhaps Paul's point here is that just as we can choose to pray or not to pray, and indeed even pray without ceasing by keeping an internal dialogue going with God, we can choose to rejoice and to give thanks at all times. Giving thanks is more about choosing to have a thankful attitude than it is about explicitly saying, 'thank you' to God. And just as we can strive to maintain a constant internal dialogue with God, so too can we remain ever thankful in our outlook and attitude. Of course, we must realize that being thankful is more about our subjective attitude than the objective external circumstances of our lives.

> O give thanks > unto the Lord, for
> He is good: for > His mercy endureth > for ever.
> K.J.V. Psalm 107:1

MSM: May Be Useful For Arthritis

Methylsulfonylmethane (MSM) is a naturally occurring sulfur compound found in various green plants, species of algae, vegetables, and grains. It is also found in human and bovine (cow) adrenal glands, milk, and urine. MSM has been used to treat a variety of conditions including muscle pain, muscle cramps, and hay fever; however, it is most commonly used to treat arthritis pain.

In a recent study presented at the American Association of Naturopathic Physicians, 50 patients with arthritis took either 3 grams of MSM twice daily or a placebo pill. After 12 weeks, those who took MSM had significantly less pain and improvements in physical functioning than those who took the placebo. Studies evaluating the long-term use of MSM are needed to examine the safety of its use for longer than 12 weeks. Typical MSM doses range from 1 to 3 grams daily with meals. Possible side effects may include nausea, diarrhea, headache, and pruritis (itching of the skin). MSM should not be used by people with sulfa allergies. There are no known interactions between MSM and other drugs.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• "Ask singers to sing, and you can't get them to start; don't ask them to sing, and you can't get them to stop." That sounds like a pretty modern observation, don't you think? You might be surprised to learn, then, that it's Horace — a Roman poet of the first century B.C. — to whom that bon mot is attributed.

• Perhaps unsurprisingly, the modern word "nepotism" comes from the ancient Latin word for "nephew."

• Actor Bill Murray was at one time a pre-med student.

• It's well-known that disputes over wedding ceremonies and celebrations can become emotional and heated. Some people take it to extremes, though; consider Florica Ifrimie. The Romanian woman and her fiance couldn't agree on a menu for the wedding feast. Florica evidently couldn't endure not getting her way, so she committed suicide.

• In the Middle Ages, many people thought the way to get rid of a hangover was to eat bitter almond paste on eels. The record doesn't indicate why.

• Those who conduct surveys on the subject report that the No. 1 phobia suffered by Americans is the fear of public speaking.

• When compiling lists of the best and/or most influential presidents the United States, Abraham Lincoln consistently is ranked at the top. It's interesting to note, though, that before 1860, the year he was elected president, Lincoln's only experience in national politics was the single term he served as a congressional representative. He had made two bids for a Senate seat, but was defeated both times. In some newspapers he was called "a third-rate Western lawyer."

• On Nov. 28, 1520, after sailing through the dangerous straits below South America that now bear his name, Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan enters the Pacific Ocean with three ships, becoming the first European explorer to reach the Pacific from the Atlantic.

• On Nov. 29, 1928, MGM releases "Love," a silent-film version of Leo Tolstoy's novel "Anna Karenina." Fearful that theater owners might balk at showing the tragic story of a doomed affair, MGM made two endings — one happy, one sad —and allowed them to request either version.

• On Dec. 4, 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt closes the books on the Depression-era Work Projects Administration. The WPA gave more than 8 million Americans work on an array of projects, including the construction of 650,000 miles of road and 125,000 public buildings.

• On Nov. 30, 1954, in Alabama, an 8.5-pound meteorite crashes through the roof of a house, bounces off a radio and strikes a woman asleep on the couch on the hip. Elizabeth Hodges suffered a nasty bruise but no permanent injury.

• On Dec. 3, 1967, 53-year-old Lewis Washkansky receives the first human heart transplant. Drugs given after the surgery in Cape Town, South Africa, left him susceptible to illness, and 18 days later he died of double pneumonia.

• On Dec. 2, 1985, organized crime bosses Paul Castellano and Thomas Bilotti are gunned down, making John Gotti the head of the Gambino crime family, the most powerful Mafia operation in New York City. Gotti's success at escaping conviction at trial earned him the nickname "Teflon Don."

Q. I have a 7-month-old orange tabby tomcat named Hemi, a 1-year-old black-and-white male cat named Diesel, and a 7-year-old male Siamese-mix named Milo. Hemi is going to be a huge cat. Hemi and Diesel sometimes start to play, then start hissing at each other. Both of them play (separately) with old Milo. How do I get Diesel and Hemi to get along? — Desperate 13-year-old in Littleton, Colo.

A. Ah, the cat triangle. Put two cats in a house together, and usually they'll get along (or go their separate ways). Put three or more together, and it's constant drama.

Cat relationships are very dynamic and hard to understand at times. In this case, old Milo is the undisputed "head of the house" and the younger cats don't challenge him. Watch them closely as they play — I'll bet both Hemi and Diesel will, at some point, flop onto their side or back in front of Milo, exposing their stomachs. This is both a gesture of friendship and trust, and an acknowledgement of another cat's dominant status.

However, if you watch Hemi and Diesel interact with each other, you probably won't see "the flop." They are close to the same age, still growing, and are trying to figure out where they stand in the pecking order. Just like human siblings, petty fights break out over the smallest things. These two young cats will continue to test each other for quite some time, until one finally acknowledges the other's dominance.

Hemi's size might lead him to be the next "leader of the pack," but don't count on it! Diesel likely has a few dominant traits, too. At any rate, as long as they are just hissing at each other and not outright fighting, let them work it out — under your watchful eye, of course.

Q. I recently purchased five pen-and-ink drawings of jazz musicians performing at Dixie Land Hall. They are signed and dated by the artist, I. or J. McBride. — Elizabeth, Benton, Ill.

A. Neither name is listed in Hislop's Official International Price Guide to Fine Art, edited by Duncan Hislop and published by House of Collectibles. Nor could I find a reference to McBride on the Internet. This leads me to believe that it could be the work of a lesser-known regional artist.

Perhaps it is time to consult an appraiser. You can find one in your area by contacting the American Society of Appraisers, 555 Herdon Parkway, Suite 125, Herndon, VA 20170.

Q. I have a Roseville vase that is blue with white flowers. Is it worth anything? — Audrey (via e-mail)

A. Although I'm guessing, I think your vase is probably from Roseville's magnolia pattern. The line was introduced in 1943 and was one of the last issued by the company.

To find out the value of your vase, I suggest you consult Warman's Roseville Pottery: Identification and Price Guide by Mark F. Moran (KP Publications, $24.99). This excellent guide features more than 1,500 photos in full color, references 2,000 Roseville pieces and has a list of current prices that I think are fairly accurate and reflect the marketplace.

THE SUN – The sun is in the star group Ophiuchus through Dec. 17, when it moves into Sagittarius to stay until Jan. 17, when it enters Capricornus. The amount of daily sunlight scarcely changes in December, averaging 9 hours and 45 minutes and varying by less than 10 minutes through the month. All through December, the sun rises between 7:20 and 7:40 a.m., and sets between 4:55 and 5:05 p.m. Winter officially begins on Dec. 21 when the sun rises and sets farthest south. This is the shortest day of the year, with only 9 hours and 20 minutes of sunlight. All through December, the sun's peak altitude is about 27 degrees; therefore, even at noon your shadow will be about twice as long as your height. Twilight in December is a little less than an hour, so the stars begin to fade away at 6:30 a.m. and begin to reappear at 6 p.m.

THE MOON – On Dec. 1-2, the moon is nearly in line with the sun. On Dec. 3, a very slender crescent moon may be seen very low in the southwestern dusk. On the next evening, the crescent moon appears near the brilliant planet Venus. The evening moon will appear half full on Dec. 7 (like a letter "D"), low in the southwestern evening sky. On Dec. 11, the moon appears near the bright planet Mars, and the moon will grow to full on Dec. 15. This full moon is known as either the Long Night Moon or Moon Before Yule. On that evening, the moon rises before the sun sets and stays in the sky for 16 hours, a record for the year. The moon will appear near the bright planet Saturn in the mid evening sky of Dec. 18, and on Dec. 26-27 the crescent moon will appear near the bright planet Jupiter in the southeastern dawn sky. You can last see the moon on Dec. 29, when it appears very low in the 6:45 a.m. southeastern dawn near the planet Mercury.

THE SOLAR SYSTEM – Our five nearest planetasy neighbors appear as points of light that shine steadily, unlike the bright night stars that twinkle. The brilliant planet Venus shines low in the southwestern dusk. (Dusk is the first hour after sunset.) The bright planet Mars can be seen in the early evening sky in the southeast. Mars has a distinctive tint when it is very bright and near the Earth. The planet Saturn creeps into the evening sky in December as its rising time drops from 9:30 p.m. early in the month to 7:15 p.m. at its end. The planet Jupiter is striking in the southeastern dawn in December. The planet Mercury is best seen in the first half of December, appearing below and to the left of Jupiter.

THE EVENING STARS – December is Orion's month as the year's brightest star group is prominent in the southeastern evening sky. Orion is easy to find with its belt of three moderately bright stars, equally spaced in a row. Late in the evening, Orion's belt points down and left to Sirius, the night's brightest star. High in the north is Cassiopeia, resembling an elongated letter "M." In the northwest in mid-evening you can see a bright twinkling star named Vega. Above and to the left of Vega is a huge starry cross, the star group Cygnus. The scoop of the Big Dipper may be seen low in the north-northeast. The scoop's two rightmost stars point up and left to the North Star, a modest star about halfway up in the northern sky.

ASTRONOMY ACTIVITIES – The FSU Planetarium's free public program for December is "Yule Skies Around the Globe," which will be presented the first three Sundays of the month at 4 and 7 p.m. The 50-minute program features a live tour of the evening skies at year's end, and the stars as seen from Scandinavia to New Zealand will be featured in the second part of the program. The Planetarium is located in Tawes Hall, Room 302, with free parking nearby. The free public programs begin promptly (no latecomers admitted), and persons may call 301-687-4270, ext. 2, for directions and further information.

The Cumberland Astronomy Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 16, at the LaVale Public Library. All sky gazers are invited.

Dr. Doyle writes this column for beginners who would like to identify the brightest starts, planets, and sights in their backyards. To ask questions, or get a beginner's guide to the night sky and/or a planetarium brochure, persons may call the FSU Planetarium at 301-687-4270, ext. 4. Doyle hosts "SkyWatch," a brief program on days of the week and sky sights that airs weekday evenings just before 9 p.m. on WFWM at 91.9 FM in western Garrett County and 96.3 FM in the Oakland area. The FSU Planetarium web site address is www.frostburg.edu/planetarium, and Doyle's e-mail address is rdoyle@frostburg.edu.

BRITISH THERMAL UNITS

by Dr. Thomas P. Sheahen

Q. I've noticed that the size of furnaces and air conditioners are advertised in terms of BTUs. What is a BTU, anyway?

BTU is shorthand for British Thermal Unit, a unit of energy. One BTU is the amount of heat needed to heat up one pound of water by one degree Fahrenheit.

The BTU is basically an obsolete unit of measure, and hardly anybody outside the United States uses it anymore. In particular, the British do not use it – they've switched over entirely to the Systeme Internationale (SI) set of units, formerly known as the MKS system (meter, kilogram, second). The conversion factor between the two systems of measurement is this: one BTU equals 1054 Joules. Another useful conversion factor is: one kiloWatt-hour (kWh) equals 3,413 BTU.

However, the BTU is still used in America, mostly in the heating and cooling industry. A typical small window air conditioner has a rating of 5000 BTU per hour, meaning that it withdraws heat from its surroundings at the rate of 5000 BTU in each hour of operation. A furnace rated at 50,000 BTU/hr delivers heat at that rate.

To get some idea of how fast BTUs get used up, think about taking a hot shower for 10 minutes. A typical shower head has a flow rate of 3 gallons per minute, and 1 gallon weighs 7 ½ pounds. Water comes out of the ground at about 50 °F, and for a shower that is fairly hot but not scalding it might be heated to 110 °F. So the water gets heated up by 60 °F. How many BTU goes into that 10-minute shower? It's just a matter of multiplying out the consecutive factors:

3 gal/min x 7.5 pounds/gal x 10 min x 60 °F x 1 BTU/pound-°F = 13,500 BTU

This is equal to just about 4 kWh, when you remember that 1 kWh = 3413 BTU. If you have an electric hot water heater and you're paying about 6¼ cents per kWh (as in Garrett County), that shower costs you about a quarter. Someone who lives in New York City, where electricity is about 20 cents per kWh, pays 80 cents.

Chances are, if people paid attention to these numbers, they wouldn't stay in the shower quite as long. But the cost is still far less than that of filling up a bathtub.

An air conditioner that cools at the rate of 5000 BTU/hr is only moving heat from one place to another, so it uses much less electricity. The Coefficient of Performance is the measure of an air conditioner's efficiency. There is a yellow tag that comes with any appliance stating its Energy Efficiency Rating (EER).

The unit of BTUs is also used (indirectly) in rating insulation. Insulation, of course, is intended to decrease heat flow, and so you prefer a higher thermal resistance. The R-value of insulation is associated with a certain number of BTUs per square foot allowed to pass through the insulation. A big roll of fiberglass batting that goes in an attic may have a rating of R-11 or R-22. Also, the building code in a community might specify that the roof insulation must be at least R-36 or some similar number. In other countries where BTUs are not the unit of heat, the exact same thickness of fiberglass batting would carry a different R-number for a different system of units.

Finally, there is the commercial-trade unit known as the ton. Don't confuse it with a ton of weight. One ton of air conditioning capacity equals 12,000 BTU/hour. A 3-ton A/C unit can adequately cool most normal homes.

Dr. Sheahen is a physicist who was educated at MIT. He lives at Deep Creek Lake and has taught physics at Garrett College. Persons wishing to submit questions for this column may e-mail them to newsroom@therepublicannews.com.

Northern Middle 7th Grade Class Noted For Supporting The Troops

Northern Middle School's seventh graders have been recognized by a national troop support organization for their overwhelming response in writing to military personnel. Friends of Our Troops, recently cited the seventh graders, who prepared the most "fan mail" of any middle school in the state of Maryland during the organization's 2004 Fan Mail for the Troops campaign.

"Mail from all over the nation is received at Friends of Our Troops headquarters in Fayetteville, N.C., where it is prepared into well over 1,000 packages that are sent out to every branch of the military Army, Navy, Marines, Air Force, and Coast Guard," explained G.B. Wiser, executive director of the organization.

Northern Middle School's campaign, which was coordinated by Bonnie Langan, was the top middle school in Maryland with 126 pieces of mail submitted for the 2004 campaign, and the seventh grade has received a certificate for its efforts.

"We've gotten great participation from our kids in this effort," Langan said. "They were very enthusiastic last year, and have worked even harder at it for the 2005 campaign. We just sent in 141 letters for this year's project, which is great considering we have only approximately 160 seventh graders eligible to participate.

"The students create their own rough drafts, then we work with them to create final letters for mailing. They can also include a photo of themselves if they wish, and ask the service person to write back to them. A number of our kids also made and decorated their own Christmas cards for the troops. Several 'thank-yous' were received from soldiers after last year's campaign."

Friends of Our Troops has been coordinating letter-writing campaigns connecting civilians with soldiers beginning with Vietnam Mail Call in 1965. Since then the organization has forwarded millions of pieces of mail to troops both home and abroad.

Individuals and families, schools, churches, 4-H clubs, Scout troops, other youth organizations, and veterans groups and auxiliaries are all eligible to participate in the organization's campaigns by preparing cards and letters. The organizations also accepts suggestions, from family members and friends, of soldiers' names and addresses to be added to the mailing list.

Full details are available on the Friends of Our Troops web site at www.troopfanmail.net.

Johnny Benson jumped three spots to finish 10th in the standings following a top-three finish in the Ford 200.

Todd Bodine finished the season with a flourish, winning three consecutive races, including Saturday's 200-mile truck race at Homestead. He led 74 laps, including the final 18, to take the victory over Jack Sprague, Johnny Benson, Mike Bliss and Bill Lester, whose fifth-place finish tied his career-best at Kansas earlier this year.

Can't catch Tony

Nextel Cup title won via conservative run in finale

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

NASCAR

Tony Stewart celebrates his second Nextel Cup title. Since winning the Brickyard 400 on Aug. 7, Stewart held the top spot in the standings every week but one. He didn't win any of the 10 Chase races, but he didn't need to in order to claim the championship.

Homestead, Fla.

Tony Stewart took a big step toward putting his tempestuous past behind him by keeping his cool from Daytona to Homestead, dominating the circuit for most of the season and taking his second Nextel Cup championship with a conservative 15th-place run in the season finale.

His triumph in the second year of NASCAR's Chase for the Nextel Cup playoff format also has the NASCAR world looking to the future – to Stewart's place in history.

His championship makes him only the second active Cup driver with multiple titles — Jeff Gordon is the other — and 14th overall in NASCAR history. Stewart also carries an Indy Racing League crown, four USAC titles and two other major championships in kart racing.

Is the 24-time Cup winner really one of the sport's all-time greats?

Mark Martin, who finished second to Greg Biffle by just inches in Sunday's Ford 400 at Homestead-Miami Speedway, answered with an emphatic "yes." And he said that's true whether Stewart has two champion's trophies or none.

"I don't believe the trophy makes the man," said Martin, who finished fourth in the Chase. "Tony Stewart, in my eyes, is the greatest race car driver I've watched drive in this era. A.J. Foyt might have been that when I was a little boy, but Tony Stewart is my driving hero."

Gordon, who finished ninth in the race and 11th in the points standings, agreed that Stewart is a cut above.

"Tony Stewart is a great driver," Gordon said. "He's capable of making a race team greater than it is. He brings a lot to the table and he's good at a lot of different types of race tracks, and [Stewart's team] provide good cars and equipment for him."

Gordon, who has four championships, also agreed that multiple titles are an indicator of true greatness.

"Once you win more than one it puts you in an elite group," Gordon said. "And [Stewart] is capable of winning more."

Gordon also acknowledged that Stewart is more mature and much better in his interactions with peers, the media and fans than he was in 2002, when his title run was dogged by controversy on and off the track.

"He finally started to get it," Gordon said. "He's a lot more relaxed, and I think that helps him mentally prepare for a race."

Stewart said he's happy with his accomplishments, much more proud of this title than the one he won in 2002, but he hasn't really thought about his place in history. He does know that he deeply appreciates the praise from his peers.

"That's a greater reward than any championship or trophy." Stewart said. "No matter what happens or how long I race or don't race, everything that happens from here is icing on the cake. I've done more in my life to this point than a lot of people have. I've been very lucky to do the things we've done. I just haven't looked that far into the future."

He and his crew did appear to be looking ahead in their race strategy for Sunday's race. They took the conservative approach, riding in mid-pack, steering clear of other drivers and letting faster drivers pass unchallenged. His 15th-place finish safely secured the title by 35 points over Biffle and Carl Edwards. Biffle is the official runner-up because he led Edwards by two in the tie-breaking category of race wins.

"We had to play it safe," Stewart's crew chief Greg Zipadelli said.

Said Stewart: "Everybody was courteous around me, and I was courteous with everybody."

The results of Sunday's race and the Chase in general should silence any criticism of the Chase format, whose critics say the 10-race playoff doesn't reflect season-long performance.

This year, it did without question.

Stewart was atop the standings every week but one since winning the Brickyard 400 on Aug. 7. His five race victories were second only to Biffle's six. Stewart led the circuit in top-five finishes with 17 and top-10 finishes with 25, as well as money won. Even before he collects the $5.8 million that goes to the champion, he had banked $6.8 million.

His closest challenger all season, Jimmie Johnson, entered the final race second in the standings and dodged disaster early in the race when Scott Wimmer spun right in front of him on Lap 15. But his luck ran out just before the halfway mark.

After moving into the top 10 from his 32nd starting spot, Johnson began to slow dramatically before settling in 28th and at the rear of the pack. Rather than stopping under green, he stayed on the track, hoping for a caution flag that would allow him to replace a questionable tire without losing laps.

But on Lap 126, the right rear tire blew on his No. 48 Chevrolet, sending him spinning into the wall. As he was driving back to the garage, crew chief Chad Knaus radioed to his driver, "Great job. Good season. Let's go home."

KEY MOMENTS IN THE RACE

Lap 26: Tony Stewart was forced to take evasive action when rookie Kyle Busch spun directly in front of his Chevrolet and the cars of Jamie McMurray and Mark Martin. Stewart, who was running 13th at the time, quickly slowed and steered his No. 20 near the Turn 4 apron to avoid Busch's crumpled racer. It was the sole anxious moment of the event for Stewart, who ran conservatively and teetered just outside of the top 10 much of the day.

"Obviously, with the 5 car spinning right off the bat, that was a little closer than I wanted," Stewart said. "It wasn't exactly what I wanted to see that early in the race. The good thing is he stayed up by the wall, and we were able to get by. The hard part was it was coming off the corner, and we were facing straight into the sun. When we got through that, you definitely felt like you had used up one of your nine lives right there."

Lap 128: Less than 12 laps after radioing to crew chief Chad Knaus that he felt the tire on his No. 48 going flat, Jimmie Johnson's championship hopes were dashed when his Chevrolet slammed the Turn 3 wall as he was about to be lapped by teammate Jeff Gordon. The culprit was a blown right-rear tire.

"I knew there was a problem," said Johnson, who started 32nd but climbed to ninth by Lap 91. "[The tire] blew out going down into Turn 3. It just exploded. When I took off on that restart, I started going backward. We were about three seconds off the pace and had just put new tires on."

Lap 253: Pit strategy played out when the caution waved for the final time for debris on the track. Stewart, who was running 15th and in danger of being lapped, chose to remain on the track to gain five bonus points for leading a lap. The plan was foiled when Dave Blaney also opted to stay out. Stewart, who never led, pitted on the following lap for four tires. Carl Edwards, who led the most laps, took four tires, while his Roush Racing teammate Greg Biffle chose two. When the race resumed seven laps later, Biffle lined up fourth, Edwards was 12th and Stewart was 15th.

EDWARDS

Edwards stood by his team's late-race strategy. "If we would have taken two tires, we might have won the race," Edwards said. "But I believed we could make it back up there. If we could had gotten another yellow, we would have annihilated them."

Lap 260: Biffle makes the race-winning pass with a daring three-wide move between Dave Blaney and Mark Martin to take the lead with eight laps remaining.

"They were sort of holding me up a bit," Biffle said, "so I kind of breathed the throttle just a little bit, and Blaney slid up and gave me just enough room to get my car between them. I actually just drug the brake pedal and never lifted. It was a phenomenal pass. I just did what I had to do to get by them."

Lap 267: In the dramatic final-lap duel, Biffle narrowly edged Roush Racing teammate Mark Martin to win the Homestead season finale for the second consecutive season. The victory was bittersweet for Biffle, who finished tied for second in the Chase with teammate Edwards, 35 points behind Stewart.

Greg Biffle won the Ford 400 for his Nextel Cup-leading sixth victory of the season and a second-place finish in the Chase.

Helicopter pilot dies in collision at track

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Homestead, Fla.

One helicopter pilot was killed after two helicopters crashed en route to pick up participants following Sunday's Ford 400 at Homestead-Miami Speedway.

One helicopter was taking off from the speedway's helipad shortly before 9 p.m. while another was attempting to land, Miami-Dade Fire-Rescue battalion chief Richard Martin said.

The pilot died after being airlifted to a Miami hospital, a spokeswoman for the Miami-Dade Police Department said. The pilot's identification was being withheld pending family notification.

SORENSON

Driver Reed Sorenson, who finished 28th in the Ford 400, was waiting to board one of the helicopters.

"I was the next one in line to go," Sorenson said. "I saw them hit. One went straight down and the other tried to land in the grass nearby. It took off part of his landing gear.

"I took off running because I thought parts were going everywhere. After seeing that, I don't think I'll ever fly a helicopter again."

HOMESTEAD NOTEBOOK

For second year in a row, Biffle's win fails to capture spotlight

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Homestead, Fla.

From a publicity standpoint, Greg Biffle sure picks the wrong races to win. For the second consecutive year he won the season-ending Ford 400 at Homestead-Miami Speedway only to see his win overshadowed by the Chase for the Nextel Cup. At least this time he was in the running for the title, and he might have been on the big stage afterward if not for some loose lug nuts at Texas Motor Speedway that left him 20th after running near the front for most of that race.

BIFFLE

He wound up second in the standings, tied with Roush Racing teammate Carl Edwards and just 35 points behind Stewart. (Biffle gets the runner-up spot because he leads Edwards in race victories.)

"I was hoping that we wouldn't lose by only 35, because then it would bring that Texas thing back in my head," Biffle said after beating Mark Martin to win by .017 seconds, a margin best measured in inches. "If it was 50 or more, it would've been a moot point, because it didn't matter. But I'm so thankful being second. That's pretty neat for us."

Once Jimmie Johnson dropped out of the race, Edwards was Stewart's closest challenger. He led the most laps (94) but finished fourth, capping off a remarkable first full season in which he won four races in Nextel Cup and five in Busch.

"We did almost everything," Edwards told reporters. "This was a fun season."

And he said he'll be back next year with the same positive attitude. "If we can maintain the same amount of luck, we'll be all right," he said. "We're going to have a good time next year. I can't wait."

Tire changer avoids serious injury

Richard Boyle, the rear tire changer on Scott Riggs' No. 10 Chevrolet, escaped serious injury when he was struck by Ricky Rudd's Ford during a pit stop on Lap 18.

Boyle, who was hit when Rudd's car was bumped by the No. 88 of Kevin Lepage, was treated and released from the track's care center.

The wreck also spoiled Rudd's hope of a fine finish in his last ride in the Wood Brothers' No. 21 Ford. The damage to his car doomed him to a 37th place finish.

Schrader joins Wood Brothers

Ken Schrader was introduced Friday as the new driver of the No. 21 Wood Brothers Ford. Schrader, who has a one-year contract, said the decision to drive for the Woods was at least partly sentimental. "I've always been a big fan of the 21 car and the Wood Brothers," he said, adding that he's also a big fan of David Pearson, who drove the car to 43 victories from 1972-'79

Regulation reconsidered

NASCAR's irregularly used impound procedures might be scrapped. Spokesman Jim Hunter said NASCAR tried to impose the rules, under which teams aren't allowed to work on cars after qualifying, to save teams money. But it has created a lot of down time at many tracks this year and confusion because the schedule varies from track to track.

Baldwin may unite with Yates

Tommy Baldwin's future plans apparently include a cooperative effort with Robert Yates Racing. It was announced last week that Baldwin, who has been Kasey Kahne's crew chief at Evernham Motorsports, was leaving that team.

Poultry Pals Among Live Guests At Veggie Lovers' Thanksgiving

by Katie Wilmeth
Capital News Service

POOLESVILLE – For many Thanksgiving Day diners, the ceremonial carving of the turkey is often, the main event.

But for those at the Poplar Spring Animal Sanctuary's Thanksgiving dinner today, the only turkeys in attendance will be dinner guests.

Opal, Gobbles, Elliot, Gertrude, Heather, and Sophie – all turkeys and all residents of Poplar Spring – will be the guests of honor at the animal sanctuary's ninth annual Thanksgiving dinner.

The dinner is designed to promote a vegan lifestyle – that's no meat, no dairy, and no cheese – by putting visitors up close and personal with the sanctuary's 200 rescued farm animals – one of only seven such sanctuaries for farm animals nationwide.

"We feel like we can really save more animals this way because we can only take so many," said Terry Cummings, who owns the 400-acre property with her husband. "It's just a drop in the bucket compared to how many are killed each year. These guys are really the ambassadors."

Saturday's event will start with dinner for the turkeys – a feast of chopped fruits, bread, kale, and pumpkin pie – followed by a vegan potluck for the expected 200 human guests.

"It's kind of the first time you experience these animals as living beings, as opposed to food on your plate," said Mindy Kursban, executive director and general counsel of the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine.

Kursban and about 25 committee members were at the sanctuary last Thursday to get ready for the event – which included cleaning out the turkey barn and spreading new hay.

The committee's mission – promoting alternatives to animal experimentation and encouraging disease prevention through a vegan or vegetarian diet – is in line with Poplar Spring's philosophy of compassion toward animals, said Kursban.

"It's nice to give thanks in a compassionate way," she said, "rather than to take a life to give thanks for yours."

In addition to eating with the animals, the chance to sample vegan dishes is another key to convincing people to choose a plant-based diet, said Cummings.

"I like Thanksgiving so much more as a vegan," said Susanne Forte, another Physicians Committee volunteer. "I think when you're a vegan you just enjoy food so much more. Everything is a treat and it's fun to come up with new ways to cook dishes."

Cummings, who left a job as a National Zoo veterinary technician to launch the sanctuary in 1996, expects about 150 vegan dishes to line the buffet tables Saturday, including her pumpkin cheesecake, vegan-ized mashed potatoes (made with soy butter), and a soy-substitute turkey with puff pastry and mushroom gravy topping.

All animals at Poplar Spring have names, distinct personalities, and a harrowing tale of rescue, including the turkeys.

Opal, for example, was found by two motorists on a highway in Virginia being chased by her owner after she had escaped from a slaughterhouse.

Gobbles, Elliot, and Gertrude were saved from a District Chinese restaurant where they were being fattened up for the menu.

Heather was discovered outside a Gaithersburg restaurant, where the owner left her after a Thanksgiving promotion.

And Sophie found her way to Poplar Spring when a local employer was giving frozen turkeys as a Christmas bonus. Rather than accept the gift, one employee donated the turkey from a local free-range farm in order to save her turkey from being killed.

Although many guests at Saturday's event will already be vegetarian or vegan, Cummings hopes feasting with the turkeys may change a few carnivorous minds.

"That's one of the reasons we wanted to do the sanctuary, because for us it was meeting the animals that changed us," said Cummings. "Meeting these guys would really help them think about the animals that they're eating."

MSDE Awarded Federal Grant Of $5.7 Million

The Maryland State Department of Education has been awarded a three-year, $5.7 million grant from the U.S. Department of Education's Institute of Education Sciences.

Maryland's grant will be used to design and implement a statewide longitudinal data system. The Institute of Education Sciences grant program is focused on assisting states to generate and use accurate and timely data to meet reporting requirements, support decision-making, and aid in education research.

MSDE will develop the Maryland Longitudinal Data System (MLDS) in partnership with the Center for Technology in Education at the Johns Hopkins University. The MLDS will be used to assist Maryland educators and administrators in making decisions that will improve instruction and strengthen student achievement.

"This project will allow us to track efforts on an individual student basis," said Nancy S. Grasmick, state superintendent of schools. "Maryland is committed to using information in a manner that works best for each of our students."

The first year of the project will focus on integrating information for students with disabilities. Nearly 60 percent of Maryland schools that did not make Adequate Yearly Progress targets under the federal No Child Left Behind Act fell short because of the lack of progress by students with disabilities.

Grover (Russ) Whitehurst, director of the Institute of Education Sciences, announced the new grant awards. Maryland is one of 14 states receiving a grant under the program, with funds ranging from $1.5 million to $5.8 million. The other states are Alaska, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Florida, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Wisconsin.

WHAT'S THE RUSH?

An eye-opening survey was recently released by HouseValues Inc. that illustrates how much time is involved in the purchase of a home, right from the very moment that the idea of moving has been planted.

Would you believe that the survey found that buyers, like sellers, frequently take up to four years formulating their needs and wishes before actually initiating a transaction? Obviously, this doesn't include people who are suddenly thrust into the home buying market because of job relocation, family needs, or other motivations, but the figures apply to most consumers.

Once the decision to move forward has been made, almost half of buyers take six months considering types of homes and neighborhoods before they ever look through the listings. So the most surprising result of this survey is that consumers select a real estate agent in only one to three days!

The reasons they turn to a professional are threefold: 1. They want full access to all available listings, 2. They need help and advice in negotiations, and 3. They need someone to handle all the paperwork and legalities of the transaction.

So take your time as you consider a decision as important as buying a home. Do some research on the Internet, keep reading informative articles in local publications, and then make your choice based on honesty and trust. Happy house hunting!

If you'd like to buy a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call today!

Mt. Storm UM Church To Host Trim A Tree Prog.

Mt. Storm United Methodist Church will hold its annual Trim A Tree program this Sunday, Nov. 27, at 3 p.m. Sponsored by the Mt. Storm Area Churches, the program will feature guest speakers and special music.

Bows for the event can be purchased for $5 each in honor of or in memory of U.S. veterans and active duty military personnel. The bows will be placed on a tree located outside the church. A tree lighting ceremony will be held and refreshments served following the program.

Proceeds will go toward the local Toys for Tots campaign and food pantry. Those attending the Trim A Tree program are encouraged to bring a nonperishable item to donate to the pantry.

In addition, the Antioch Bell Choir will perform at the church on Sunday, Dec. 4, at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served in the fellowship hall after the concert.

For more information or to order a bow, persons may call 304-693-7723, 304-693-7556, or 304-693-7208.

Annual Bazaar Slated At Elk Garden School

The Elk Garden Library will hold its second annual Christmas Bazaar on Saturday, Dec. 3, from 10 am. until 4 p.m. The bazaar will be held in the Elk Garden School gym, and admission is free.

This is a fundraising project for the library, and the proceeds will be used to sponsor the Elk Garden School Super Star Students. The Super Star Students are selected every six weeks and replace the Student of the Month program.

In addition, other student-related programs will be funded with the monies earned at the bazaar.

During the festivities, there will be door prizes, cake walks, pictures with Santa Claus, and food.

The Kitzmiller Assembly of God Church Ladies Group will hold a spaghetti dinner during the bazaar.

Entertainment will take place with United Contemporary Christian Vocal Group appearing on stage at 11 a.m. Also, the Keyser Middle School concert band will perform at 1 p.m.

Presently, there is still space for rent at $7 per table. Those tables already rented will display an array of crafts, baked goods, and a variety of items for sale. Those interested in renting table space may call library member Jenny Savage at 304-446-5506.

Buckwheat Cake Sausage Dinner Slated In Eglon

A buckwheat cake and sausage dinner will be held Saturday, Dec. 3, at the Maple Spring Church of the Brethren in Eglon, W.Va. All proceeds will benefit the men's fellowship.

Tickets are $6 for adults, $3 for children ages 5 to 10, and no charge for children under the age of 5.

Mary, Mary

by James Patterson

Review by Terri Schlichenmeyer

c. 2005, Little Brown, $27.95, 400 pages

Submitted for your approval: the three most potentially volatile words in the English language: "I'm just kidding."

"I'm just kidding" means either that the utterance was possibly offensive and the speaker didn't mean it, or worse, that he or she meant every syllable and simply wants to disarm you with charm.

Teasing, no matter how light, can quickly turn to taunting. In Mary, Mary, the new thriller by James Patterson, taunting quickly turns deadly.

It must've been kismet that FBI agent Alex Cross was in California on vacation with his Nana Mama and his kids. The cell phone was off, as was Alex's beeper. Who, after all, wants to be bothered at Disneyland? But the FBI was able to reach Cross nonetheless. Could he just take a quick peek at a case that the L.A. police department was trying to solve?

L.A. Times columnist Arnold Griner was used to getting crank e-mails, but the ones he got from someone named Mary Smith were horrifying. Mary described violent murders in sneering detail. She wrote about how she followed the victim and became invisible. She taunted and hinted and promised that there would be more killings.

She wasn't joking.

The victims list reads like a Who's Who in Hollywood, and the murders were especially gruesome. The computers that Mary Smith was using were scattered around the city, and no e-mail account could be verified. Little or no evidence was left at the crime scenes. Los Angeles was in a panic, but the LAPD obviously didn't want the FBI's help on this case.

That was fine with Alex Cross. He had problems of his own to deal with: His ex was suing for full custody of his youngest son in Seattle, his older kids missed him back in D.C., Nana was having health issues, and Cross's girlfriend was seeing someone else. It was a bad time to be working with a police department that didn't want him, in a city where he didn't want to be.

But something about this case teased Cross's mind and he couldn't let it go. Female serial killers are rare. Could, Mary Smith be a man? Then the LAPD arrests a woman named Mary Wagner, and her profile fits everything in the case.

To Cross, it fits a little too well.

I love a book that plays with my mind in many different ways, and Mary, Mary doesn't disappoint. Author James Patterson is the master of quick-moving novels, in which clues pop up almost on every page and nothing is insignificant or can be ignored. If you've read other Patterson books with Agent Alex Cross as a character, you know that Cross is smart, thorough, and willing to bend the rules – exactly the kind of cop you want in a thriller like this one.

You're going to see a lot of people carrying this book around because they won't want to stop reading it. Once you start it, you won't want to stop either.

And I'm not kidding.

A Soldier's View

We have actually caught people placing roadside bombs by changing tactics. It has a demoralizing effect on them, as they never know what to expect from us.

Our biggest threat here right now is roadside bombs (IEDs, or Improvised Explosive Devices). They make them out of anything. They will take a piece of ordnance (usually an artillery shell), wire it up with some sort of timer or wire and place it near the road. They disguise it as trash or boxes, or they bury it. They wait for the vehicle to pass by, then detonate it, and flee the area.

Our other threats are snipers and small arms fire. Sometimes it's a mixture of all three. A lot of times, they will place a fake IED, such as newspapers in a bag, car parts, etc. They place these items, or leave them out in the open, and watch what we do; so we try and do something different every time.

Another thing we had to adjust to was ordinary life. We live pretty comfortably. The base we are at was actually an Iraqi airbase. We live in one of the structures. It's not like back home, but it's better than living in tents. I share a room with three other soldiers; we have air conditioning and wireless Internet in our rooms. We have to walk a short distance to take a shower. Water conservation is big here. Every drop is trucked in, so two- to three-minute showers are necessary. We have a gym and chow hall.

We are extremely lucky to have the Internet. Many use Internet phone services to call home, as this is a lot cheaper than using calling cards at payphones. It's nice to be able to come back from a mission and be able to call home. It's nice to be able to talk to loved ones, but it's also tough. What we are experiencing over here is hard to explain to people never in combat. When I talk to my wife, we try to talk about our son and things going on at home. Also, we can't talk about the missions we are on. I try and e-mail home at least twice a day to let her know that I am OK and everything is fine.

Mail here is great. Every day when the mail is delivered, soldiers are outside or help unload the truck to see if they got anything. A smile on someone with a package, and a frown and "maybe tomorrow" for the ones that don't get one. Mail is extremely important here. Even though you can get countless e-mails and phone calls, a letter from home really brightens one's day.

Well, I know this is a lot – sorry – I tried to write what came to mind, I was never a very good writer. Feel free to ask more questions

Thanks,
Bryan

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

I can't believe that a couple days before Thanksgiving Caitlin and Meredith put away their flip flops and looked for socks. Of course, we did have a little snow early this morning. But I guess this means winter is finally here in Bittinger.

We had a slightly white Halloween, except that more snow expected for Thanksgiving may be enough for a real, old-fashioned holiday and a horse-drawn sleigh to Grandmother's house. You know, like the song we learned at school for Thanksgiving, "Over the river and through the woods to Grandmother's house we go."

Speaking of horse, when I was about 13 years old my younger siblings and a couple of visiting cousins staged a fake Thanksgiving fox hunt, which is a real tradition in some parts of Maryland and Virginia. Our hunt did not look like the real thing, with three bareback pinto ponies and only Carol and I who remotely resembled real fox hunters, with saddles and our show outfits. The rest of the field consisted of hard hats and jackets, and cousin Courtney was lucky enough to wear black knee-high boots. Our hounds were not quite fox hounds, but a larger beagle type dog. Our hound was our farm dog referred to as Garrett Hog Hound. We did not sight any fox, but we just galloped across the fields, and those who could jumped anything we encountered.

Speaking of big hunting events, I am sad to face another deer hunting season. Our area sounds like Iraq. I am even afraid to drive on roads around the woods. The death toll of our Bittinger dogs over my lifetime has been very high. Still no one has spotted our white stag for years. Seems like half of Bittinger has seen it except for me. Rodney has a good picture of it standing in his yard.

My mother, Ruth DiPaolo, spent eight days in the hospital and is now home recuperating. She is doing very little and listening (finally) to the doctors, which is somewhat unlike her.

Gregory Whittemore and his future bride Eva paid an early Thanksgiving visit, which included a bachelor party hosted by local guy friends. A bridal shower is planned in Eva's Kentucky hometown next week. The wedding will be in late December on St. Thomas Island.

The 4-H buckwheat and pancake supper held at the Bittinger fire hall last Friday night seemed to be a success, with all the 4-H'ers doing an excellent job of serving and, of course, the adults helping with the cooking and cleaning up

Emmanuel Lutheran Church held a Thanksgiving luncheon following the church service on Sunday, which was enjoyed and well attended

Claire and her West Virginia friends arrived home last Friday night for their Thanksgiving break. Torrey Poholsky is to arrive home Tuesday night and our University of Maryland students, Robbie and Blakely Glotfelty, will arrive Wednesday. Matthew Bass arrived home Monday night a little early.

Rodney and Marci and sons Darryl and Elliot attended the Maryland-Boston College football game Saturday at College Park. The Southerly family and my Claire will attend the football game at WVU on Thanksgiving night.

WARM THE CHILDREN

Providing New Warm Winter Clothing for Needy Children

The Republican newspaper and the GWFC Civic Club of Oakland are now engaged in the ninth year of Warm the Children. The program provides new winter clothing and footwear for Garrett County children in need. Because the program is a function of the newspaper and of volunteers, every penny donated goes toward the purchase of these items. The following individuals and/or organizations donated to the fund over the past week.

Red Cross House Tours To Include Hinebaugh Home

HINEBAUGH HOME TO BE AMONG THOSE ON ARC HOLIDAY TOUR

The 14th annual Home for the Holidays House Tours, hosted by the Western Potomac Chapter of the American Red Cross, will take place on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 2 and 3. Ticket-holders will have the opportunity to tour local homes on Dec. 2 from 4 until 9 p.m. and on Dec. 3 from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Five houses will be on this year's circuit, including the home of Robert and Ruth Hinebaugh, located at 18 East Liberty Street, Oakland.

The Hinebaugh house, which is beside the parking lot for the Masonic Temple and across the street from the Cabin Fever antique shop, has the unique distinction of most likely being ordered from a Sears and Roebuck catalog in the early 1900s. It was built in 1907.

Much of the original styling remains on the structure, including the original cedar shakes. Apparently the house was remodeled in the 1950s, with wood paneling installed inside. It has since been restored to the original painted walls and wide trim.

The backyard was almost entirely taken up by a large pine tree, but it has been removed. In its place is a gazebo and deck area. The yard was also landscaped with a wide variety of flowers.

Tour guests will find the house decorated with a wide variety of Christmas lights and ornaments for the tour. On the sun porch will be a display of different sized trees and an array of old-fashioned toys.

Tickets for the tours, including all ages, are $8 in advance and $10 on the days of the event. They are on sale at the following pharmacies: Proudfoot's, Gregg's, and Deep Creek, as well as Arrowhead Market. All proceeds from the ticket sales will go to the local chapter of the American Red Cross.

The directions to the various homes will be printed on the back of the ticket, and directional signs will be placed at intersections to help guests find the locales. A variety of items donated by local businesses will be raffled off at each location.

Guests will be asked to remove their shoes before going into the homes, and no photographing or videotaping will be allowed.

The other homes on this year's tour are those of Rhoda and Ralph Keefer, Kevin and Cindy Heselbach, Dan and Bobbi Fornear, and Chuck and Linda Wieland.

Addison Historical Society To Conduct Annual House Tour

The Old Petersburg/Addison Historical Society will hold its annual Christmas House tour in the village of Addison, Pa., on Saturday, Dec. 3, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 4, from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Four homes and Addison's one-room schoolhouse will be highlighted this year.

"Different styles of architecture and decoration will great you at each location," said a society spokesperson. "There will be music and storytelling at the one-room school and some of the houses."

Tickets are $10 for adults and $2 for children. For more information, persons may call 814-395-5584 or 814-395-5291.

In conjunction with the tour, an art show and sale featuring the work of local artisans will be held in the community room of the Methodist Church. In addition to art work, crafts and holiday greenery will be available for purchase.

The women of the Methodist and Lutheran churches will also have lunches available at the Methodist church each day during tour hours.

Applications Accepted For Teacher Award

The Maryland Higher Education Commission (MHEC) is accepting applications for the Sharon Christa McAuliffe Memorial Teacher Education Award.

The program is open to undergraduate students with at least 60 semester credit hours, graduate students, or teachers who are currently certified in a non-critical shortage area. Applicants must be Maryland residents and must be enrolled at a four-year Maryland college or university as a full-time (12+ credits per semester) or part-time (6-11 credits per semester), degree-seeking undergraduate student; or full-time (9+ credits per semester) or part-time (6-8 credits per semester), degree-seeking graduate student.

The award amount will be based on the applicant's enrollment and housing status. The dollar amount of this award may not exceed $17,000. Students who are not funded initially will be placed on a waiting list. Funds may not be available to award all eligible students.

Applicants must be enrolled in an approved teacher education program in a critical shortage field. Critical shortage fields change yearly and are listed on the Sharon Christa McAuliffe Memorial Teacher Education Award application.

Applicants must have a minimum, cumulative grade point average of 3.0, except for those students who received an undergraduate degree on or before Dec. 31, 1985.

If the applicant is a public or private school teacher, additional documentation will be necessary. Public school teachers are required to submit the application to the office of the superintendent of the school system in which they are employed and be nominated by the superintendent.

Private school teachers are required to submit this application to their supervisory authority. MHEC must receive completed nominations and all student applications postmarked by Dec. 31. All applicants are ranked and selected by a committee of educators from the Maryland State Department of Education using objective criteria.

Complete guidelines and applications are available at the MHEC web site www.mhec.state.md.us or by calling the Maryland Higher Education Commission at 410-260-4565 or 800-974-1024.

Officials Approve DCL Amendments For Clubhouses

The Garrett County commissioners on Tuesday unanimously approved three new amendments to the Deep Creek Watershed Zoning Ordinance. The step will allow commercial amenities associated with public golf courses to be constructed, by special exception, in all districts.

William Franklin of Thousand Acres Developers Inc. (TAD) initially proposed the amendments. The company wants to build an 18-hole golf course with a clubhouse, restaurant, lounge, and pro shop along the northern shore of Green Glade Cove at Thousand Acres. That area, however, is zoned residential.

Golf courses are currently permitted in residential areas, but without an ordinance change the company would not have been able to build any commercial amenities.

A public hearing on the amendments was held two weeks ago. The commissioners heard and read concerns from the Planning Commission, Deep Creek Lake Property Owners Association, and several Thousand Acre residents before, during, and after the hearing. A majority of the Thousand Acre property owners indicated that the course [illegible] commercial aspects would negatively affect their quiet, residential setting.

The commissioners stressed on Tuesday that the new policy pertained to the entire watershed. Commissioner Ernie Gregg said their approval of the amendments was in no way an endorsement of the TAD

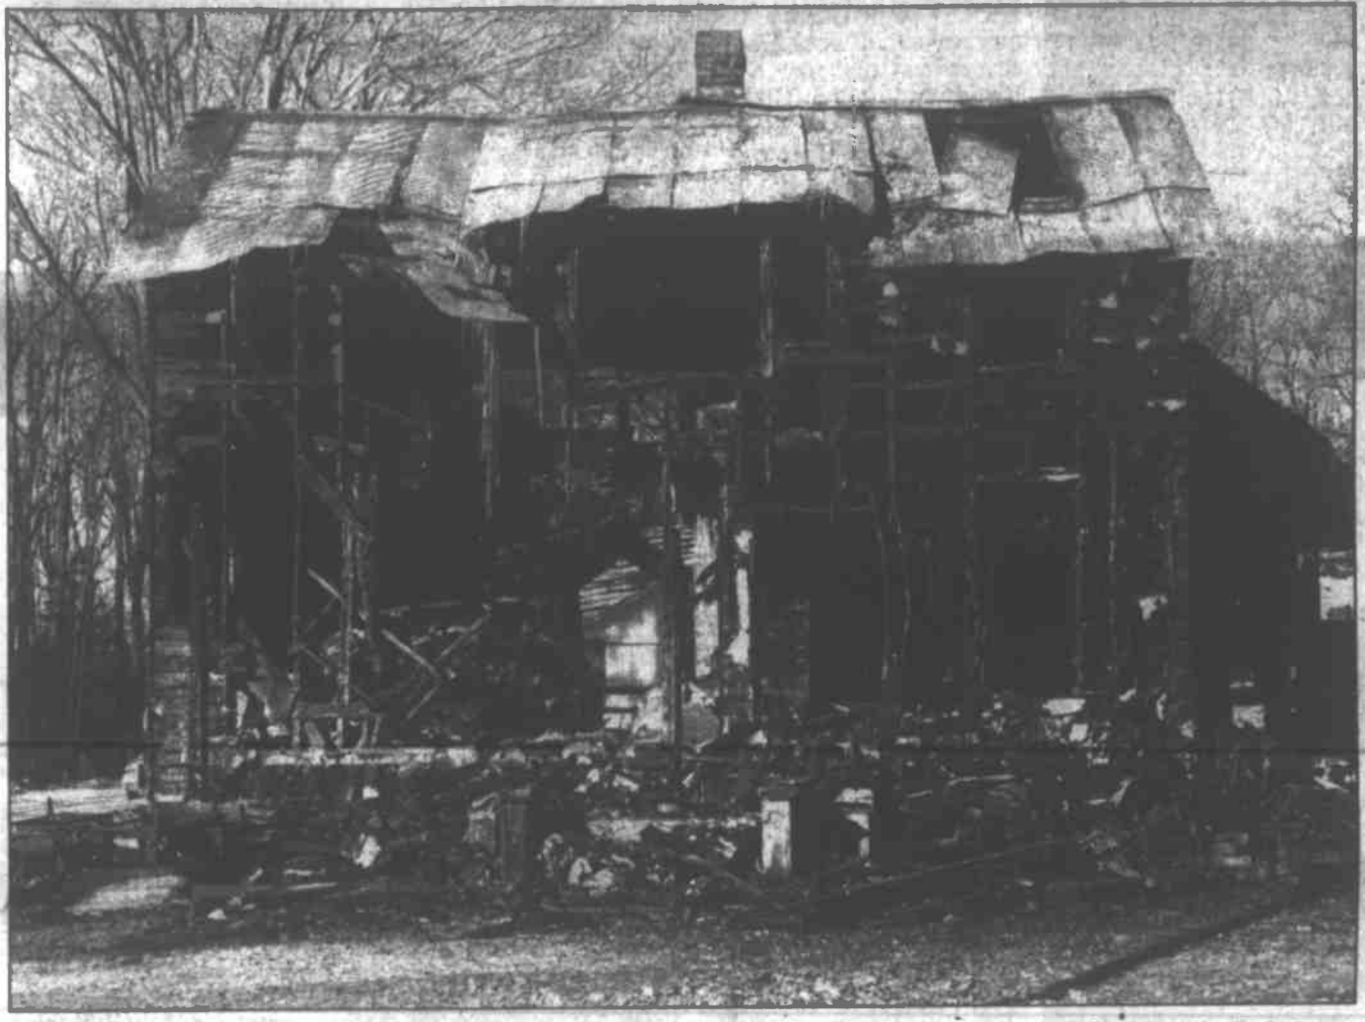
Local Lawmakers Slate Legislative Forum For Public

Senator John Hafer and Delegate George Edwards will conduct their annual pre-legislative public meeting on Saturday, Dec. 10, at 10 a.m. in the auditorium at Garrett College.

The public is encouraged to attend the meeting to voice their concerns and provide input for the legislative session.

The lawmakers will also discuss issues the Garrett County commissioners have for the upcoming General Assembly session.

The League of Women Voters of Garrett County, cosponsors of the event, will have refreshments available before and after the forum.



THE CAUSE OF THE FIRE that destroyed this two-story, wood-frame house along U.S. Rt. 40 just east of Grantsville last Thursday evening remains under investigation by the Maryland State Fire Marshal's Office. Losing virtually everything in the 9:24 p.m. blaze were residents Rhea June George and her 19-year-old son, Bruce A. Dirden, who were not at home at the time of the fire. Responding to the scene were over 50 volunteers from the Grantsville, Salisbury (Pa.), Eastern Garrett, Bittinger, and Meyersdale (Pa.) fire departments, along with the county air cascade vehicle housed at Deep Creek VFC, and the Northern Rescue Squad. There were no injuries reported. The loss was estimated to be $65,000 for the structure, and $25,000 for contents. Photo by Lisa Broadwater.

Single-Vehicle Crash Seriously Injures Motorist

A single-vehicle crash yesterday morning on Interstate 68 seriously injured a Friendsville woman, who reportedly was on her way home after completing a night shift nursing assignment at a Cumberland hospital. Maryland State Police troopers assigned to the McHenry barrack investigated the 7:20 a.m. accident.

Teresa Nicole Fisher, 33, was westbound at the 6-mile marker when she apparently fell asleep at the wheel of her 1997 Chevrolet Cavalier, which drifted into the center median and struck a guard rail abutment head-on. The guardrail tore through the sedan's engine compartment and partially pushed the dashboard into the passenger compartment.

The Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad transported Fisher to Cumberland Memorial Hospital. The Friendsville Volunteer Fire Department assisted at the scene.

In other state police accident investigations, a Sunday morning mishap on Maple Street in Friendsville resulted in injuries for an Accident woman.

Kristin Rose Lander, 22, was traveling east shortly before 8:30 a.m. when the right side tires on her 1996 Jeep Cherokee went off the roadway and sheared off a utility pole before overturning once and coming to rest on its tires.

Lander was transported to Garrett Memorial Hospital by the Northern Rescue Squad, which was assisted on the scene by the Friendsville VFD. No charges were filed by state police.

Annual Rotary Project Under Way; One Major Change Noted

The Rotary Christmas Project is once again in progress, and the gifts are scheduled for delivery on Saturday, Dec. 10, with one major change regarding the food portion of the gift. This year the food boxes will be replaced with a $50 gift certificate to Foodland, according to Daryl Walters, president of the Oakland Rotary Club.

"It was a difficult decision to replace the food boxes with food certificates, but Rotary had run into space constraints in which to set up the food boxes," said Walters. "Fortunately, with the continued support and generosity of the management and employees at Simon Pearce, the assembly of gift bags is not a problem.

"In addition, we are starting a pilot project to match high school students with senior citizens in order to assist with shopping and other needs. The support of the Garrett County community, the volunteers, and the donors has been incredible."

Gifts need to be returned to the Rotary trees by Tuesday, Dec. 6. Delivery will begin at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 10, at Simon Pearce.

According to Walters, 250 families with more than 500 children will receive gifts, and close to 100 senior citizens will receive food certificates.

Those with questions may contact Walters at 301-334-7601.

Garrett Choral Society To Present 'There Is A Flower' Christmas Concert

The Garrett Choral Society, under the direction of Julie Turrentine, will present its annual Christmas concert, this year titled "There Is a Flower," on Saturday, Dec. 10, and Sunday, Dec. 11. There will be two concerts on Saturday, at 2 and 7:30 p.m., and one on Sunday at 2 p.m. The concerts are being held at St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Oakland.

The concert will include a wide variety of choral music, with an international flavor. In addition to English, the group will also sing certain pieces in Latin, Spanish, and Hebrew. The program will open with the Hallelujah Chorus from Mount of Olives by Ludwig Van Beethoven.

One half of the program will be the choral group's presentation of Antonio Vivaldi's Gloria. The work involves a number of solos, and will also highlight flutist Susan Peterson. Vocal soloists for Gloria are Carolyn Deverse, Betsy Dempsey, Wayne Callis, and Karen Winkelvoss. The accompanist for the Garrett Choral Society, on both piano and organ, is Muriel Franc.

Another feature of the concert will be the Garrett Brass, a brass choir. The group will accompany the chorus in the singing of some Christmas carols, during which the audience will be invited to join in. The brass players will also present some selections of their own.

Local musician Ellinor Benedict will accompany the group on cello on two selections. The popular Carmina Banana Singers, all members of the Society, will present two numbers, a 16th century Christmas carol and a Calypso tune.

Other vocal soloists in the program are Dave Callis, Don Sincell, Mark Franc (on Saturday), and Mary McEwen (on Sunday).

Tickets for the program are $10 for adults and $5 for children under 12. They are available from any Choral Society member, or at Gregg's Pharmacy in Oakland.

County Decides Not To Pay More For Ellis Property

The Board of Garrett County Commissioners has decided not to grant a Bumble Bee Road resident's request for additional money for his property. Located near the Garrett County Airport, the Floyd Ellis property is the last one needed by the county for a runway extension project.

"The board is entrusted with the review, approval, and expenditure of public funds, and this has to be kept in mind with all decisions with the expenditure of county money," County Administrator Monty Pagenhardt wrote in a letter to Ellis, informing him of the commissioners' decision.

As reported last week, Ellis had asked the commissioners for $185,000 so that he could purchase another home, also located along Bumble Bee Road. His current residence is a 728-square-foot mobile home located on 1.45 acres. The county's most recent offer for the property was $161,626. That offer included $100,226 for the property itself, plus $61,400

Wal-Mart Traffic Signal To Begin Operation Tuesday

The traffic signal on Garrett Highway at the entrance to Wal-Mart is slated to become fully operational on Tuesday, Dec. 6. During off-peak late-night hours, the lights will change to a flashing mode.

In advance of Tuesday, the traffic lights are slated to begin flashing today (weather permitting), as a minimum 72-hour "acclimation" period is required by the Maryland State Highway Administration to allow motorists to become cognizant of a new signal's forthcoming operation.

The new signal was installed during the summer after state traffic counts confirmed increasing traffic levels on Garrett Highway at the entrance to the store, according to SHA District 6 traffic engineer K.C. Keith, who noted that the number of vehicles making turns into and out of the store parking lot was posing safety concerns.

The signal would have likely been made operational earlier than this week, but a private contractor's error placed the posts from which the lights hang too close to some overhead power lines. The power lines were moved recently, allowing the operation of the lights to proceed.

Wal-Mart paid for both the installation of the light and the moving of the power lines, according to the state traffic engineer. The store was "very cooperative" throughout the entire process, Keith said.

GC Officials Hear Staff Reports; Most Residents Paying "Flush Fee"

The Garrett County commissioners held their bimonthly staff meeting on Tuesday, hearing reports from 15 county departments and agencies. Among the topics discussed were the "flush fee," ClosetMaid, the Maryland Energy Assistance Program, the Nutrient Management Program, and the Great American Smokeout.

Financial Services

Director Wendy Yoder, Financial Services, updated the commissioners on the $30 Bay Restoration Fee, better known as the "flush fee," for septic tank owners.

"With our initial billing on Oct. 1, we mailed 9,719 bills that covered 10,335 users," she said. The total amount billed was $310,050.

As of Tuesday, the county has received $226,903 (7,563 users) in payments, and has adjusted $7,545 (252 users), leaving an uncollected balance of $75,602 (2,520 users), according to Yoder.

She said the adjustment figure included charges deducted because of uninhabitable dwellings, properties that use "porta-pottys" instead of having a septic system (such as hunting cabins), and hardship exemptions. To date, 104 financial hardship exemptions have been approved.

"In summary," she said, "we have collected and accounted for 76 percent of total bills initially mailed."

The director added that 246 septic tank owners around Deep Creek Lake were missed in the billing process. A map showed that their properties were within the Sanitary District boundary and were served by public water or sewer, when in fact they were not. As a result, neither Public Utilities nor the county had billed them for the flush fee.

"We will be sending those bills out in the very near future," Yoder said.

She added that the governor's office may issue a press release to reiterate the reason why the Bay Restoration Fee was created and to stress that it is a state initiative and not a county one.

Economic Development

Frank Shap, information technology coordinator for Economic Development, told the commissioners that Director Jim Hinebaugh was at a two-day meeting at ClosetMaid headquarters in Ocala, Fla. A representative from the Maryland Department of Business and Economic Development (DBED) accompanied him.

They met with ClosetMaid officials to examine the various commitments that have been made between DBED and the home-storage manufacturing company. Shap said ClosetMaid could begin

Friendsville Class Sends Packages To Local Troops

Second grade students at Friendsville Elementary School are participating in an ongoing service learning project that benefits area soldiers now serving in Iraq and Iran.

Students in Judy Livengood's class have been gathering supplies and doing a variety of projects for the soldiers, who are all from the community of Friendsville. One is also Livengood's son.

The project was implemented by Stephanie Kryglik, an intern from Frostburg State University.

Many of the students' parents also became involved when homemade cookies and various supplies were needed.

As a class, students participated in a variety of activities. They learned about their character education traits, giving and sharing, by creating a bulletin board full of turkeys thanking the troops for what they do for them through the daily giving of themselves in the various activities.

The students also learned and practiced the letter writing process by writing letters to the soldiers. They completed the pre-writing step as a group by creating a list of questions and telling statements. The students then drafted their own letters. They revised them, edited, and finally published their final copies. During this process, they also learned the proper format to use for composing a friendly letter.

The students posed for pictures that were then placed in a book so that the soldiers could put faces to names.

When the letters were completed, the children learned about artistic poems. After learning about this style of poetry, the students learned about adjectives and used many of these describing words to create poems for each of the soldiers. They used the title, "My Hero Is..." and then wrote their troops' names and poems below.

The students were recently introduced to journal writing, and spent a lot of time writing during the project. They reflected on what they were doing and why they were doing it. One entry the students wrote was about which branch of the military, if any, they would like to join. Previously, they had learned about each branch, and the duties involved in working for the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, or Coast Guard.

When the children began to pack their boxes for the troops, they created a bar graph to help them compare what was brought in to send over to Iraq or Iran.

The children also took a trip to the post office in order to mail their packages.

"The second grade students at Friendsville Elementary were excited about this project, and learned so much along the whole process," Livengood said. "They developed a deep appreciation for our country and our service men and women. The students plan on sending out cards, letters, and packages throughout the year."

SENDING PILLOWS TO KUWAIT – Second graders at Yough Glades Elementary School in Adrienne Ingram's and Amy Harvey's classes are celebrating Christmas this year by using the character traits of caring and giving. The students made pillows to send overseas to the troops in Kuwait. The students were very excited with this project, said Harvey. In the Christmas cards that will be sent with the pillows, many of the students wrote, "Remember the kids at home are cheering you on." The students are pictured above with their pillows.

Man Charged After Collision Near Grantsville

A Grantsville man was charged after a two-truck collision on the exit ramp from Interstate 68 to Chestnut Ridge Road last Wednesday, Nov. 23, according to Maryland State Police troopers. The other motorist involved in the mishap sustained injuries.

Shortly before 7:30 a.m. Fenton Lowery, 63, of Grantsville was exiting the highway when he reportedly took his eyes off the road to change the radio station. His 1997 Ford dump truck then drifted off the road to the right and struck the rear of a 2005 International truck tractor that was stopped on the shoulder.

The International's driver, Cletus Conway, 61, Cresson, Pa., was transported to Cumberland Memorial Hospital by Northern Rescue Squad. The Grantsville Volunteer Fire Department also responded to the scene.

Lowery was charged with negligent driving.

O'Haver Receives Award From Hospice Network

Mildred O'Haver, patient care and bereavement volunteer for Hospice of Garrett County, recently received the "You Make a Difference" Award from the Hospice Network of Maryland. This award is given to individuals by their hospice for extraordinary commitment to their hospice patients throughout the year.

Jane Sealing, director of bereavement, commented that her first introduction to O'Haver was when her mom was a hospice patient. After that process, O'Haver decided to join the Hospice team, took the volunteer training, and became a patient care volunteer. She later began to work with bereavement. She has been with Hospice for six years.

Ida Maust, volunteer coordinator, said that even though O'Haver is a full-time employee at the Department of Social Services, she finds time for her Hospice patients. "She is always ready to go when needed," said Maust. "One night she was called for a patient visit and she left in her socks without shoes. She will do anything. She cleans, does dishes, takes care of babies, and cooks."

According to Brenda Butscher, executive director, O'Haver is an outstanding patient care volunteer and bereavement volunteer.

"She is a very special person who gives her time and energy to our patients and their families," said Butscher. "Caring for others is just part of her life. Her son was seriously hurt in an automobile accident and is handicapped. She cares for him and has taught him how to take care of himself in many ways. She helps the community in many ways too. She also volunteers at her church, the Cancer Society, and has the time to attend her granddaughter's volleyball games."

"The Hospice Team loves Millie. We are fortunate to have her because she truly makes a difference in the lives of so many people."

Hospice of Garrett County serves patients and families facing life-limiting illness in Garrett County. For more information about the hospice concept or available services, persons may call 301-334-5151.

Civic Club Selects Bobbie Henderson As 2005 Club Woman Of The Year

By a unanimous vote of the nomination committee, the Civic Club of Oakland has named Bobbie Henderson as the 2005 Club Woman of the Year. She was presented with the award this week.

In their decision-making process, the nominating committee, the members of which were Elaine Brickett, Helen Earles, and Dorothy Cathell, considered Henderson's active volunteer life, they said.

Henderson works on Tuesday afternoons with Loretta Bailie at the Civic Club-sponsored "Treasure Chest" at the Lighthouse in Oakland.

"Bobbie goes about her responsibilities in a competent, quiet, unassuming manner," said Earles. "She's not looking for accolades in what she has accomplished. Her ready smile and interest and care for people come through immediately upon meeting her."

Henderson is also a member of the board of directors for the Lighthouse. For many years she was responsible for the kitchen along with Agnes and Nick Dzendzel, at the Autumn Glory Festival Antique Show. She continues to work at that event, the biggest fundraiser the club sponsors each year, by helping with the pricing of baked goods and clean-up at the conclusion of the show. She volunteers for the local chapter of the American Red Cross by serving as a hostess for the annual house tours fundraiser, and also supports veteran events in the area. She can be found in the Nearly New Shop of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church on Wednesday mornings.

Henderson is a long-time member of the VIVA (Volunteers in Various Areas) team at Garrett County Memorial Hospital, and covers the telephone for the House of Hope hotline on Mondays. She finds time to shop with families for Warm the Children, too, and is a member of the soprano section of Garrett Choral Society. In the past she was a member of the steering committee of the Garrett Lakes Arts Festival and worked in the box office and ushered at various events.

The honoree was born in Baltimore, and has lived in Pittsburgh, Pa., Eminence, Ky., and Anderson, Ind. She now resides in Oakland. While living in Indiana she obtained her private pilot's license.

She and her husband Bill began coming to Garrett County in 1974, and moved to the area permanently in 1983. Her family includes her daughter Brenda and husband Andy Gabig, who reside in Pittsburgh, and Betsy and Leigh Bates, who live in Elkton. She has three grandsons: Luke and Sam Gabig and Travis Bates.

"This recognition is a token of the Civic Club's appreciation for Bobbie's hard work for the club and other organizations in our community," Earles said.

It Made Us LOL...

A list of new, somewhat clever, acronyms has been created in recent years, thanks to e-mail technology. Some examples of those are BTW (by the way), IMHO (in my humble opinion), and LOL (laugh out loud). They are used, of course, to save time, and because many people are lazy when it comes to writing/typing.

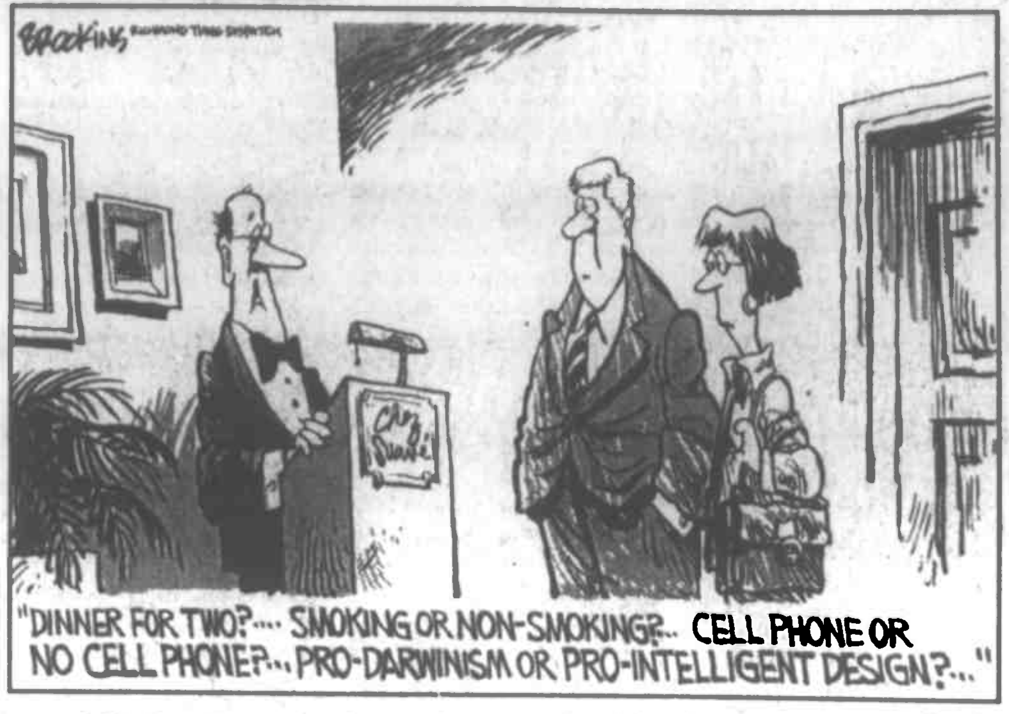
Well, just to make use of one of these examples today in this column, LOL is what several of us did in our newsroom a few weeks ago when the Garrett County commissioners announced that they are thinking about using some of the impending tax revenue to be generated by yet-to-be-erected wind turbines in the county to provide tuition assistance to persons who want to attend Garrett College.

Is that not one of the most political, and therefore one of the most hysterical, things that our commissioners could have imagined? We are not saying that it is necessarily a bad idea, but talk about some serious back-pedaling on a highly controversial issue! Talk about trying to stroke the ruffled feathers of some constituents!

It is hoped that their thinking does not include the notion that the earmarking of funds for this purpose gives the commissioners ammunition to say, if one is opposed to wind turbines, he/she is then opposed to providing educational assistance to our young people. This is the allegation made against the commissioners by one of our letter writers on this page today.

It is this writer's opinion that the commissioners made a mistake many months ago when they endorsed the wind turbine project. At the time, it all sounded pretty good, especially the estimated million bucks in additional annual tax revenue. But, while we would be surprised if any one of the three commissioners would admit it, we believe that if a time machine were available, all three of them would not hesitate to climb on board, go back in time before that decision, and vote no on wind turbines.

The turbines may be a good thing, but they are not a good thing to have in Garrett County. Or to use another rather well-known acronym – NIMBY!



"DINNER FOR TWO?... SMOKING OR NON-SMOKING?... CELL PHONE OR NO CELL PHONE?... PRO-DARWINISM OR PRO-INTELLIGENT DESIGN?..."

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Several years ago, West Virginia politicians pushed gambling through our legislature, saying that the profits from gambling would be used to educate our children at West Virginia University. Now there isn't enough money to fund the program, but my state is polluted with video lottery shops in every town–hundreds of them.

The same thing will happen to Garrett County if the commissioners are allowed to construct wind turbines (aka "windmills") all over the ridge of Backbone Mountain. Let's see–if you love children, you will be happy to see turbines churning?

Gambling wouldn't educate children in West Virginia, and turbines won't educate children in Garrett County.

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter in the Nov. 25 issue of The Republican written by Pastor Terry Hagedorn, saying, "If we are going to remove any references to Christ in the calendar, then I think that we should also secularize the names of the day of the week." He writes, "The Pagans have been given an unfair advantage over other religions. We need to get rid of all references to these gods–let's do it for the children!"

This last sentence made me pretty upset (and that's probably why he wrote it). Now, I don't know if Pastor Hagedorn was being sarcastic or not, but this is just ridiculous. "Let's do it for the children"? Come on. Your children have a choice. If they want to be pagan, let them. If they want to be Buddhist, don't make a fuss. If they want to be Christian, that is their choice, not yours.

Freedom of religion applies to children as well as adults. If only the dear Pastor Hagedorn would remember that.

Sincerely,
Megan Battista

To the Editor:

How typical of noxious industries, such as gambling and windpower, to dangle educational and other feel-good benefits to gain public acceptance. Now they are "for the children," so if you're against wind turbines, you're against our children! Of course, the benefits will not materialize at anywhere near the levels being promised. Then we'll have to build even more windmills to make up the shortfall. Please. Intelligent people will see right through this, but a few non-critical thinkers will be convinced.

Do the county commissioners really believe that the minimal taxes they will receive from windmilling the county will offset the inevitable decrease in residential property values, and thus property taxes? Have they not paid any attention to what has happened to other areas that fell for this ruse?

People of Garrett County, wake up! When these things blanket the crest of Backbone Mountain you are absolutely going to hate them. They will become the defining characteristic of Garrett County, dominating the landscape for the rest of your lives in ways that you cannot imagine. But, of course, then it will be too late.

To the Editor:

Floyd Ellis needs his friends right now. Taking a man's home by eminent domain may not be criminal, but it's immoral. It goes against the whole fabric of our society and what we as Americans have been raised to believe.

The FAA is unwilling to pay more than the appraised fair market price, but they're willing to pay legal fees to take Floyd to court. Isn't that a hoot! Our taxes at work. If Floyd were asking for a ridiculous amount, I could understand the county's reluctance to offer him more. But he's only asking for an additional $25,000.

I'm not sure why this county needs a bigger airport. Whom does it serve? How many people will be employed due to the expansion? Nonetheless, its going to happen. It shouldn't happen at the expense of an honest, hard-working man who is just trying to provide a home for his boys. I have to imagine the reason the county wants a larger airport is because of the expected increase in revenues to the county. If this is indeed anticipated, then look at the long-term cash flow and ask, will $25,000 really impact the economics of the expansion?

Come on, commissioners, do the math and have a heart!

To the Editor:

The holiday season gives each of us an opportunity to remember those less fortunate than ourselves through donations to favorite charities and other acts of kindness. The Area Agency on Aging would like to encourage your readers to remember the frail elderly in the community by supporting the Meals on Wheels program. Meals on Wheels assists our frail elderly to remain in their own home through the provision of a hot nutritious meal delivered five days per week.

Unfortunately, the Area Agency on Aging continually struggles with the lack of financial resources to maintain adequate nutrition services to those in greatest need. Ongoing fundraising is the only way we can assure five-day service continues.

Won't you help by sending a tax deductible donation to the agency's Meals on Wheels program? Your donation will make a significant difference to the life of one of your elderly neighbors. Donations may be mailed to Meals on Wheels, c/o Area Agency on Aging, 104 E. Center St., Oakland, MD 21550.

Thank you in advance for your support. On behalf of the elderly we serve and our entire staff, we wish you the joys of Christmas and best wishes for a peaceful New Year.

To the Editor:

I have been a resident of the upper Green Glade Cove area of Deep Creek Lake for about five years. The proposed golf course, boat ramp and docks (announced), and houses, condominiums, bars, restaurants, and pilings (not yet announced) will surely increase the boat and vehicle traffic as suggested. There are more serious issues with this project, however.

The underdeveloped upper Green Glade Cove appears to be a marine and nutrient rich swamp. Has any attention been given to the fact that this is a critical environmental breeding ground? If this golf course were a federal project, it would surely require an environmental impact statement (EIS). The reason for the EIS is to prevent a costly and foolish loss of a valuable environmental resource.

Has anyone studied the fact that once the Green Glade commercial expansion and development is completed, it may lead to a loss of fish and related wildlife? Such a loss could lead to a partial eutrophication of the Green Glade end of the lake.

Don't the environmental effects of this broad and secret project need to be studied before the swamp and the aquatic treasure of the Green Glade Cove are seriously and permanently damaged or killed?

To the Editor:

November is Adoption Awareness Month across America. Communities celebrate children who after years in numerous different families are finding the permanency they deserve through adoption.

In our state, a private-public partnership has resulted in the opening of Maryland's first Heart Gallery, which displays professional photographs of 58 children and youth looking for a permanent adoptive family.

Of the over 10,000 children and youth from Maryland currently in out-of-home placement, approximately 900 are legally free for adoption. Local departments of social services, local courts, and independent child attorneys are working to make these adoptions a reality. For example, in the Baltimore County Circuit Court, nine adoptions were finalized on National Adoption Day. And, during this month both Charles County and Baltimore City will finalize an additional 43 adoptions in celebration of National Adoption Month.

The Ehrlich-Steele Administration is focusing more attention and resources on child welfare services. Soon the state will announce a yearlong foster parent recruitment effort (focusing on respite and treatment care parents). As secretary, I have taken steps to improve relations with foster parents throughout the state and soon will be announcing a new and revitalized statewide foster parent association.

Nationally, three of four adoptions of children legally free for adoption are adopted by their current foster parents. These selfless persons deserve our lasting gratitude. Some of these parents are looking to adopt, but many others work with state caseworkers to help reunite children with their birth families.

Please, consider becoming a foster parent, or a volunteer for our statewide citizens' review boards or the Court Appointed Special Advocates program for foster children. Or call the Maryland Department of Human Resources at 1-800-332-6347 to see how you can help us in Putting Children First.

A Soldier's View From Iraq

IN ATLANTA, en route back to Iraq – Nov. 29

How did it feel to be home with the family for the holiday?

It was great being home, but also was tough knowing that I had to go back. Got to do a lot of things with friends and family. It was a weird feeling being home, like I shouldn't be there with my friends over there still in harm's way. I had a realization of the little things that I missed and had forgotten about. Some of the simplest things were great. Taking a shower inside a house, and not having to wear body armor to go outside. I didn't waste any time while I was home, every minute was used to spend time with family.

The first few days were extremely weird; it felt like I was a visitor in my own home. I had to ask my wife "Where are the dishes?", "Where's the salt?", etc. – then I realized that this year I had been home a total of three weeks. I was a visitor in my home. After a few days, that went away and we got settled into our normal routine. I spent a lot of time just doing things that I hadn't done for the past six months, many things that we take for granted each day. I took a shower that lasted more than three minutes, watched TV, drank water from the faucet, and went somewhere without "locking and loading."

I talked to my buddies over there every day by e-mail and Instant Messenger to make sure that everything was OK. I watched the news once a day to see what was going on, and how the war is being covered.

At the end of my 15 days, I was ready to leave and get back to my unit. Not that I wanted to leave my family, but it's that I have a job to do and the sooner I get back over there and back to work, the sooner I'll be home for good.

What do you think of the news coverage you saw while at home?

I didn't watch much news while I was home, as I was on the go a lot. What I did see...well, it's not like what you see on the news. I've been following how some want an immediate pullout. That would be the worst thing that we could do because the country would fall to pieces within days of that.

We also can't set a timeline on the withdrawal. I'm not sure what some of the politicians are thinking. You can't set a time frame on this. All that would happen is that the insurgents would sit back and wait for us to leave, then all is lost. I heard that Congressman Murtha said he doesn't want this to be another Vietnam. We left Vietnam before we met our mission, so if we leave Iraq before completing this mission, then it will become a Vietnam. This is going to take time, maybe 10 years, maybe 3 years, but we have to stay until we are done.

Babbling Brainstorms

By Beth L. Bowers

OUR NEW ADDITION

By Beth L. Bowers

We are now a family of five. We bought the boys, now ages 7 and 4, a puppy as an early Christmas present. Maybe we are more of a three-ring circus at this point, but it is a work in progress. Maggie is a 3-month-old Boston Terrier. I was sort of glad to get a girl. Now at least the female to male ratio isn't so lopsided.

Needless to say, the boys were thrilled to get a puppy, and we were too. Brian grew up with dogs, but this is my first official dog. So it's been a learning experience. I think already being a parent has made this a little bit easier though. I had no idea how much a puppy was like a baby. I guess I never really thought about it. There's lots of sleeping, lots of prying things out of her mouth, and lots of potty training (rewards and some regression). But we are making progress, I think.

Maggie quickly adapted to our family. As we were prepared to take her home with us, her owner said to her, "You need to go with your new family now." I swear this is true...She walked up to the kennel that was holding her father and stuck her nose in it, and then walked to her mother's and did the same thing. Brian called her and she ran to him and jumped in his arms. I noticed the now-former owner had to look away to avoid anyone seeing her tears. We all knew at that moment she would be fine with us.

And she has been, that is until Carter, who is 4, gets her so wound up she doesn't know which end is up. I am so glad he isn't any younger than 4. That is young enough, I think. My one brother-in-law gave Maggie a stuffed snake the other day. One morning this week, Tyler had the head of the snake, Carter had the middle (which is missing a lot of stuffing by now), and Maggie had the tail. They were running a circuit through the house, and the boys were singing, "She'll Be Coming 'Round the Mountain." It was quite a scene.

Tyler can handle her pretty well and is even responsible enough for some short potty excursions outside. But Maggie doesn't know when Carter is finished playing, and that is when I hear him screaming for my help. I usually find him running down the hallway toward me with Maggie hanging from his sleeve or the back of his pants. When she gets up on her back feet, she and Carter are nose to nose and when he is finished playing, that is too close for comfort, according to him. In fact, one night this week, Maggie and Carter were both in time-outs because they both got too rambunctious. It started with Carter pretending she was a wheelbarrow – walking her through the house by her back legs, and it escalated from there. They both knew they were in trouble as they peered at me from their beds.

But overall, we couldn't be happier with our new addition. We even included her picture and name on this year's Christmas card. I was probably the hardest sell in this whole purchase (which is usually the case with most purchases, just ask my husband), but I may have been the one Maggie won over the easiest.

GC Memorial Hospital Receives Statewide Recognition, Awards

Garrett County Memorial Hospital has been receiving a lot of statewide recognition lately.

GCMH was recently awarded the 2005 Medicare Quality Excellence Award for Hospitals. The purpose of this award is to recognize the top 10 percent of hospitals that achieve greatest improvement in the composite of the 10 measures set: five acute myocardial infarction, two heart failure, and three pneumonia measures. Hospitals must pass validation in order to be eligible for this award.

Delmarva Foundation, Medicare's quality improvement organization for Maryland and the District of Columbia, recently awarded the winners at Delmarva's third annual The Courage to Improve III: Best Practices and Transparency in Quality Improvement Conference, held at Martin's Crosswinds in Greenbelt. Nearly 500 healthcare CEOs, administrators, and medical staff were in attendance at the event, which is a forum for healthcare professionals from the mid-Atlantic to share best practices and strategies for improving the quality of patient care within hospitals, home health agencies, and nursing homes.

The purpose of Delmarva's Excellence awards is to recognize performance improvement on quality measures specific to each healthcare setting.

"Delmarva Foundation is pleased with the number of hospitals, nursing homes, and home health agencies that are providing quality care to residents in Maryland and the District of Columbia," said Maulik Joshi, DrPH, president and CEO of the Delmarva Foundation. "Meeting the criteria for these awards demonstrates a commitment to excellence by these facilities and exceptional leadership within their field. We commend the award winners for helping lead the way to making mid-Atlantic hospitals, nursing homes, and home health agencies the safest in the nation."

In addition, at the recently held annual Maryland Healthcare Education Institute Medical Staff and Governance Leadership Conference, the Delmarva Foundation recognized several Maryland CEOs for their leadership in quality improvement as 2004 recipients of the Campaign for Medicare Excellence Award. Among those named for the CEO Quality Improvement Leadership Award was Donald P. Battista, GCMH president/CEO, for fostering an exemplary climate of patient safety and quality at Garrett County Memorial Hospital. "I am humbled by this honor," said Battista, "as the real credit goes to our doctors, nurses, technicians, and support staff who do the work and deliver on that quality promise day in and day out."

The Campaign for Medicare Excellence Award is given out based on three national indicators over a period of nine months: congestive heart failure, pneumonia, and heart attacks. To meet their standard of care and be eligible for the award, the hospital must be rated at 90 percent or higher in all indicators and show improvement in the areas for at least three consecutive quarters.

Estonian Pistol Shooters Have Titles In Sights

by Jo Donaldson

Two Estonian students – Kristina Kask and Krista Joosep – are winning pistol competitions for Garrett College.

Kask and Joosep both competed for years in Estonia. Kask, a champion shooter in her home country, is in her second year at at Garrett. Last year she brought several honors from major shooting competitions back to the college.

"We are very proud that Kristina Kask, one of our Estonian students and a champion marksperson in her native Estonia, is representing Garrett College in high level competitions," said Garrett College president Dr. Steve Herman. "She is a great student and a great ambassador for our college and our community."

Kristina began shooting when she was 12 years old and took many championships in Estonia, including a bronze medal in Junior Pistol Team at Europeans. After joining a shooting club in Estonia, she practiced as much as five days a week and took part in team competitions on weekends. Her coach, Rein Valdru, trained a three-time world champion.

Joosep also joined the shooting club there and has been shooting for eight years. She is a freshman at the college. Her two loves are shooting and music.

Now the two travel to competitions around the country. Dr. Herman is pleased to have the two students representing Garrett College.

"We're not doing bad," said Joosep of their standings. "It's cool."

They receive points at each competition and the final totals will determine if they get the All-American title and go on to national competition with qualifications scheduled for February. The competitions are also their primary practice and they shoot as much as possible.

It can be physically exhausting. At one event they began shooting a little after 11 a.m. and finished at 4 p.m.

The more you shoot, the more confident you become, said Joosep. They have competitions scheduled for November, December, January, and February.

"We support each other," Kask said. "We are each other's coach."

"We want to do well for Garrett College," she said. "The college supports us and agreed to help. We couldn't have done it without their support."

Both students are very active in college activities, such as the Music Club and for the Student Government Association, where Kask serves as vice president and Joosef is secretary. Both are also student leaders in the World View International Club, where Kask is president and Joosep is treasurer. In addition to these student organization activities, they work part-time on campus.

"It's good to be busy," said Joosep. "It keeps you out of trouble."

Kask agrees, adding that they do not expect the shooting to limit their other opportunities. Both are fluent in several languages.

"We are all so fortunate to have these amazing young women representing their country, their sport and their college both here in Garrett County and in other parts of the United States, and to be able to learn from them" said Judy Carbone, the college's coordinator of Career Services and Global Education.

Along with other women students at the college from Bosnia-Herzegovina, Latvia, India, and Lithuania, Kask and Joosep recently participated in the Focus on International Women presentation, during which they shared their experiences of women's lives in their countries.

Adorable Adoptables

SCRUFFY WANTS A NEW HOME FOR CHRISTMAS – Scruffy, pictured above left, is a 10-year-old terrier mix who has had all of his shots and is housebroken. "He has a lot of love and life left in him and is good with other pets and kids," said a Humane Society spokesperson. "He loves to stand up and wave his paws in the air. He is not real big and so adorable." Scruffy was given up by his owner and is currently waiting to be adopted from the Garrett County Animal Shelter. Pictured beside him is Toby, a 6-month-old Lab mix. This youngster was bought as a gift for someone, but since Toby is still growing and is full of energy, he turned out to be too much for the gift recipient to handle. Toby has had his first set of shots and is housebroken. Below is a not-so-big beagle who was dropped off at the shelter weeks ago. "Please don't let him spend Christmas alone," said the spokesperson. Also pictured is a homeless gray tabby cat. "Please come and meet her and all the other cats we have here who need good homes. Last week's adoptables, a collie/beagle and Lab/retriever, are still available. They are still waiting for you to make their Christmas wishes come true. Additionally, please remember during the winter months that it is important for your outside pets to have fresh water daily. Please report animal neglect to the shelter if you see a pet outside without proper shelter from the weather. Free hay is available outside the Garrett County Animal Shelter for dog boxes. But only take what you need." For more information, persons may call 301-334-3553.

St. Mark's Church Offering Advent, Christmas Services

The Advent and Christmas seasons are being celebrated at St. Mark's Lutheran Church in Oakland throughout the month of December. Pastor Scott Robinson and the congregation extend an invitation to members of the general public to attend any or all of the special services.

Advent services are under way on Wednesdays, beginning at 7 p.m. The remaining dates for these are Dec. 7, 14, and 21. These are meditative services, patterned after the Taizé style. Taizé is an international ecumenical community founded in France in 1940. It has become a well-known religious retreat center, where for nearly 50 years thousands of young adults from many countries have gathered to take part in weekly meetings of prayer and reflection. The Taizé service is meditative, prayerful, and reflective.

A children's Christmas Eve pageant will take place on Saturday, Dec. 24, at 2 p.m. This service will involve the children of St. Mark's Sunday school classes, under the direction of Fran Storck.

Later that evening, at 11 p.m., a candlelight service will be held with Pastor Robinson presiding. There will be special music by the church choir and other guests.

On Christmas day, a service of lessons and carols will be held, beginning at 10 a.m.

The regular Sunday schedule is Sunday school at 8:45 a.m. and the church service at 10 a.m. (There will be no Sunday school on Christmas day.)

St. Mark's, which is an ELCA (Evangelical Lutheran Church in America) congregation, is located at the intersection of Second and Center streets in Oakland.

For more information or to speak with the pastor, persons may call the church office at 301-334-2668.

4th Annual Great Gift Giveaway Set At Loch Lynn

The fourth annual Great Gift Giveaway, hosted by the Loch Lynn Church of God, will take place on Friday, Dec. 9, from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., and on Saturday, Dec. 10, from 9 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. in the church fellowship hall.

The church is located along First Avenue in Loch Lynn.

"The Great Gift Giveaway is blessing for blessing, ours to give and yours to receive," a church spokesperson said. "This outreach ministry is for the purpose of blessing individuals and families who are in need of nice clothes, shoes, toys, and games during this holiday season. We will also have bags of non-perishable food items."

For more information, persons may contact the church office at 301-334-3221. The church leadership asked that no dealers attend this sale, as it is an outreach ministry designed simply to help meet the needs of the community.

Oakland Shop Adds Estonian Crafts To Shelves

The Shoppe at Heritage Square, a venture of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce located at the historic Oakland Train Station, is selling Estonian crafts as part of its Christmas inventory. The move is an outgrowth of the relationship between Oakland and its "sister city" of Valga, Estonia.

"We are pleased to be able to offer so many nice items to the community and also to help the Estonian economy,"" said Oakland Main Street Program manager Cherie Ross, noting that two other Garrett County communities – McHenry and Grantsville – are sister cities to Tartu and Otepaa, respectively.

"We are pleased to have a new selection of items from Estonia for people looking for different Christmas gifts," Ross stated. "We have Christmas ornaments and decorations, amber jewelry, glass and dolomite items, wooden toys, and a variety of craft items including unique dish sets with accessories."

Estonian items on sale at the Shoppe also will include hand painted dishware, trivets, baskets and trinket boxes, animal pillows, wooden necklaces, Lorup crystal, candlestick holders, and handmade Christmas cards and ornaments.

"We just received a shipment of crafts from our sister city," said Oakland Mayor Asa McCain. "When I visited Estonia, I was extremely impressed with the quality of their woodwork. Until now, I didn't realize the variety of items their artisans make, from wooden Christmas ornaments to amber jewelry."

The Shoppe at Heritage Square will be offering 10 to 20 percent discounts on select items for the Christmas celebration, including items imported from Estonia, during Oakland's Main Street Christmas celebration, set for Friday and Saturday, Dec. 2 and 3. The Shoppe at Heritage Square, which will continue its discounted prices through Sunday, Dec. 4, will be open until 9 p.m. on Friday and will keep longer hours until after the holidays.

A wide variety of train items and crafts made by local artisans will also be on sale during the Main Street celebration. Parents can have their children's pictures with Santa taken free, as a gift from the Greater Oakland Business Association and the Main Street program.

A percentage of all sales at the Shoppe at Heritage Square goes to help defray the operation and upkeep costs of the Train Station facility.

What's Happening At The Drane House . . . .

by Becky Aiken &
Sherry Georg

The Accident Cultural and Historical Society's annual Holiday Cookie Shoppe will be held this Saturday, Dec. 3, at the Drane House. Doors open at 10 a.m. This year's selection of goodies will feature over 30 varieties of home baked cookies, candy, fudge, breads, and more.

The Drane House is located in Accident just off Route 219, behind Zion Lutheran Church. Look for the signs in town to help guide your way. For more information, persons may call Susan Keller at 301-746-8878.

Garden director Sherry George has been busy decorating the Drane House for Christmas, and she has really out done herself this year. The students in Mrs. Stewart's 4th grade class at Accident Elementary School have been hard at work making decorations helping Mrs. Georg decorate the Drane House.

Pictured above is Northern High School's Student Service Alliance Class preparing to bake cookies for the sale. This will be the third year that Mrs. Barbara Law's class has participated in the event. Each year they bake orange tea cookies. It is a recipe that was handed down to Mrs. Law by her mother. It is always one of the better sellers for a very good reason; they are delicious.

Stop by on Saturday and let us take care of your holiday baking while you sit by the fire and have a cup of free spiced cider at the Drane House.

McHenry Woman Charged With DWI After Crash

A McHenry woman was arrested for driving while intoxicated (DWI) after she crashed her pickup truck early Sunday morning near Oakland, according to the McHenry barrack of the Maryland State Police.

Shortly after 4:30 a.m. Laura Grey Bradley, 27, was traveling on Shingle Camp Road when she lost control of her 1996 Ford Ranger. The pickup overturned before coming to rest on its roof.

Bradley, who was not injured, also was charged with failure to control speed to avoid a collision.

Ohio Driver Falls Asleep At Wheel, Crashes On I-68

An 80-year-old Ohio woman apparently fell asleep at the wheel of her vehicle Sunday morning and crashed on Interstate 68, Maryland State Police troopers assigned to the McHenry barrack reported this week.

The vehicle of Marilyn R. Byrd of Mentor went off the roadway just east of Friendsville and hit a guardrail at approximately 9:30 a.m. She was transported by the Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad to Ruby Memorial Hospital in Morgantown, W.Va., for treatment of minor injuries. The Friendsville Volunteer Fire Department assisted at the scene.

Crash Injures

An early-morning accident last Thursday, Nov. 24, resulted in injuries for a trio of out-of-state travelers. At 3:20 a.m. a 2003 Mitsubishi Galant operated by Marisol Rosas-Pagan, 42, of Dorchester, Mass., went out of control on a snow-covered I-68 near Pig's Ear Road. The westbound vehicle ran over an embankment and into a culvert, injuring the driver and her two passengers, Ramonita Rosas, 60, also of Dorchester, and Israel Medina, 29, Brooklyn, N.Y.

All three occupants were transported by the Northern Rescue Squad to Cumberland Memorial Hospital. The Grantsville Volunteer Fire Department assisted at the scene.

Rosas-Pagan was charged with failure to reduce speed in dangerous weather conditions.

County Decides

as a purchase price differential payment.

In their meeting with Ellis last week, the commissioners noted that the county's offer for his property was 13.25 percent, or $11,726, above its appraised value. Though the county and Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) are cost-sharing the buyout of properties near the airport, the FAA will not pay any amount above their appraised values. The county, therefore, would be solely responsible for the $11,726.

The local officials noted that at $185,000, the county would be responsible for even more funds.

"The board did not approve your request for a direct payment equal to the purchase price of $185,000 for the home you would like to buy," wrote Pagenhardt. "Additional and unbudgeted funding would have been $35,100."

Should Ellis not accept the county's last offer, a final appraisal of his property will be scheduled and completed as part of the condemnation process.

WORLD AIDS DAY PROCLAIMED – With the theme "Stop AIDS: Keep the Promise," the Garrett County commissioners recently signed a proclamation declaring today, Dec. 1, as World AIDS Day in Garrett County. Members of the Pandora's Box theatre troupe were on hand to present a timeline which began in 1981 with the first reported AIDS related case, and continued up to this year with the international, interagency announcement that access to antiratroviral drugs would be markedly increased in developing countries. Seated from the left are commissioners Ernie Gregg, Dave Beard, and Fred Holliday, while standing are AmeriCorps member and Pandora's Box director Marcie Beachy, Pandora's Box members Andrea Hedrick and Rose Jackson, Garrett County AIDS Council chairperson Donna Foot, Garrett County Health Department nurse Cindy Mankamyer, and regional HIV/AIDS caseworker Hector Oomez. For further information about AIDS, including avenues for support of local patients and their families, persons may call Foat at 301-334-7740.

Students Compete In State Recycling Sculpture Contest

Four local high school art students recently competed in the 4th annual "Rethink Recycling" Sculpture Contest at the Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE) headquarters in Baltimore. They are Amber Winans, 12th grade, Doug Kisner, 11th, and Sean Sisler, 10th grade, all of Southern High School, and Carly Chase, a senior at Northern High.

Two of the students, Sean and Doug, attended the contest in person, accompanied by personnel from the Garrett County Solid Waste & Recycling Division.

The four students had previously won the Garrett County "Rethink Recycling" Contest in October at the Garrett County Visitors Center. The students' art teachers are Sonia Pratt and Jay Paxton. The event was sponsored by the division.

Both the local and state competitions challenge students to innovatively and artistically use recycled materials as a solution to waste reduction. The art events also help draw attention to America Recycles Day, which was held this year on Nov. 15.

"Our office was thrilled to have four entries in the state contest and to have two of the students attend the function," said Kimberly Madigan, recycling coordinator. "Our students faired well in this competition, and the event was a valuable learning experience for our students."

Sculptures were judged on workmanship, creativity, and use and variety of recycled materials. A total of 51 entries from 14 different high schools across the state contained everything from electronic material, cardboard, plastic, scrap wood, chicken wire, broken compact discs, and more, according to the MDE.

"This event is one of my favorites," said MDE Secretary Kendl Philbrick, a contest judge. "We get to foster youth's ingenuity and spirit while encouraging an environmental ethic. After participating in a contest such as this, artists and art lovers will never look at discarded items or trash the same again."

Other judges were MDE Deputy Secretary Jonas A. Jacobson and George H. White, executive director of the Maryland-Delaware-D.C. Press Association.

The top sculptors were Kirsty Ferri and Caitlyn Blair from Anne Arundel County, who created an ornate guitar made from soda cans, wood flooring scraps, cardboard, and wire hangers.

All contestants received a portable compact disc player from Panasonic, while their instructors were given gift cards to a major office supply store.

To learn more about the free recycling program in Garrett County, persons may call Madigan's office at 301-387-0322 or visit online at garrettcounty.org.

Gaithers Win Duo Of The Year Award Third Consecutive Time

Chester and Isolina Gaither, Kempton area, have won the Country Gospel Music Association's (CGMA) International Duo of the Year Award for the third consecutive year. The Gaithers are the first duo to ever receive this award three times. In light of this accomplishment, the award will be made a perpetual honor, called a Platinum Heart, for the Gaithers, and will be presented to them in October 2006. They will be presented with the Platinum Heart at the CGMA national convention in October 2006. Others may achieve this same award, but none will surpass the honor, as it is perpetually for the Gaithers.

The CGMA hosts concerts across the United States, as well as in Canada, the Philippines, Australia, and Mexico. The Gaithers have performed in venues across the county and internationally. Mr. Gaither was also the recent recipient of the CGMA International Promoter of the Year Award.

The couple are releasing a new CD this week titled Holy Is Thy Name. They will be performing locally at the Joy of Christ concert series, appearing on Dec. 6 at the former National Guard Armory in Oakland. Their show will begin at 8 p.m.

The Gaithers will also be singing on Dec. 11, 11 a.m., at the Hiway Assembly of God in Kitzmiller

Madame Scrooge Slated At Valley Ridge Theatre

Valley Ridge Theatre in Thomas, W.Va., will re-open its doors with the holiday production of Madame Scrooge, an adaptation of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol.

Performances will be held Friday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 9, 10, and 17, at 7:30 p.m., with a matinee slated for Sunday, Dec. 11, at 2 p.m. The theatre is located at 9 Front Street.

"One thing that makes this presentation unique is that the old miser Scrooge will be played by a woman, who turns out to be just as mean spirited as any man in Victorian England," said a theatre spokeswoman.

The show is filled with mysterious happenings and ghostly visits from four spirits sent to warn Scrooge to change her ways before it is too late.

"Live music, a marvelous set, Christmas carols from Olde England, and holiday refreshments make the evening's presentation a must for the entire family," the spokeswoman said.

Robin Lea Pyle will direct the show, with lighting designed by Eddie Brown.

Performers and musicians include Margaret Brown, Amy Dzaack, Erin Dzaack, Janel Farron, Heidi Haldeen, Frances Hall, Esther Joseph, Jeriah Joseph, Joshua Joseph, Alix Lilly, Helen Melnick, Ruthie Melnick, Emer O'Shaughnessy, Seth Pitt, Ben Quarles, Madelaine Richards, Summer Dawn Snyder, and Pyle.

For reservation and ticket information, persons may call 304-463-4637.

The project raises funds for Oakland's mural projects, according to Cherie Ross. Children are being invited to draw what the "HeART of Oakland" means to them. The entries will be used to create note cards, calendars, and other items as the town's leadership continues its outdoor mural art projects on blank building walls. The entry shown above is from Jennifer Shillingburg, age 10, and shown below is a creation by Samantha Bessey, also age 10. Both artists attend Dennett Road Elementary School, which is the subject of Samantha's design. Copies of these entries are now on display in downtown Oakland stores. To get an entry card, persons may call Ross at 301-616-3026.

construction at the Northern Garrett Industrial Park in early spring. The much anticipated project has been delayed for about four years.

He also reported that American Woodmark is expected to begin construction of its dimensions mill at the Keyser's Ridge Industrial Park this spring as well. Work on supporting infrastructure for the plant is progressing at the park.

Community Action

More residents are now eligible to receive help with their home heating bills, according to Duane Yoder, Garrett County Community Action Committee president. Yoder told the commissioners that the Maryland Department of Human Resources has raised income guidelines for its Energy Assistance Program.

As many as 31 percent of Garrett County residents may now be eligible, Yoder noted. With the dramatic increase of natural gas, heating oil, and propane, his agency is trying to enroll as many residents as possible in the program.

The Garrett County Department of Social Services and Health Department are also helping to sign up residents.

For more information, persons may call Community Action at 301-334-9431.

Extension Office

Acting director Ann Sherrard, Garrett County Extension Office, reported that Kris DeWitt has been hired as a part-time coordinator and nutrient management adviser for Garrett and Allegany counties.

Sherrard added that in the past compliance with the state's nutrient management program has been voluntary, but that recently changed. The state is now in "compliance mode," she said. DeWitt will help farmers meet the program requirements.

Health Department

Numerous residents participated in the 29th annual Great American Smokeout on Nov. 17, Health Officer Rodney Glotfelty reported. The Garrett County Health Department had 50 persons pledge to quit smoking for that day, the community planning groups had 33 pledges, and participating work sites had 70.

Glotfelty said 29 smokers were successful in not smoking, with 6 of them remaining smoke free after 5 days. Browning's Foodland provided free turkeys to successful participants.

The health officer also reported that the influenza season would probably peak in January and February. He noted that this was later than usual, which was fortunate as more residents could receive vaccines.

He said 1,400 people had been vaccinated during scheduled clinics at the Health Department.

Though the last clinic was held this week, residents may still receive vaccinations. For more information, one may call 301-334-7777.

Amendments

project itself. He noted that the company had many more procedures to go through before the project came to fruition.

In addition to obtaining the proper building permits, the company must now apply to the Zoning Appeals Board for a special exception hearing. The board, therefore, may or may not grant the exception, based on public input and other factors.

The commissioners also stressed that a recent Deep Creek Lake Watershed Economic Growth and Planning Analysis Study indicated the need for more commercial ventures.

Commissioner Fred Holliday noted that the vast majority of responses and comments about the amendments only focused on the location of the TAD project and not how the amendments would apply to the entire watershed.

Commissioner Dave Beard said he owned property in Thousand Acres from 1965 until 1995 and could identify with the concerns of his friends and former neighbors. But the amendments were not just a local issue, they were a county issue, and as a county official, even though he was hesitant, he felt he had to vote in favor of the amendments.

The first amendment adds a new section to the ordinance's table of use regulations: "Section 304.C.21 – Public golf course clubhouse associated with a public golf course having 18 holes or more of play. Such a use should be permitted by SE-Special Exception in the LR zone and be P-Permitted in all other zoning districts including the TC, TR, CR1, CR2, RD, and C zones."

The second addition defines a clubhouse as "a building associated with a public golf course providing at least 18 holes of play or more in which facilities, services, and activities are provided as an accessory to the 18-hole public golf course. Facilities, services, and activities include: golf pro shop, restaurant, lounge, meeting, exercise and locker rooms, and golf cart storage and maintenance facilities."

The third amendment outlines the dimensional requirements for a clubhouse. In any zoning district permitted the following minimum dimensions apply: land area per use, 43,560 square feet; lot width, 150 feet; front yard, 40 feet; side yard, 30 feet; and rear yard, 50 feet.

Letters

To the Editor:

The leaders of Iran are extremely happy with the democracy we have created in Iraq. In fact they are thrilled that Shiite Muslims are now in control and Sunni Muslim Saddam is out. The leaders of both countries met last week, had a party, and formed what they have called the Grand Alliance. I guess this means mission accomplished? A mission worthy of impeachment. This is precisely the reason Bush senior did not remove Saddam during Desert Storm.

The leaders of all factions in Iraq have asked us to get out. Only the puppets and spokesman we have installed talk about "waiting until things are safe" doublespeak for unending occupation and war. Things will never be safe while we are there. As congressman John Murtha so eloquently pointed out in his recent speech, "This war cannot be won militarily, we have done our job, we are creating more terror risk by staying there."

The spin of cut and run and portraying war opponents as evil is just that – a vicious dishonest attempt to brainwash us. If we leave tomorrow the Iraqis will have to figure it out. We have not lost anything. Saddam is gone, as was our goal. Urban bombing, white phosphorus chemical weapons, depleted uranium ammunition, cluster bombs, and various weapons of mass destruction we use are not "smart." Every innocent person and child we kill or maim probably creates several people dedicated to revenge. If oil is in the background of our motivations then we kill innocents for oil. How sinful can you get? No innocent Iraqi child deserves to die for "a way of life."

The blood of our fine troops spills every day to form a government that is aligning with Iran and will be more hostile to U.S. interests than Saddam ever was. There are more Republican corruptions going on than you can keep track of, from GOP leaders DeLay to Frist, on and on. Cheney makes $23,000 a day in profit (increase in his Halliburton stock value since the war started) and Bush doesn't want us to go back in history and expose his false witness. Billion-dollar no-bid contracts, billions of your dollars lost and unaccounted for, monumental assaults on the environment, and tax cuts for the super rich with sky rocketing deficits. You don't have to go to Iraq to find atrocities.

Government spending favoring the rich from the county level to the national level is like an always winning slot machine lining their pockets at our expense, and the poor and elderly are being shafted in new ways every day. And yet we still consider the GOP the party of morality and fiscal responsibility? They are the party of hypocrites and thieves, and they serve the rich at the expense of "The People" and the environment. Top to bottom they all gotta go before it's too late.

THE DECORATIONS ARE GOING UP in towns across the county in celebration of Christmas 2005. These folks were hard at work in Accident, gussying up the town for the season, and in time for the annual Light-Up Ceremony, which is slated for Wednesday, Dec. 7, beginning at 6 p.m. at the Flowery Vale Senior Center along Main Street. Residents and guests will gather for a reading of the names on the Trim-A-Tree bows and the lighting of the tree, and then will carol to St. Paul's Lutheran Church. There will be a performance by the Grantsville Bell Choir, too. Refreshments will be served. Pictured above as they prepare a wreath for hanging are (from left) Joe Canfield, Joanne Durst, Joe Wright (of Beitzel Corp., which provided the equipment and manpower to hang the decorations), and Pastor Randy Nairn. Others helping out were Amanda and Ruth Ann Hahn and Virginie Fike.

ACCIDENT GROUP COORDINATES HOLIDAY FOOD DISTRIBUTION – The Accident Community Planning Group distributed food to six families recently, as each family received three boxes of food and a turkey. Community partners assisting with the food collection included St. Paul's, St. John's, and Zion Lutheran churches and Accident Elementary School. The members of the Planning Group, shown from the left in the front row, are Kyleondar Diven and Brooklyn [illegible]. In the middle row are Rachel Loop, Alexie Shannon, Chelsie Cueter, and Jazmine Miner. In the back row are Colleen Shannon, Sheran Cueter, Barb Speicher, Randy Nairn, Dawn Diven, Randy Miner, and Cindy Miner. Community Planning Group activities are supported in part by funds from the Garrett County Health Department to prevent alcohol, tobacco, and other drug use, and teen pregnancy.

Medication Errors Can Be Prevented

Studies that reviewed prescription medications taken by senior citizens found many reasons for concern. Some of these concerns relate to inappropriate drug choices by prescribers, excessive dosages, non-compliance with prescribed doses and possible interactions. Such incidents signal the need for better communication between doctors, pharmacists, and the person taking such medications. Research has shown that about half of all medicines taken for chronic health problems such as diabetes, arthritis and high blood pressure are not taken as prescribed. Obviously, some things should be done to improve the situation.

One of the best ways to prevent medication errors is to make a list of all drugs commonly used, including over-the-counter products and nutritional supplements. Periodically discuss the list with your pharmacist and bring it to each doctor's visit. A copy of this list should be kept at home and posted so emergency workers can easily find it. Make sure to share your entire medication list with all your doctors, pharmacists, and other health care providers.

Lakers Open JUCO Campaign With 80-65 Win Over Dundalk

, GC coach Dennis Gibson credited the play of Henderson in the second half as a major key to the victory.

"Gilmore hit a lot of points early for them, but Chris defended him very well in the second half," Gibson said. "We held him scoreless in the final six minutes."

Gilmore led the Lions with 21 points, while Spencer finished with 17.

Garrett Women Prey On Falcons In 50-Point Win

It was easy pickings for the Garrett College women's basketball squad last night, as the Lakers made quick prey of the visiting Takoma Park Falcons in a 92-42 blowout. The win evens Garrett's season mark at 2-2.

Four Lakers hit for double figures in the massacre, as sophomore Kierra Wilkins and freshman Ashley Hill both netted 15 points, freshman Ancetha Dudley contributed 14, and Flodysha Peterson recorded 11. Northern High School graduate Jeseca Gibson, who sank both of GC's three-pointers, was one off the double-figure mark with 9 points.

The Falcons' top scorers were Ashley Anthony, who had 14 points, and Dominque Carr with 11.

Garrett had jumped out to a 52-20 lead by the halftime intermission.

The Lakers have three outings slated for this week, opening with road trips to take on the College of Southern Maryland Saturday and CCAC-South Monday. Garrett returns home Wednesday to host Potomac State in a 7 p.m. showdown.

Rams, New Coach Will Open Season Tuesday Against BW

A general lack of game experience seems to be the single biggest concern of new Southern High School boys' varsity basketball coach Paul Pacella as the Rams prepare to open their 2005-06 campaign next Tuesday at home against Bishop Walsh.

The game will be Pacella's debut as head coach of the Rams, having taken over the reins of the program from long-time coach Tom Bosley.

Lost to graduation from last season's 17-7 squad were All-Area, All-WMIL first-team pick Cory Bosley, second-team All-Area selection Corey Tressler, Brad Reese, and Chris Miller. Returning senior center Evan Lantz is the only returning starter, although Joe Tressler, Nick Gregg, and Nathanial Harris saw considerable action.

"We have very good size, which obviously should make us strong in post play," said Pacella.

Sharing former coach Bosley's philosophy on defense, Pacella said, "Our program will continue to be solidly committed to team defense. That was made a Southern High trademark by Tom, and was a major key to the outstanding success of his teams."

With the lack of experience of most of his players, Pacella said that the Rams have been spending a lot of time on developing their perimeter shooting game.

A tentative starting lineup for the Rams will see Mike Edwards at the point guard spot, as expected starter Sean McCreery is currently nursing a hamstring injury.

Tressler will start at the shooting guard position, with Nick Gregg at the swing spot, Harris at forward, and Lantz at center.

Gregg will likely see time at all three of the guard positions. Tim Reams and Andrew VanBogelen will also play the shooting and swing guard positions, respectively, Ryan DeWitt will back up Harris at the forward spot, and Erik Cussins will relieve Lantz at center.

Pacella listed several opponents in the "most difficult" category, including Northern, Allegany, Beall, and Fort Hill.

"Our area is very good this year," he said. "There should be many great games throughout the season."

Pacella, who was an assistant of Bosley and was a successful head coach at Union High School, said that his goals are really no different than what they have been at Southern for many years.

"We hope to win the Snowball Classic, the WMIL; and the region title," he said.

"We are very young in terms of on-floor experience, but I anticipate a lot of progress as our kids gain more and more of that experience," he said. "Our guard play will dictate much of that progress and the overall success of our team."

Assisting Pacella with the varsity program this season are Fred Gregg, Ryan White, and Dave Martin. Jim Bosley will continue to head up the junior varsity program, along with assistants Doug Copeland, Jonathan Price, and Jeff Stump.

Next Tuesday's varsity season/home opener with Bishop Walsh will tip off at 7:30 p.m. The jayvee contest is scheduled to get under way at 6 p.m.

NORTHERN GIRLS ARE FLEET AFOOT – Team speed is one of the attributes that Northern High School girls' varsity basketball squad will utilize as it works to overcome a lack of previous varsity floor experience. The Huskies lost all five regular starters from last year's squad, and head coach Dave Yoder has set a goal of weekly improvement for his hardworking players and dedicated staff. Pictured kneeling from the left are Maranda Funk, Amber Savage, Brittany Stein, Sarah Voelkel, and Danielle Brenneman. Standing are Jessica Fratz, Kasie Fratz, Baylee Martin-Selders, Kayla Kipp, Megan Wiley, and Amy Shaffer. See season preview.

Team Speed Cited As Key To Husky Girls' Hoops Hopes

"We have a lot of speed and quickness going for us this year," Northern High School girls' varsity basketball coach Dave Yoder said as he previewed his squad's upcoming 2005-06 campaign, which tips off Monday evening when Salisbury visits the Cove. The Huskies are going to have to hustle this year, because they have an uphill battle in overcoming a lack of floor experience – each starter from last year's 8-16 unit has been lost to graduation.

Stepping up to fill the shoes of those departed starters – Jeseca Gibson, Lakin Weimer, Tiffany Yoder, Jayme Miller, and Amanda Heacock – will be a trio of seniors poised to take their turn in the spotlight. Guards Amy Shaffer and Jessie Fratz, and center Kayla Kipp form a triumviate that Yoder thinks NHS can build by shuffling pieces of the Huskies' puzzle.

"Our starting lineup will probably change with every opponent as we seek to capitalize on our strengths and the opposition's weaknesses," the Northern skipper said. "We have a hardworking team that's eager to learn, and our goal is to improve weekly as the year goes on."

The lone senior joining the three previously mentioned upperclassmen is Maranda Funk, while junior members of the squad are Baylee Martin-Selders and Amber Savage. The sophomore players are Kasie Fratz, Sarah Voelkel, Danielle Brenneman, and Brittany Stein, and the freshman class is represented by Megan Wiley. (At 5-8, Wiley is matched in height only by Kipp and Shaffer.)

"Obviously we have a lot of varsity inexperience to overcome, but our girls and entire coaching staff is dedicated and ready for the challenge," Yoder stated.

Monday night's season debut against the Elks will be followed by a Wednesday night visit by Beall's Mountaineers. Game times for both home court contests are set at 6 p.m. for jayvees and 7:30 p.m. for the varsity.

Experienced Ram Wrestling Team Anticipates Many Wins

Expected to have another winning season on the mats this year is the Southern High School wrestling team, which returns experienced grapplers in all 14 weight classes after recording a best ever 13-1 regular-season record and a 14-2 overall mark last season.

The Rams will open their campaign Friday, Dec. 9, at the Berkeley Springs Tournament.

"We should be solid this year, with skilled wrestlers in all 14 divisions," stated fifth-year head coach Dave Taylor, "and we also have depth in many of those positions."

Taylor and his staff are also enjoying possibly the largest ever roster, with 28 Rams listed.

"We also have a strong freshman class, who will have an immediate impact," he said. "I think we have the potential to be as good or better than last year's team."

Top performers from last year who were lost to graduation were Scott Wildesen, who had one state title under his belt, Nathan Sines, and Jeffrey Gregory.

Among the top returnees are seniors Jeremy Gregory, Justin Fitzwater, and Brandon Manko, juniors Daniel Carr, Justin Ratliff, Andrew Pritts, and Josh Armstrong, and sophomore Sean Sisler.

Taylor said that the starting line-up for the Dec. 9-10 opener at Berkeley Springs will be announced next week.

Taylor expects the first half of the season to be the most difficult for the Rams.

"Our two toughest dual meets and our two most challenging tournaments will all be in December," he said. "All three of our tournaments will be difficult, but the holiday tourney at Southmoreland will likely be the most difficult.

"Harford Tech, Hyndman, Northern, and Beall will probably be our strongest opponents in dual meets," he said.

The Rams will also be on the road for their first six encounters, finally opening their home campaign by hosting the Garrett County Invitational Tournament on January 7.

A RECORD BUCK — Garrett County resident Alan Friend travaled to Alberta, Canada, last fall, where he met up with a record-sized whitetail buck. Hunting Trip Yields "Dream Come True" For Alan Friend

by Brenda Ruggiero

Most people have a dream. Some keep it tucked away – a tiny glimmer of hope for "some day." For others, it boldly stands as a constant goal to strive for.

Garrett County resident Alan Friend is one of those "strivers." And his dream was realized last year on a hunting trip in Canada.

"My journey to a 'dream come true' began when I was 14 years old with my dad and uncle," Alan recalled. "The more I hunted, the more I became focused on whitetail. Just like many hunters, I also had dreams of hunting and getting a big buck."

Alan quickly realized that some extra work would be required for him to reach his goal.

"Anywhere I hunted, I learned to hunt for sign and the sheds of big bucks," he said. "Ever since I can remember, I read every magazine article I could about big buck hunting, and found that the caliber of buck I was looking for was in Canada."

During Alan's first hunting trip to Canada, he took a 162 class Boone and Crocket 5x5 in Saskatchewan. Boone and Crockett is a scoring system based on measurements of trophy characteristics, such as antlers, horns, and skulls. The measurements result in a numerical score that provides ranking for all trophies in a particular category. Record books are published periodically.

Alan returned to Saskatchewan several years in a row, but realized that to reach his goal, he would have to change his strategy.

"If I wanted to find what I was looking for and get good scores, I needed to find an outfitter in the farm country," he said. "The food access year-round helps to develop good bucks, and big timber gives them cover."

Alan began searching for an outfitter in Alberta, reading everything he could on the subject and talking to various outfitters about their camps, harvests over the last few years, and shed hunting. Since whitetail deer shed their antlers each year, hunters can determine the size of the animals still left after the hunting season by studying the antlers that have been shed, or the "sheds."

In the fall of 1996, he finally settled on Big Rack Adventures, owned by Blair and Kathy Trout.

"I was convinced that he was the outfitter who could make my dreams a reality," Alan remembers. "The bad news was that Big Rack Adventures was booked, and my name was put on his waiting list for an opening."

When Alan returned from a planned hunting trip to Maine, his wife Bonnie met him at the door with the news that there had been a cancellation at Big Rack, and his flight was booked for the next day.

"I couldn't believe what was happening," Alan said. "Finally, I had a chance to hunt where the big bucks roam."

That year, Alan came home with a 163 class 5x4 Boone and Crockett.

"From that point, I have hunted in Alberta once a year, looking for better bucks each time," he said. "But I always go home with the best memories with Big Rack Adventures."

Alan noted that over the years he has taken several good bucks ranging from 160 to 170 Boone and Crockett, and a few 145 that have served as learning tools for him.

"One of the lessons I learned that stays with me to this day is that if you have to think about whether or not to shoot, you do not shoot," Alan said. "If the buck is what you are looking for, you will know in an instant, and there will be no question in your mind."

In November of 2004, Alan was looking forward to his hunt in Alberta, since be had heard about a two-year-old set of sheds that would score in the high 190s.

"Several hunters from back home hunted the week before I arrived and took good bucks," Alan said. "No one knew if the buck from the sheds was still around. No one had seen him during the season."

Throughout the week, he saw several smaller bucks, and one of the other hunters from his camp shot at a buck that was "in a class of its own."

Alan was finally rewarded on Saturday of that week.

"Because my knees and legs were really hurting from sitting every day in the stands from before daylight until dark, I decided to stand and walk outside the blind to stretch," he recalled. "I shouldered my gun to walk outside, and saw a buck in a cut line behind the blind."

He could see that it had a large body, and a closer look with his binoculars revealed that it was a "shooter."

He lost track of the buck after the shot, but finally located it on the ground.

"I saw the size of the antlers, and knew that it was a beast from the sheds," he said. "There was no doubt in my mind that he was the deer that carried the sheds two years ago."

As he got closer, everything went into slow motion for Alan.

"Thoughts and memories of my first years of hunting with my dad and my uncle and hunting with my wife Bonnie filled my mind, while tears filled my eyes. When I got up to the buck, I had to sit down and let everything take its course. I couldn't believe that my dream had finally become reality."

In Canada, deer are not typically weighed, but averages are determined. Alan's 13-point buck averaged about 350 pounds, and it was estimated to be about 7½ years old. Its Boone and Crockett score was figured at 207-3/8 non-typical and 187-7/8 typical. It was entered in the all-time record book as a typical.

"I would like to thank the good Lord up above for his many blessings in my life," Alan said. "And I'd like to thank my family for all of their support – especially my wife Bonnie, for believing in me and my dreams and listening to deer hunting 24/7, 365 days a year."

Alan's story was featured in several hunting magazines recently, including the Oct. 2005 issue of North American Whitetail. But his story has another twist. He has been hunting with Bonnie since they met in 1980, and Bonnie has been chasing a dream of her own – the Caribou Slam, which involves taking one of each of the five species of caribou. She got the first, a barren ground caribou, in 2003 on a hunting trip with a girlfriend.

She persuaded Alan to go with her to pursue the second caribou this fall. They traveled together to the Northwest Territory, which is about 60 miles from the Arctic Circle, near the Yukon. Each was successful in taking a mountain caribou, along with two friends who traveled with them, Fred Deverse and Abe Getty.

"We all four took nice animals," Bonnie said. "It looks like Alan's will definitely make the Boone and Crockett book for mountain caribou. In camp, his scored 409, and mine scored 383. We're going to have them rescored after the 60-day drying period, and then we'll be able to find the true score."

Bonnie noted that the lesson in Alan's story is that dreams can come true.

"Everyone thinks that dreams are just dreams, and that they're not attainable," she said. "We're here to tell you that they are. If you want something hard enough, you can work for it. It might take some time – it's not an instant thing – but it can happen. That's what keeps you going from day to day – to have a goal and try to meet it."

IDEN USES BOW TO BAG HIS BEAR – McHenry resident Greg Iden recently earned the distinction of making the first kill with a bow and arrow since Maryland's black bear season was reinstated last fall. Iden bagged this 165-pound sow with a custom-made recurve bow and handmade cedar arrow while hunting on family property in the Big Run area on the first day of the 2005 bear hunt.

Kamp, Glotfelty Expected To Provide Husky Mat Leadership

With a state champion and a state runner-up back in his line-up this year, Northern High School wrestling coach Scott Stough is optimistic about the Huskies' chance for success this season.

The Huskies, who finished 9-5 as a team last year, will open their 2005-06 campaign next Tuesday by hosting Keyser and powerful Hyndman in a tri-match.

Back this year to provide team leadership and motivation are two-time state champion Casey Kamp, and Brock Glotfelty, a state runner-up last spring.

Two key losses to the squad noted by Stough are the graduation of third-place state finisher Michael Wolf, and the injury of experienced grappler Andy Ganoe, who sustained a knee injury in the recently completed football season.

"We are also going to have a depth problem in some of our weight classes," he said

Stough believes that, in dual matches, the Huskies will receive their strongest competition from Beall, Fairmont Senior, and county rival Southern.

"We will definitely be the underdog in some of our matches, but with hard work and some luck, I think we will pull off some upsets," he said.

He added that they will also have their work cut out for them in the three tournaments on the schedule, particularly the Thomas Chevrolet Tournament in Bedford, Pa.

Stough is being assisted by Aaron Hordubay.

Next Tuesday's tri-match on the Huskies' mats is slated to get under way at 6 p.m.

First Weekend's State Deer Tally Ranks GC Sixth

Garrett County came in sixth among Maryland counties reporting their preliminary deer harvest numbers for the opening weekend of the state's deer firearms season, according to the state's Department of Natural Resources. However, each of the five counties that had higher kill numbers than Garrett included a one- or two-day antlerless deer take, while GC hunters were limited to an antlered-only harvest for both Saturday and Sunday's hunt.

The top six county harvests in the state were reported by Washington County with 2,183 deer; Frederick with 1,408; Kent with 966; Carroll with 949; Queen Anne's with 874; and Garrett with 854. Charles was seventh with 826 deer, and Garrett's neighbor Allegany came in eighth with 785.

Statewide, hunters reported harvesting 17,151 deer during opening weekend. Overall, weekend harvest numbers were down slightly from last year. The slight decline of 793 deer from last year's opening weekend is likely a result of a reduced deer population in some parts of the state and anticipated minor differences in reporting rates and data acquisition between a new telephone and Internet check-in system and the traditional check station system it replaced, according to DNR.

The deer harvest numbers will remain preliminary until the data can be thoroughly analyzed. For further information on hunting in Maryland, persons may consult the DNR web site at www.dnr.maryland.gov.

MORE THAN WORDS

Words can't express how appreciative my family and I are for the overwhelming support that has been given to us since my husband's recent motorcycle accident.

There is no way that I could even begin to list everyone who has shown their LOVE to us during this hardship, but it has been proven that angels come in all shapes, sizes, age, and gender.

THANK YOU – to one who called 911, to the young man who stopped and cut off my husband's helmet, to all who were with me at the ER, to all who made a visit to Morgantown, to all who sent cards, snacks, money, personal items, cleaned my house, took care of my animals, whatever. No matter how large or small you may think it was, it was a lot. Thank you! Thank you for just a sincere "I'm Sorry" from those walking by who didn't even know me.

A special "Thank You" to all who have helped raise money for my husband's therapy, doctor bills and our personal bills.

A special, special "Thank You" to my family and friends for being there when we needed you the most. I could have NEVER done it without you. I LOVE YOU ALL.

I THANK YOU FOR EVERYTHING MATERIAL BUT EVEN MORE SO, MY THANKS AND PRAISE IS TO GOD. GOD, THANK YOU FOR SENDING ME ALL THESE ANGELS WHO PRAYED FOR US AND WITH US, AND FOR THOSE WHO CONTINUE TO DO SO. MY FAMILY STILL NEEDS A LOT OF PRAYER, AND I THANK YOU FOR WHAT IS TO COME.

MOST SINCERELY,
GREG, CHRISTIE, KODIE AND KAYLA DAWSON

Man Handed One-Year Term For Assault

An Oakland man who pleaded guilty to assaulting a woman at a local tavern was sentenced to one year in jail during a recent Garrett County District Court session.

Lance Lee Logsdon, 30, received a two-year sentence, half of which was suspended, and was placed on three years of supervised probation by Judge Ralph M. Burnett. The second-degree assault charge stemmed from a September domestic altercation at Shorty's Bar, located along Garrett Highway in the Gortner area. Sheriff's deputies arrested Logsdon after he grabbed a woman by the throat and began choking her during an argument in the bar's parking lot.

The woman reportedly lost consciousness, and Logsdon fled on foot as several patrons came outside to the woman's aid. Deputies located Logsdon a short time later hiding under a camper top located near the establishment. One additional charge of second-degree assault was not prosecuted by the state attorney's office.

In other District Court news, an Oakland man who pleaded guilty to drug possession received a six-month jail term.

Victor Frank Gardea Jr., 26, admitted to illegal possession of the prescription medication Adderall, commonly used to treat Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), and was handed a two-year sentence, 18 months of which was suspended, and was placed on three years of supervised probation by Judge Burnett. Gardea's November 2004 arrest came after a search of his Oak Street apartment by Garrett County Narcotics Task Force detectives, who discovered several pills, some whole and others crushed, of the medication. An additional charge of marijuana possession was not prosecuted.

Nicholas Andrew Brown, 25, McHenry, pleaded guilty to violating an ex parte order and received a three-month suspended sentence, a $300 fine, one year of unsupervised probation, and 30 hours of community service. He was jailed by sheriff's deputies in July after he had entered his ex-girlfriend's apartment on several occasions while she was at work.

Harry Richard Williamson Jr., 53, Lonaconing, pleaded guilty to misdemeanor theft and was handed a 60-day sentence and placed on two years' supervised probation. His August arrest by sheriff's deputies stemmed from the theft and forgery of several prescription request sheets from a local doctor's office. Williamson used the sheets to illegally obtain medications.

Joseph Karl Forebeck, 22, Hagerstown, entered a guilty plea to a marijuana possession charge and received a 30-day suspended sentence. Maryland State Police troopers jailed Forebeck in August 2003 when two bags of marijuana were discovered in his car during a traffic stop on Interstate 68.

Terrence David Gordon, 25, Hyndman, Pa., pleaded guilty to possession of drug paraphernalia and was fined $200. The charge stemmed from his March arrest by state troopers who found a smoking pipe in his car during a McHenry area traffic stop. An additional charge of marijuana possession was not prosecuted.

Gordon's passenger, Benjamin Donald Emerick, 23, also of Hyndman, was not prosecuted on charges of marijuana and paraphernalia possession.

Linda Marie Fazenbaker, 33, McHenry, who had pleaded not guilty to disorderly conduct and failure to obey a lawful order, was handed a probation before judgment (PBJ) on both charges, and was fined a total of $100. State troopers jailed her in June after she yelled curses at state troopers investigating the theft of a real estate sign. She was exonerated of an additional charge of resisting arrest.

Angel Louise Shorter, 28, Jessup, pleaded guilty to possession of drug paraphernalia and was handed a PBJ and fined $200, while a charge of marijuana possession was not prosecuted. Her August arrest by sheriff's deputies stemmed from a search during an I-68 traffic stop. Her luggage was found to contain a jar of the drug and a smoking device.

Misti Dawn McMaster, 20, Oakland, was handed a PBJ after she pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct, a charge filed by the Oakland Police Department in August after she reportedly assaulted her husband in front of police officers who were investigating a domestic altercation. An additional charge of second-degree assault was not prosecuted.

Michael Eugene Lawson, 48, Friendsville, was handed a stet ruling on a charge of failure to obey a lawful order, while additional charges of marijuana and paraphernalia possession, removing the label of a prescription bottle, and obstructing an investigation were not prosecuted. Lawson had been arrested in April after he reportedly interfered with a state police investigation of a domestic altercation at a property he was renting to the couple allegedly involved in the domestic dispute. At the time Lawson was placed under arrest, a prescription bottle containing medication and with an obliterated label was found in his pocket.

Robert William Sweitzer, 37, Oakland, was handed stet rulings on marijuana and paraphernalia possession charges filed by sheriff's deputies who stopped his vehicle in January near Loch Lynn. Sweitzer reportedly voluntarily turned over marijuana and rolling papers to the deputies.

Megan Kathleen Crabb, 21, Edgewater, received stet rulings on charges of possession of marijuana and paraphernalia, which were filed in May by state troopers after she returned to the scene of an accident where she had left her vehicle. As troopers were impounding the car before her arrival, they discovered a smoking device bearing suspected drug residue.

Five Charged With Hunting Violations

A concerned citizen's anonymous tip led to Sunday's apprehension of five individuals in possession of three illegally killed deer in the McHenry area, according to Natural Resources Police (NRP).

The five were located by NRP officers off Ginseng Springs Lane. Police charged a 15-year-old McHenry youth with two counts of possession of antlerless deer during closed season and failure to possess a hunter safety certificate, while a 14-year-old McHenry youth was charged with one count of possession of antlerless deer during closed season and failure to possess a hunter safety certificate.

Charges of hunting on private property without permission were filed against Ronald W. Reckner II, 19, of Accident, Wilbur P. Sines Jr., 19, of Friendsville, and a 16-year-old Accident youth.

Reckner and Sines were issued citations, while the three juveniles were referred to the Department of Juvenile Services.

A conviction could lead to a maximum penalty of $1,500 for each charge.

Illegal hunting activities can be reported on the Department of Natural Resources' 24-hour "Catch a Poacher" hotline at 1-800-635-6124. The anonymity of the caller is guaranteed.

MARINE CORPS LEAGUE IS "SEMPER FIDELIS" – The new Garrett County detachment of the Marine Corps League met at Proctor Kildow American Legion Post #71 recently, where the Corps's 230th anniversary was celebrated with cake and refreshments after the meeting. Among those on hand to prove that once a Marine, always a Marine were, from the left, Marine Corps veterans Gene Helbig Sr., David Browning, and Chris Helbig. The two Helbigs, father and son, were also the oldest and youngest Marines at the gathering and had the distinction of sharing the first piece of Marine Corps birthday cake. Membership is open to any Marine or Fleet Marine Forces corpsmen who has served honorably or is currently on active duty. Marines interested in joining the detachment as a charter member may contact Chuck Nolan at 301-334-8020. The group will meet again in January.

Fornear House Included In ARC Holiday Tours

The Western Potomac Chapter of the American Red Cross will host the 14th annual Home for the Holidays House Tours this weekend, Dec. 2 and 3. The house of Dan and Bobbi Fornear is one of five homes featured this year.

The Fornear home, located along Sorbus Lane in the Blakeslee development at Deep Creek Lake, was built in 2001 by Don Nemith Builders. The Fornears desired a "Colorado ski lodge" look to complement Garrett Coun-ty's mountainous terrain.

A circular driveway will bring guests up to the portico, where a chandelier made of moose antlers will light the way up stone steps.

HOME OF DAN AND BOBBI FORNEAR ON RED CROSS TOURS

Guests will enter through double doors adorned by a large metal sculpted deer. These doors open onto the great room, where a 14-foot Christmas tree will be arranged in front of the two-story floor-to-ceiling windows. A double-sided stacked stone fireplace is located in the great room, and is also open to the master bedroom.

In the kitchen, wormy chestnut cabinets and granite counters blend with the fieldstone floor. The dining room is lit by both a chandelier over the table as well as a wall of windows that afford views of Deep Creek Lake and wildlife. The lodge theme is continued in the master bedroom and bath, where a log bed is the focal point of the room.

Upstairs guests may visit four bedrooms with varying outdoorsy themes, including fishing, black bears, and forests. A large game room with a large screen television, pool table, and pinball machines takes up most of the bottom floor. Another Christmas tree, decorated with snowmen, will be on display on this floor.

All chandeliers, as well as many of the other lighting fixtures throughout the house were made with authentic moose, elk, and deer antlers.

Tickets for the tours, including all ages, are $8 in advance and $10 on the days of the event. They are on sale at the following pharmacies: Proudfoot's, Gregg's, and Deep Creek, as well as Arrowhead Market. All proceeds from the ticket sales will go to the local chapter of the American Red Cross.

The directions to the various homes will be printed on the back of the ticket, and directional signs will be placed at intersections to help guests find the locales. Local businesses have donated a variety of items that will be raffled off at each location. Guests will be asked to remove their shoes before going into the homes, and no photographing or videotaping will be allowed.

The other homes on this year's tour are those of Ruth and Robert Hinebaugh, Kevin and Cindy Heselbach, Rhoda and Ralph Keefer, and Chuck and Linda Wieland.

HIGH SCHOOLS RECEIVE GRANT FROM EXXONMOBIL – Southern and Northern high schools each recently received a $500 grant from the ExxonMobil Educational Alliance program to support various programs at the schools. Southern High School received its grant from Oakland Exxon in Oakland and a spokesperson said they plan to use the money for physical education/athletics. Northern High School received its grant from Slopeside Exxon Market in McHenry, and a spokesperson said they plan to use the money for the reading program. Oakland Oil Company of Oakland is a local distributor and retailer for ExxonMobil and has worked with school officials to secure the grants. Only 4,000 grants are made available to schools across the country served by Exxon or Mobil stations. The grants were made possible by funding from the ExxonMobil Corporation. "The schools work hard to make learning interesting and fun," said Steve Stuck of Oakland Oil Company. "As an Exxon distributor and retailer, I am proud to help young people in our local areas." Pictured above, from the left, are Gary Reichenbecher, NHS principal; Lisa Sisler, owner of Slopeside; Stuck; Karen Whiteman, manager of Oakland Exxon; and Tom Woods, SHS principal.

Md. Patient Safety Center Earns Award

Sharing credit with the state and the health care community, the Maryland Patient Safety Center recently celebrated being honored with the 2005 John M. Eisenberg Patient Safety and Quality Award for national/regional innovation in patient safety.

"Receiving the prestigious John M. Eisenberg Patient Safety and Quality Award is a tremendous honor, but it is even more rewarding to know we are making real progress improving patient safety here in Maryland," said Maryland Patient Safety Center director Bill Minogue, M.D.

The Maryland Patient Safety Center, created by the Maryland Health Care Commission in 2004, is a collaboration between the Maryland Hospital Association and the Delmarva Foundation.

"The Center has made patient safety everybody's job, and there is strong evidence that working together, we are making Maryland patient care safer," said MHA senior vice president Vahe Kazandjian.

More than 2,000 individuals, representing every hospital in the state was well as other health care providers, have received training from the center on the causes of unsafe practices and ways to design safer systems.

Garrett County Memorial Hospital, a member of the Maryland Hospital Association and recently the recipient of two health care quality awards from the Delmarva Foundation, is currently participating in the Institute of Safe Medication Practice Medication Safety Self-Assessment. This self-assessment is sponsored by the Maryland Patient Safety Center and is a tool to monitor progress in initiatives to improve the safe use of medications.

According to Lance Rhodes, BS, PharmD, director of pharmacy and a GCMH patient safety officer, this assessment has taken place six times since June 2000. "Each time we took it we have improved [illegible]," said Rhodes.

"The Center's mission and collaborative approach have galvanized the support and participation of the entire health care community," said Maulik Joshi, president and CEO of the Delmarva Foundation. "The success of our first collaborative has generated real excitement and commitment to do more to ensure that Maryland hospitals are the safest in the nation.

"What makes the Maryland Patient Safety Center unique from just about every other patient safety program is that the state gave it a mandate to innovate and go beyond data collection to actually putting practical, measurable safety improvements in place," said Del. Brian McHale, a sponsor of legislation to create the Maryland Center and a member of the Center's advisory board.

The center has designed a voluntary reporting system for health care providers to report "close calls" and errors that do not result in permanent harm to the patient. This information will supplement the mandatory reporting of serious adverse events already being collected by the state that will help health care providers improve their systems and reduce mistakes.

The activities of the center are offered at no charge to Maryland health care providers and are funded by the Maryland Hospital Association, the Delmarva Foundation, and Maryland hospitals, with additional financial assistance from the Maryland Health Services Cost Review Commission.

DSS Staff Donate To Md. Charities; Luncheon Held

Garrett County Department of Social Services (GCDSS) recently held a "thank-you" luncheon for staff members contributing to the 2005 Maryland Charities Campaign (MCC).

Featured speaker for the event was Lynn Bowens, customer relations, Community Service Administration, Maryland Department of Human Resources (DHR).

This year's campaign theme was "Changing Lives One by One." The drive ran from Sept. 12 through Nov. 8, with GCDSS staff members pledging $6,956.10. They exceeded their goal of $6,656. For the past three years, the agency has had 100 percent participation by staff members, who have contributed a total of $39,766.85 over the past 11 years.

Spearheaded by the Department of Housing and Community Development, the annual campaign allows Maryland state employees and retirees to give to more than 700 participating charitable organizations. The donations provide meals to the hungry, services to the disabled, funds to research disease, and technology to clean the environment, according to the DHR.

"THANK-YOU" LUNCHEON HELD – Garrett County Department of Social Services (GCDSS) recently held a "thank-you" luncheon for staff members who pledged nearly $7,000 to the 2005 Maryland Charities Campaign. This is the third year that the department has had 100 percent participation by its staff members. See story. Above is the GCDSS Maryland Charities Committee. In the front row, left to right, are, Elaina Meyers and Linda Bolding Colaw. In the back row are GCDSS director Rick DeWitt, Nancy Humberson, John Merrill, Darla Panther (partially hidden), and Jessica Murray. Pictured below is featured speaker Lynn Bowens, customer relations, Community Service Administration, Maryland Department of Human Resources.

Each fall, pledge cards and the "Maryland Charity Campaign Agency Guide and Directory" are distributed to the employees and retirees. The card enables the contributor to specify the charitable organizations and amount of contribution or the amount of a payroll deduction throughout the year.

John Merrill was recognized at this year's luncheon. As the department's campaign coordinator for the past 11 years, Merrill has traveled throughout the state and visited numerous agencies on behalf of the MCC effort.

"John is retiring from state service at the end of this year and his enthusiasm, commitment, and dedication to the Maryland Charities Campaign and the agency will be missed," said a GCDSS spokesperson.

Local business and individuals who donated to the campaign and luncheon were Biederlack; Pizzeria Uno; Fitzwater Furniture; Fred and Tammy Fulk, North Glade Bed & Breakfast; Winner's Circle; Brenda's Pizzeria, employees and friends; LeRoy and Norma Bolding, who donated the grand prize of a weekend at their home in Bethany Beach, Del.; and Carma White, who prepared and catered the luncheon.

Last year, Maryland employees and retirees raised $3,784,562 for the campaign. Their goal this year was $3.7 million.

"Now more than any other time in the history of the MCC, it is important for us to all come together and help stabilize our communities," said Christopher McCabe, DHR secretary.

KITZMILLER

PRAYER MEETING

The Harvest Time prayer meeting will be held at the Blaine Full Gospel Church next Tuesday, Dec. 6, at 7 p.m.

The Kitzmiller Empowerment Group is sponsoring "Help Trim a Tree" to raise money for the Kitzmiller Fire Department's "Toys for Tots" and "Christmas Food Baskets." Those wishing to participate are invited to purchase bows to place on the tree in conjunction with the town lighting of the tree at the community building on December 9.

Annual Hetrick Reunion Held

The 24th annual Jonas Hetrick reunion was held in August at Oak Grove Mennonite Church in Grantsville. There were 35 persons attending the event.

Miriam Berkley conducted the opening prayer and Esther Durst, reunion committee president, a reading.

Following the meal, Esther conducted the business meeting. The minutes and treasurer's report were read and approved. Officers will remain the same for the next year.

Entertainment was provided by the Maple City Blue Grass Band.

The prizes (food baskets) were won by Blanche Shaffer, Margie Shifflett, Joe Berkley, Ann Troutman, and Norma Jean Smitley.

The white elephant auction was conducted by first-time auctioneer Jack Shifflett.

It was suggested and agreed on that next year the reunion will be called "The Jonas Hetrick and Annie Speicher Hetrick Reunion." The event will be held Aug. 20, 2006, at the same location.

TV-PIPELINE

Have no fear: 'Factor' is back this week

By Jay Bobbin
● Zap2it

Joe Rogan

Q: I have been watching for "Fear Factor" on NBC, but I see no sign of it returning. Is it coming back? –Dori Lande, Glessee, Wis.

A: It's your lucky week. The show actually returns Tuesday, Dec. 6, as host Joe Rogan launches its sixth season. The new episodes will feature various themes, including a reality-stars miniseries with alumni of programs such as "Survivor" and "American Idol" and a family edition that will feature Shaquille O'Neal as a guest star.

Q: My wife and I have a dispute over an actress on "E-Ring." Is the blonde who plays Samantha the same actress who was an attorney on "Law & Order"? –Richard Ogrin, Houston

A: We can see the resemblance, too. You're likely thinking of Elisabeth Rohm, who spent four seasons on "Law & Order" as Serena Southerlyn. The "E-Ring" actress is Kelly Rutherford, previously a cast regular on shows such as "Melrose Place" and "Homefront."

Q: I know a lot of people who watched "Over There" and thought it was a very good show. Can you tell me if it will be back next season? –Walter Nolan, Inverness, Fla.

A: Unfortunately, not enough of your acquaintances watched the Iraq War drama to convince FX to renew the show. In an unusual move, just after the season finale aired, the network released a statement indicating that the Steven Bochco-produced series would not be back.

FX president and general manager John Landgraf said the cancellation "was motivated entirely by 'Over There's' ratings performance and our belief that the numbers are reflective of what the show is about, rather than its quality or entertainment value." The pilot episode is available on DVD, and the entire existing season may also be released on disc.

Q: I was wondering about Michelynne McGuire, who appeared on "The Starlet" and won a contract with The WB Network and a role on "One Tree Hill." She never appeared on the show. When will she be joining the cast, or will she be on the show at all? –Angelica Canales, San Juan, Texas

A: In fact, McGuire did appear on "One Tree Hill" not long after her "Starlet" victory. She was promised a walk-on role, not a major, ongoing part, and she played that in an episode titled "Something I Can Never Have," which originally aired in April. It can be found on the second-season "One Tree Hill" DVD set.

CHRISTMAS TREE LIGHTS
by Dr. Thomas P. Sheahen

Q. I've been told you can save energy by not turning on Christmas tree lights. Is there very much savings that way?

I think whoever told you that is from the "Bah! Humbug!" Association of Scrooges. The amount of electricity used on Christmas lighting is really minor.

It's not hard to do the calculation of energy used. One of those little tiny light bulbs draws about 0.45 watts of power. So a string of 100 bulbs draws 45 watts. Compare that with a typical household light bulb of 60 or 75 watts. If you plug in seven strings of 100 bulbs each, you're using 315 watts – which is about like turning on one of those standing lamps with a gently curving bowl where a high-intensity bulb shines up toward the ceiling. Having a couple of strong reading lamps on in various parts of your house is also about equivalent.

How much does it cost? Well, suppose you leave all seven strings of lights on for 6 hours a day, for 40 days during the Christmas season. 40 x 6 x 7 x 45 = 75,600 watt-hours, or 75.6 kilowatt-hours (kwh). With electricity selling for 6.6 cents per kwh in Garrett County, that will set you back just about $5 for the season. Even in a high-priced big city, still it would only cost about $15.

You have to be a little careful not to plug all the strings into one another in succession, because you could blow a small fuse that sits inside the wire. (This is not to be confused with tripping a circuit breaker in your home due to an overload.) The typical string of lights contains a 3-amp fuse, so if all 7 strings were plugged into each other end to end, then with each of 700 tiny bulbs drawing 0.45 watts from a 115 volt circuit, you'd be pushing very close to the 3-amp limit of the fuse in the wire. Just plug them into two different sockets and you'll have no trouble.

There was a comedy movie some years back with Chevy Chase as a beleaguered father who overdid it with the outdoor Christmas lighting, so that the neighbors were blinded by the glare; and he kept blowing fuses. But that's what comedy movies are for.

If you really want to save some serious energy (and money) during the Christmas season, look around your house. If your furnace humidifier is in good working order, so that your house has adequate humidity, you will not feel chilly at normal temperatures, and you'll resist the urge to turn up the thermostat. Better yet, wear a sweater and turn down the thermostat a few degrees. Dry your hair really well with a towel before turning on your hair dryer. Turn off a few lights that aren't necessary.

But don't cheat yourself out of enjoying Christmastime decorations. Holiday lighting is a tradition that goes back centuries, long before the discovery of electricity, and the brightness creates a cheerful mood for everyone.

Dr. Sheahen is a physicist who was educated at MIT. He lives at Deep Creek Lake and has taught physics at Garrett College. Persons wishing to submit questions for this column may e-mail them to newsroom@therepublicannews.com.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• The invention of the electric light brought about many changes in society, but not all of them are obvious. For example, it's not very well known that people sleep less than they once did. Before 1910, people slept an average of nine hours a night, and since then it's been about seven and a half. Sleep researchers have shown in the laboratory that if people are deprived of electric light, they will go back to sleeping nine hours a night.

• Controversial radio personality Howard Stern was fired from his job as a college deejay.

• This may seem like an odd question, but can you sing and cry at the same time? Someone can, evidently, because there's a word for it: chantepleure.

• Famed conqueror Alexander the Great had quite an ego (perhaps unsurprisingly). He named a total of 20 cities after himself — including Alexandria, Egypt — and even named one after his horse, Bucephalus.

• You may be surprised to learn that famed author John Steinbeck majored in marine biology when he was in college.

• It was noted humorist and essayist P.J. O'Rourke who made the following sage observation: "Humor is a terrific tool for explaining things, especially when what you're explaining is frightening or dull and complicated."

• Studies show that 40 percent of all tornadoes occur between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m.

• America is quite a watery country, so it seems. According the Coast Guard, the United States has 95,000 miles of shoreline, and there are 290,000 square miles of lakes, rivers and bays.

• In ancient Greece, mushrooms were considered to be food only for the wealthy.

• On Dec. 10, 1830, poet Emily Dickinson is born in Amherst, Mass. Although she wrote 1,775 poems, only seven were published in her lifetime.

• On Dec. 6, 1907, in West Virginia's Marion County, an explosion in a network of mines kills 361 coal miners — the worst mining disaster in American history. Nationwide, a total of 3,242 miners were killed in mine accidents in 1907.

• On Dec. 7, 1925, future Tarzan actor Johnny Weissmuller sets the world record for the 150-yard freestyle swim. MGM later cast Weissmuller to play the title role in "Tarzan the Ape Man" (1932).

• On Dec. 5, 1933, the 18th Amendment is repealed, bringing an end to the era of national prohibition of alcohol. Some states continued Prohibition by maintaining statewide temperance laws. Mississippi, the last dry state in the Union, ended Prohibition in 1966.

• On Dec. 11, 1941, Buick lowers its prices to reflect the absence of spare tires in its new cars. Widespread shortages caused by World War II had led to many quotas and laws designed to conserve America's resources, including prohibiting spare tires in new cars.

• On Dec. 9, 1958, the right-wing John Birch Society is established. Founded with only 11 members, by the early 1960s its membership had grown to nearly 100,000. The Society remains active today, and its members seek "to expose a semi-secret international cabal whose members sit in the highest places of influence and power worldwide."

Flea Stoppers vs. Fleabusters

Q. My name is Jan, and I am the owner and manufacturer of Flea Stoppers. "Janis in S.C." was correct — there are two of us out here; however, I believe her information may be wrong regarding Fleabusters, and it certainly is incorrect regarding our product Flea Stoppers. I hold a degree in biology and chemistry and studied to be a vet, and I can assure your readers that there is no ground glass — however finely done — in our product, nor would I like to believe my competitor puts glass in its product.

I suspect the reference is to silicates (which is the major component of sand and glass). There are two major differences in our products in that Fleabusters is very fine powder, almost like flour. Flea Stoppers, however, is a mini-granule, a little finer than salt or sugar but similar in appearance. We can be reached at www.fleastoppers.com, or your readers may call me at 1-800-934-3532 should they need more information. Great column — I had much response to it!

A. Thanks for writing! I, too, had a lot of response to those two columns, and I am glad for the clarification. Some of my readers wanted to know where to purchase these products, too. Flea Stoppers can be purchased at online retailers (type "Flea Stoppers" into Google's search window), or simply call the toll-free number listed above to find out where to purchase it.

Fleabusters can be purchased directly from the Web site www.fleabuster.com. A list of full-service locations across the U.S. is also listed on the site, with toll-free numbers for each.

Q. I have a stuffed hound-dog toy that I purchased at an Elvis Presley concert in 1972 at the Hilton in Las Vegas. Is anyone interested in buying it? — Judy, Varna, Ill.

A. Don't be cruel — contact Presley collector and Elvis Forever Fan Club president Susan Still, P.O. Box 1066, Miami, FL 33780. Burt Atwood is a serious collector. His address is 894 Greenway Road, Woodbridge, CT 06525.

Q. I have two brass horns that were used in a band in Illinois during the early 1900s. I hate to simply throw them away. Any suggestions? — Tom, Chicago

A. You might want to contact the Historic Brass Society, 148 West 23rd St., 2A, New York, NY 10010. Chuck Hollocker is a collector and might also be interested. His address is 2501 Honeysuckle Drive, Richardson, TX 75082.

Q. I have a small collection of Iowa newspapers from the 1930s. Are they worth anything, or should I just toss them? — Art, Dubuque, Iowa

A. Most newspapers from the 1920s and '30s are atmosphere editions. By that, I mean they are of interest mostly because of the ads and occasional story, but have little historic value. Most newspapers of this type sell in the $3 to $5 range. There are exceptions, of course.

Two experts who might give you a more definitive answer are Mark Mitchell, 3002 Winter Pine Court, Fairfax, VA 22031; and Rick Brown, 6031 Winterset, Lansing, MI 48911.

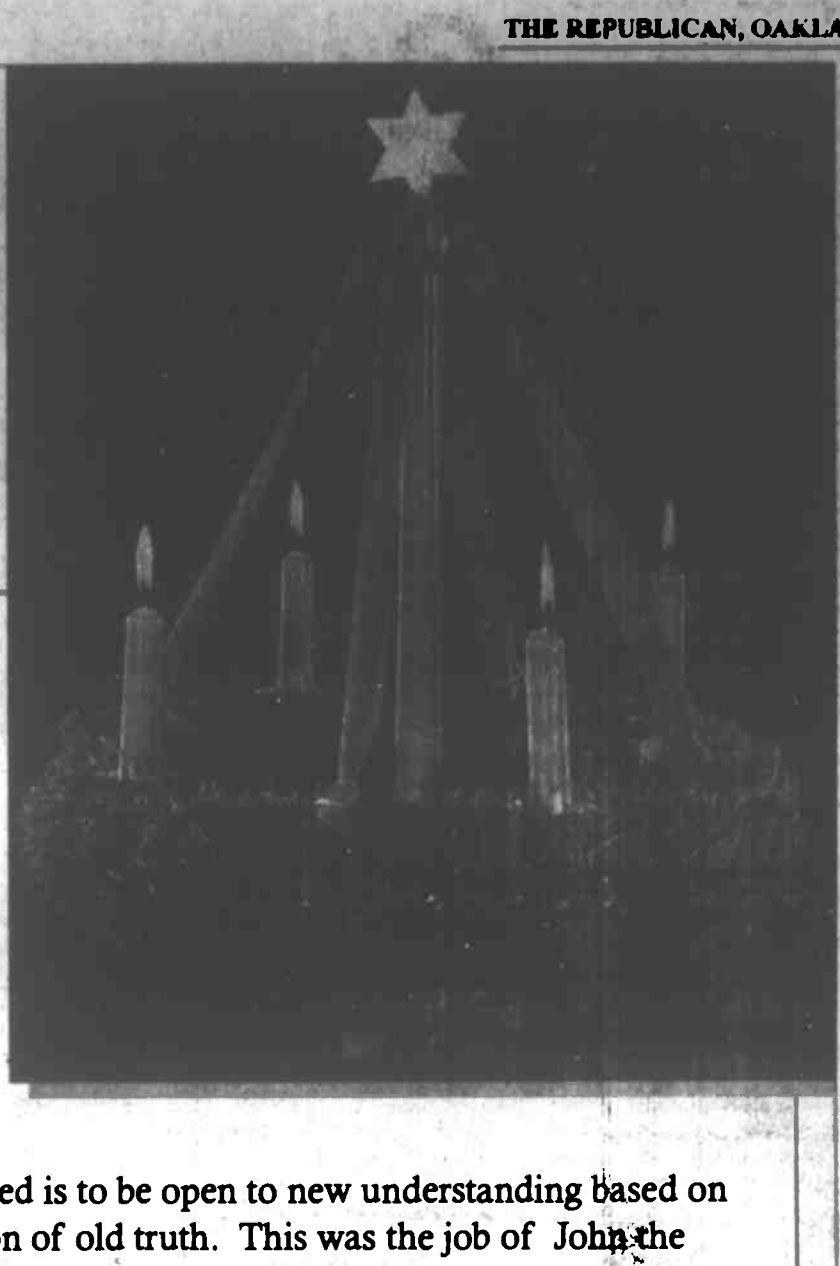
Advancing Through Advent



During the rush of getting ready for Christmas, do you ever wish Christmas came some other time - it's too busy in December! When is a good time for Christmas? Put another way, when are we prepared for Christmas?

One way to be prepared is to be open to new understanding based on new teaching and revelation of old truth. This was the job of John the Baptist. He was, as the angel told his father, Zechariah, "to make ready a people prepared for the Lord". (Luke 1:17) He was sent to remind the people that a messiah was coming, and he readied them to receive new truth in the context of old hopes, dreams, and prayers.

In this season of Advent, the four Sundays before Christmas, we celebrate an old truth, the coming of Christ. As we light a new candle on the traditional Advent wreath each week, we are reminded anew to prepare for the arrival of something momentous. Reflecting on an event that happened so long ago can reveal to us a new understanding of how to live our lives today.

Prepare for Christmas in advance this Advent; attend your house of worship weekly and learn something new.

Have you ever noticed that young children will sometimes respond to scary things by first running and screaming, and then laughing? Often, their first impulse is to make a game out of being scared, and surprisingly, they seem to genuinely enjoy the experience. However, the older we get, the more likely we are to seemingly cower in some dark corner or to want to utterly destroy the big, bad monster. Perhaps there is some deeper wisdom in the child's response. And perhaps, those monsters that we fear are really things with which we should make friends. How often do we fear things that end up being good for us in one way or another? For example, many people fear certain social interactions, and yet when they actually "take the plunge," they readily admit that there was nothing to fear and much to look forward to. And although we naturally fear the unknown, perhaps we ought to greet it with more enthusiasm, and less fear, the way children so often do.

To the pure all things are pure, but to the corrupt and unbelieving nothing is pure; their very minds and consciences are corrupted.
RSV Titus 1:15

Kava Kava Provides A Sedative Effect

Kava kava is an herb native to the South Pacific region. This herb comes from the root of the Piper methysticum plant. Kava kava acts on a center in the brain to induce relaxation. It is commonly used to treat anxiety and insomnia. It has also been used in the management of fibromyalgia. The usual dose of kava kava to treat anxiety is 100-250 mg 1-3 times/day as needed (standardized to contain 30% active ingredients per dose). The usual dose to treat insomnia is 250-500 mg at bedtime. Kava kava is available in capsules or in teas.

Individuals who take prescription medications for sleep or anxiety should not take kava kava, due to the increased risk of sedation and respiratory depression (slowed breathing). Other drugs that should not be used with Kava kava are alcohol, haloperidol, risperidone, metoclopramide, and acetaminophen. Persons with a history of liver disease should not take Kava kava and it should not be used by women who are pregnant or breastfeeding. Remember to consult your health care provider before using any nonprescription medicine or nutritional supplement.

Youth Program Participants Take Field Trip To D.C.

The Garrett County Success for Youth program recently sponsored a trip to the Smithsonian National Air and Space Museum for participants from Southern and Northern high schools. The program is funded by the Workforce Investment Act grant and is coordinated between the Western Maryland Consortium, Garrett College, and the Board of Education.

Students were given a guided tour of the museum showing the development of aircraft from the first planes to modern jets. The space section of the museum displayed the Enterprise, one of the shuttle carriers. The afternoon session included an IMax movie presentation of Fighter Pilot.

The Success for Youth program operates in both high schools, offering after school tutoring to students of the program. Summer jobs in both public and private businesses along with workshops and incentives are offered through the Western Maryland Consortium.

Students who are interested in the program may contact the Western Maryland Consortium office at 301-334-8136 for information.

Garrett College International Club Members Visit Embassies In D.C.

by Mykolas Gudalis

Members of Garrett College's World View International Club visited two embassies in Washington, D.C., recently as part of their second trip to the nation's capital. During the outing, international students visited Washington memorials, the Capitol, the promenade in front of the White House, Old Town Alexandria, and Arlington National Cemetery.

Reflecting the diversity of the countries represented within the club, the students chose to visit the two embassies – Canadian and Lithuanian.

Club members enjoyed a self-guided tour in the Canadian Embassy, watched a short movie about the country, and a performance of the bagpipes band of the Royal Navy Academy. Four Canadian students enjoyed their short visit "home."

After visiting the Canadian Embassy and a short city tour, students rushed to 16th Street to the embassy of Lithuania. They were greeted warmly by Jurgita Dapkute, responsible for cultural and education affairs, and Kestutis Vaskelevicius, press and public affairs officer.

Hot coffee, tea, and snacks were ready for the World View International Club members. Students enjoyed a photo exhibition by Lithuanian photographers, spoke to the embassy staff, and explored the premises of the embassy's Italian-style building, which was constructed 80 years ago.

Later, the students were personally greeted by the Lithuanian ambassador to the United States and Mexico, Vygandas Usackas. The ambassador spoke to students about Lithuanian history, its short period of independence from 1917 to 1939, and the years under the Soviet Russian occupation from 1939 to 1991. He profiled the changes that took place after Lithuania broke from the USSR after the "Singing Revolution" and regained its independence in 1991. He also mentioned major political changes after the country joined NATO and European Union, and shared his excitement about Lithuanian-American cooperation in the fields of economy, social integration, politics, and culture. Next, students were shown a movie that was used to portray Lithuania at the Expo 2005 event in Tokyo, Japan.

Ambassador Usackas said he was happy to see students from such different countries in the Lithuanian Embassy. "You never know, one day some Lithuanian company may decide to have business with South Africa or import goods from India," he said. "Part of our job here in the embassy is to support and help to develop such relations."

Lithuanian's modern history has been a dramatic one, from independence to occupation to re-establishment of independence, and the embassy in Washington played an important role throughout these events. On July 27, 1922, the United States government recognized the Lithuanian government de jure. Despite the many years of Soviet occupation, Lithuania's Independence Day was commemorated without interruption at the Legation, which continued to remind official Washington of the illegal incorporation of Lithuania into the USSR. From 1940 to 1947 the Legation published a bulletin titled "The Lithuanian Situation," which was sent to congress and other official agencies of the U.S. government. In 1991 after U.S. recognition of the re-established independent Lithuania, the Legation became an embassy, one of the most important Lithuanian diplomatic missions.

International students were some of the last visitors to be hosted in the old embassy building. On Dec. 1 the building will be closed for the renovation and extension while the embassy will be temporarily moved to the new premises. The World View International Club members recently signed and sent a thank-you card to the Lithuanian embassy.

"I really enjoyed the visit," said South African student Bongani Dlamini. "The embassy staff was very friendly to us. I got to know a little more about Lithuania. I've got the impression that it is nice and friendly country. I hope one day I will visit Lithuania," Dlamini stated.

"It was a pleasant visit," noted American student Erik Crowe. "People at the embassy talked to each one of us individually, and the ambassador took time out of his extremely busy schedule to talk to us about Lithuania."

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

Among the many large family gatherings for Thanksgiving in Bittinger were the members of the Jonas and Ferne Beachy family, including Sally and Lenny Poholsky and son Torrey; Cindy and Sam Stanton; Lea and Michael Pochet; and Brent and Kelly Beachy and children, who dined at Brent's parents, Dave and Nancy Beachy.

The Robert and Ruth Glotfelty family members who dined together included college students Robbie and Blakely Glotfelty, and Matthew Bass from the University of Maryland; Claire Sussman, home from the West Virginia University; Caitlin, Meredith Sussman, and me; Barry Glotfelty from Frederick; Rodney, Marci, Darryl and Elliot Glotfelty; and Ruth DiPaolo. Lesa and Maddy Whittemore had their Thanksgiving feast at the home of Carol, Kevin, Scotty, and Emma Bass. Of course, the dinner included all of the traditional dinner items.

My Claire was disappointed by the devastating winter weather, with the wind chill below zero, which prevented her from going over to Morgantown for the "Backyard Brawl" game between West Virginia and Pitt. WVU won the game, but I doubt it was worth sitting in an open-air stadium in that kind of weather. I noticed that many of the fans departed at halftime. Although Bill and Landon Southerly did attend, along with Lenny and Torrey Poholsky, and Michael Pochet, Sheila and Tyler said "no way" were they going to brave that weather. On Saturday night Sheila and Tyler did join Bill and Landon for a basketball game between WVU and LSU.

Thanksgiving guests of Beulah Moon were the Jay Moon and family from Arlington, Va., and Brad Moon.

Linda Buckel's daughter Tina and husband Mark Galluci of McHenry hosted a big feast for Thanksgiving attended by Linda, Kim, and Doug Collins and children, Lana and Larry Roby, as well as Mark's mother and, of course, Lottie Brenneman.

Although I tried very hard to gather more news from Bittinger, all I got was answering machines. Overall, I have to say the day of "over the woods to Grandmother's house" is pretty much over. It certainly is a shame, because my family had a big reunion with my sister, brothers, in-laws, cousins, friends, and children. It was a true feast and celebration. One traditional activity for my family at Thanksgiving dinner was accomplished, with the kids assembled for a picture for Christmas cards. I eagerly wait for my girls' pictures to be developed and printed because this year I will do a good job with my Christmas cards.

Although my mother Ruth DiPaolo seems to be recovering nicely, she is reluctant to get back into her usual activities. It worries me that the "Energizer Bunny" seems to have lost its charge. Visiting her at home were Sally Poholsky, Ferne Beachy, Beulah Moon, Ethel Buckel, Sheila Buckel, Jenny McNally, and Linda Sweinburger.

Michael Caparella, husband of Terri Legeer, and son-in-law of Bob and Maxine Legeer, died last Friday. A graveside service was held Tuesday at the Bittinger Cemetery with Pastor Mitchell officiating. A luncheon was held at the Bittinger fire hall following the burial.

Ruby Buckel Orendorf, Sunset Beach, N.C., was recently a patient in the hospital, suffering from bacterial pneumonia. She has been discharged from the hospital, and is recuperating at home.

This Monday after Thanksgiving was pretty dismal – foggy and chilly, with horrible winds. However, it was not near as bad compared to the Midwest, where real winter weather hit. The pictures on the Weather Channel filled me with dread, as it will not be long until those conditions will arrive here which will mean staying at home, drifting snow in my lane, snow-covered roads, and brutal, frigid temperatures, none of which is new for winter in Bittinger.

I saw an accident waiting to happen, as a large tree leaned above the power lines along Rock Lodge Road just east of the State Park Road. It is sure to come down when it is covered by a thick heavy snow, or else in high winds. Actually, Rock Lodge Road's stretch between the spring and lake was littered with downed branches. It was not much different than pictures of the damages from tornados in the Midwest. Some big branches with leaves still on them partially covered the road.

I successfully completed my Christmas shopping before bad weather hit. I only have to wait for some mail orders to arrive. I also finished essential supply shopping for a couple of months for things that you do not want to run out to the store for in a blizzard.

Something else I am thankful for is that with the reasonably warm November I did not have to burn too much of my firewood supply and that precious fuel oil. But that will change soon.

Margaret Hershberger Wagner was unable to join Sam, Ellen, and Brent Housley for Thanksgiving dinner.

The Bill Southerly family and the Denny Buckel family also had their separate Thanksgiving feasts this year.

Several bucks were harvested on the Buckel property behind our farm. In fact, I heard several shots Sunday morning and imagine they were getting their firearms sighted in. In spite of the blizzard during the last week, Barry Glotfelty joined Walter Havdel on Saturday morning for some cross-country skiing in McHenry. The cold weather made the snow perfect for skiing.

The Bill Buckel family hosted a Thanksgiving dinner. On hand were Bill's mother, Harriett Buckel; daughter Karla home from West Virginia University; and son Derek, who is in Naval school in Charleston, S.C. Derek will complete his studies and graduate just before Christmas and be home again for the Christmas holidays. Bonnie McElroy and family from Mt. Airy visited the Buckel home, and also her mother Harriett at Cherry Hill Assisted Living. Larry Buckel, Cumberland, was a Sunday visitor.

Steve Schlosnagle, who was our Northern High School valedictorian, is usually pretty bright, having written a Garrett County history book, but when he told me he believes that November is the most beautiful month, I had to question his judgment on this idea. To me November is even more dismal than March, which shares the most characteristics with November, with those dismal dreary, wet, gray days. At least March is only a stone's throw away from spring, with November being a snowball's throw to real winter.

However, no where in the world is more beautiful as Bittinger in June, and very few places have more lovely winter scenes as here. That is, if you can see them through our too common whiteouts.

Nature Connection

by Liz McDowell & Ron Boyer

The skies are incredibly blue on a cold, clear day in late autumn. You've been cutting, splitting, and stacking firewood all morning and are ready for a lunch break. As you approach your home the birds on the nearby feeder scatter. But as you climb the porch steps you spy a bundle of feathers huddled on the floor. It remains motionless as you draw near. You scoop it up in your hands, but it doesn't flinch. The reason for its lack of response is obvious – the tiny bird has mistaken the reflection of trees in a window as a safe flyway. The victim this time is a white-throated sparrow, Zonotrichia albicollis.

According to the pamphlet, "Birds of Garrett County," the white-throated sparrow is uncommonly observed here in the fall and spring, rarely in the winter, and never in the summer. This attractive sparrow weighs just under an ounce and gets its name from its dark-bordered, white throat. It has a distinctive yellow patch of tiny feathers between its eye and bill. Head stripes in adults range from tan and brown to white and black, regardless of the gender. The white-throated sparrow breeds mainly in New England and much of Canada. Perhaps that's one reason its song of two short whistles followed by three triple notes is often described as sounding like "Oh, sweet Canada Canada Canada" by birders.

You cup the stunned sparrow in your hands, protecting it from potential predators and providing extra warmth to aid its recovery. After a few minutes you open your hands, hoping your feathered friend will be well enough to take flight. A few seconds pass…it looks at you once more before flying back to the ground below the feeder. All seems well, at least this time. But according to reports, 75% of birds that initially appear unharmed from a collision with a window will not survive, either as a direct result of their injuries or as an indirect consequence of their increased susceptibility to predation.

Estimates on the number of birds killed each year in collisions with windows range from 100 million to one billion. Regardless of the actual figure, concern over the numbers of birds being killed by windows is on the rise. Ongoing studies to determine how to best prevent bird collisions in both old and new buildings are led by Dr. Daniel Klem from Muhlenberg College in Pennsylvania, the recognized expert on the topic. Based on his research over the past 30 years, the common practice of taping silhouettes of hawks or owls on a window simply doesn't work since small birds will fly through a space the size of a handprint.

The issue is finally becoming more mainstream as witnessed by a coalition of architects and biologists that have united to discuss solutions to the problem (www.birdsandbuildings.org/index1024). Newly constructed "green buildings" such as the science center at Swarthmore College near Philadelphia have fritted-glass or tilted windows that are being monitored to evaluate their effectiveness on reducing bird collisions (www.swarthmore.edu/news/releases/05/greenaward).

There are a variety of techniques that homeowners can use to make their backyards safer for birds, including relocating feeders and installing screens or films on windows. For step-by-step details on what you can do to retrofit your windows to a bird friendly condition, check the Audubon Society web site at www.audubon.org/bird/at_home/SafeWindows. For links and references pertaining to this issue, visit Laura Erickson's incredibly informative weblog at www.birderblog.com/bird/Conservation/PartI/05-Windows.

Reports from the field:

Barb and George Gaffney of New Germany have observed a variety of birds at their feeder in the past week, most notably tree sparrows, fox sparrows, pine siskins, and a flock of over 40 American goldfinches.

Fran Pope of Mountain Lake Park spotted a bird in mid-November that rarely visits Garrett County – the snow bunting.

If you'd like to share your Garrett County nature sightings or if you have questions about the plants and animals that you've observed, e-mail Liz and Ron at info@elkridgenatureworks.com.

Farm Service Agency Reports

Eric M. McCartney, County Executive Director
Preston County FSA Office
425 E. Main St., Suite 420, Kingwood, WV 26537-1793

FSA REMINDS PRODUCERS TO VOTE

Eric McCartney, county executive director of the Preston County Farm Service Agency, reminds farmers in Local Administrative Area (LAA) 1, which are the Grant and Pleasant districts, to vote in this year's County FSA Committee election.

The County FSA Committee is the most direct link between USDA-Farm Service Agency programs and local producers. County committee members administer USDA-FSA programs on the local level; inform producers of program provisions; recommend necessary program changes; participate in county committee meetings; and perform other duties assigned by the state FSA committee.

"So please take time to vote for the candidate that you think is most qualified to serve the farmers in your LAA," McCartney said.

Completed election ballots must either be postmarked or returned to the Preston County FSA Office no later than December 5. The Farm Service Agency encourages participation in this year's election by all under-represented groups in LAA 1.

Eligible producers in LAA 1 who have not received an election ballot in the mail may obtain one by calling 304-329-1923, faxing 304-329-3056, or visiting the FSA office located in the Corner Mall of the Kingwood Plaza. Anyone interested in learning more about the Farm Service Agency may visit the web site: www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/default.asp.

The Preston County FSA Committee will tabulate LAA 1 election ballots on Wednesday, Dec. 7, at 9:30 a.m. in the Kingwood USDA Service Center. This meeting is open to the public.

FSA REMINDS FARMERS OF AVAILABLITY OF LOANS AND LOAN DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS

The Preston County Farm Service Agency reminds farmers of the availability of Loan Deficiency Payments (LDP's) and Marketing Assistance Loans for the 2005 Crop Year. A 2005 Crop Acreage Report must be on file with the county FSA office for the farm(s) on which the crop was produced. Farmers may file late-filed crop acreage reports for a nominal fee.

LDP's may be obtained on all production of grain crops (i.e. corn, oats, wheat, barley, etc.) whether the crops are harvested for grain, silage, cobbage, cracked, rolled, or crimped. Farmers who sell their commodities from the field must file with FSA before the beginning harvest date. Producers who begin feeding their commodities immediately must file with FSA prior to feeding commodities.

Market rates used in computing LDP payment rates are subject to change daily and are normally available by 8:30 a.m. Farmers may telephone the FSA office at 304-329-1923 to obtain market rates for determining when to apply for LDP's.

Marketing Assistance Loans are also available for 2005 commodities. To be eligible for a loan, the farm must have produced the commodity in 2005 and not previously received an LDP for that commodity. A 2005 Crop Acreage Report must have been filed for the farm, the farmer must have beneficial interest in the commodity, and he or she must be following the conservation compliance provisions of the Farm Bill.

To obtain further information, or to file for a Loan Deficiency Payment or Marketing Assistance Loan, persons may visit the Farm Service Agency, located in the Corner Mall of the Kingwood Plaza, or telephone the office at 304-329-1923.

4-H Club News

AURORA PIONEERS
by Daniel O'Connor

The November meeting of the Aurora Pioneers 4-H Club was called to order by Marissa Bachtel, and Kristen Stemple led the Pledge of Allegiance and Chelcee Rinker led the 4-H pledge.

For devotions everyone said what they were thankful for. As roll was called, each person gave their birth month, and the group agreed to sing "Happy Birthday" to all the people who had a birthday during the month.

Michael O'Connor gave the Treasurer's report, and Daniel O'Connor read the minutes.

Under the old business Michael O'Connor and Amber Arnold gave reports about the Haunted Trail. Marissa reminded everyone to turn in their enrollment cards. [illegible] Rocha, Michael, and Daniel gave reports on officer training held at Preston High. Michael told the club they received a Blue Ribbon. [illegible] certificates the club received.

Under new business the Heifer Project was discussed. Jessica Shillingburg made a motion that the club donate $20 to the project to purchase ducks and geese.

The community Christmas tree lighting program is set for Sunday, Dec. 4, during the club's next meeting. The Aurora CEOs will sponsor the event.

The club decided to sing "We Wish You a Merry Christmas" and "Jingle Bells" outside during the Christmas Tree lighting. Afterwards, there will be a short program inside with singing, music and devotions. The club will award a certificate to those who have helped out during the last year.

Haley Rocha moved to have a gift exchange, and names were drawn and the limit was set at $5.

The group agreed to use Jessica's "This is 4-H" banner for all the meetings.

Amber Grimm moved to have T-shirts made with "Aurora Pioneers" on the front and all of the members' names on the back. The club would pay $5 and the members then would pay the difference. The group will decide at the December meeting after the cost of making the T-shirts is known.

Photos from the State Fair were returned. Ribbons were given for all completed project books.

Club members then sang several songs, and Amber led a game of "How many words could be made from 'Happy Thanksgiving'."

The next meeting of the Aurora Pioneers 4-H Club is set for this Sunday, Dec. 4.

Real Estate Facts by...

DIRECTING MANY ROLES!

You wouldn't choose a surgeon to diagnose your car's engine. Nor would you ask your accountant for a physical exam. Every professional specializes in a different field of knowledge.

Buying or selling a home requires the services of several professionals. The first may be your accountant, who can explain the tax implications of a real estate transaction.

Your attorney also plays an important role, researching the title to the property you are purchasing, uncovering any possible flaws, and assuring you of receiving a good and marketable title.

You may also need a surveyor, since mortgage lenders often require a physical survey of a property's boundaries. Licensed surveyors ensure that you receive title to the exact property for which you contracted.

So what role do real estate professionals play in a property transaction? They act as a marketing agent for sellers, developing strategies to identify and attract likely buyers for the property.

For buyers, real estate agents provide a variety of services: suggesting lenders, researching available homes, and setting appointments to show property. Once a contract is produced, they oversee the closing activities and coordinate the roles of the other professionals involved.

Real estate agents will not give you legal or accounting advice, nor attempt to survey your property, but they will provide a wide range of services to those planning to buy or sell real estate.

If you'd like to buy or sell a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call today!

State's System For Assessing Drunk Drivers Varies Widely

by Elizabeth Coe
Capital News Service

On the morning of Feb. 25, 2005, Sam Burke awoke in a holding cell. After a long night of drinking at a bar in Towson, Burke had been pulled over for speeding on Joppa Road, failed his sobriety test, refused to take a breathalyzer, and was arrested for drinking while impaired by alcohol.

"I wasn't that drunk," he said. "I had just gotten Taco Bell, and I was speeding home to eat it."

Burke blamed the burritos, but he was the one facing hundreds of dollars in fines and the prospect of living without a driver's license for the next 45 days. So, the 23-year-old Perry Hall resident called a lawyer, who advised him to get an alcohol assessment at a DWI treatment center and register for alcohol education classes in the hope it would make him look better in court.

Burke's decision put him in the company of more than 8,000 drivers assessed at alcohol treatment centers each year in Maryland.

But while the assessment is a key step in determining the need for alcohol treatment, results vary widely across the state, depending on the county, the individual center, or the income level of the offender, according to a report by the Center for Substance Abuse Research at the University of Maryland.

Burke, for example, was assessed at Chesapeake Counseling Services in Baltimore County, which characterized him as a "social" drinker. But because he had refused to submit to a breathalyzer test, he was enrolled in the 26-hour course for "problem" drinkers.

Columbia resident David Lee, like Burke, refused to take a breathalyzer on the night of his DWI arrest in Howard County in April, and like Burke was assessed as a "social" drinker. But Lee was required only to enroll in the 12-hour alcohol education class.

Lee got his assessment and treatment at Counseling Resources of Ellicott City, while Burke got his in Essex.

The differences in treatment regimes recommended for drivers with ostensibly similar cases has both surprised and concerned state and private substance abuse treatment professionals.

Peter F. Luongo, director of the Maryland Alcohol and Drug Abusa Administration, said he was surprised at the results of the study, especially by the degree of differeace county to county and by the number of people who aren't getting the level of treatment they need.

"Overall, it shows that this way of identifying people and moving them into treatment centers is not working the way it is supposed to work," he said. "It would work better if there were a standard assessment and closer monitoring of people to make sure that people who are supposed to go to treatment do so."

In Maryland, 66 percent of DWI offenders are determined to be "problem" drinkers, but that percentage varies widely by county, ranging from 49 percent in Garrett County to 88 percent in Queen Anne's County.

According to the study, in Anne Arundel County the percentage assessed as problem drinkers is 66 percent: in Baltimore County, 75 percent; in Howard County, 56 percent; in Montgomery County, 55 percent; and in Kent County, 84 percent.

"We don't know yet why there is so much variance," said Luongo. "We want the counties to look at this."

Amelia M. Arria, one of the authors of the report, said the method for assigning offenders as "problem" versus "social" drinkers, which determines the level of treatment needed, varies widely.

Most centers use tests that measure how much a person drinks, but they use different ones. "The assessment process is really center-specific," Arria said. "When they're not doing the same tests, it's hard to build policy on drunk driving."

"Social" drinkers are supposed to enroll in a social drinkers' alcohol education course, which consists of 12 hours of group instruction. "Problem" drinkers are supposed to take a 26-hour course and may also attend separate counseling sessions.

Many people choose to have their assessment prior to going to court, but alcohol assessment and education may be required as a condition of probation following conviction for DWI.

The study also found that the income of the offender may influence the likelihood of being assessed as a problem drinker. Seventy-five percent of those making less than $10,000 per year are assessed to be problem drinkers, while only 50 percent of those making $75,000 or more per year were categorized that way in Maryland, according to the report.

"A study like this will point out the gaps in our knowledge," Arria said. "It will help us determine what else we need to do."

Thomas Benner, former DWI coordinator for the Maryland Alcohol and Drug Abuse Administration who is now director of Addiction Recovery Services in Columbia, called the assessment process "confusing for everyone."

He said he often visited treatment centers where people were being assigned to the wrong level of treatment.

"It was a problem then, and it is still a problem today," he said. "Many people are getting a lower rating than they should. Programs are reluctant to do an assessment and say that someone needs treatment because people will say 'that's not what my attorney told me, he said I can just take classes.'"

Benner said this is a disservice to the public because if people don't get the right treatment, they are likely to drink and drive again. Also, there are a lot of repeat offenders because DWI education programs aren't very effective, he said.

"The whole system in Maryland needs to be looked at and redone," he said.

William Kerr, co-owner of Chesapeake Counseling Services, where Burke received his alcohol assessment and treatment, said the center uses several methods to assess DWI offenders.

Offenders are rated on factors such as their blood alcohol content and whether or not they can remember the date of the incident. Then, a counselor makes a recommendation for treatment based on the evaluation, he said.

"Everybody who gets a DWI is not an alcoholic," Kerr said, "but at the same time, a lot of people think they are simply social drinkers when they're not."

Lawmakers are looking into the DWI issue, Benner said, but some legislators are also attorneys, and they may not want things to change.

"It's a hot topic in Annapolis right now, but there are a lot of people who have a stake in the system being the way it is," he said. "It's a big business defending drunk drivers."

Del. William A. Bronrott, D-Montgomery, said the report's findings are "symptomatic of a broken system when it comes to drunk driving in general."

"Far too few resources are being dedicated to this problem, and there is a lack of uniformity in the way offenders are assessed and treated around the state," he said.

Burke, the driver who was caught speeding on the way back from Taco Bell in Towson, finished 26 weeks of alcohol classes at Chesapeake Counseling Services, and in August, he had his day in court.

Judge Dana Levitz at the Baltimore County Circuit Court, sentenced him to three years probation and a fine of $80 per month until his probation period ends. He is now serving that sentence, and said he will never drink and drive again.

"I haven't driven drunk since I got the DWI, and I will never do it again," he said. "I learned my lesson."

4-H Members, Animals Visit After-School

Students at Partners After-School at Grantsville recently learned about horses, market goats, and market rabbits without taking a trip to the farm. As part of the Garrett County Extension After-School Project, agriculture literacy and awareness lessons involved 4-H members and their animals.

Amanda Beitzel from Grantsville and Kids Kennel 4-H Clubs showed her market goat "Zoey" and with her market rabbit "Snowflake." Fitting and showing techniques, market information, and general facts about caring for market animals were discussed during the program.

Amanda was awarded ribbons in several events at the Garrett County Fair in August. She entered events for market goats and rabbits, arts and crafts, wood projects, and berries and vegetables. Her accomplishments at the fair included reserve champion poultry, reserve champion 4-H rabbit fitting and showing, and grand champion 4-H rabbits.

Cari Zbel of the Garrett Hoof Prints 4-H Club traveled to Grantsville with her parents and their two horses. With her horse "Lovington," Cari taught students about grooming techniques with various brushes. Showing techniques were demonstrated, equine care was discussed, and tack equipment was explained.

In addition, "Rebel" was saddled up and ridden to show differences in a horse's walk, trot, and canter. The Zbel family spoke about the physical and financial responsibilities required for owning and training horses properly. Safe transportation of the horses was also included in the demonstration.

Cari and Lovington were also very successful at the Garrett County Fair, placing first in junior fitting and showing, as well as being named reserve grand champion in grooming and showing.

"The cooperation and dedication of these 4-H members is greatly appreciated by the after-school students and staff, as well as the Garrett County Extension After-School Program," a spokesperson said.

JUST TWO MORE DAYS TO GIVE...

WARM THE CHILDREN

Providing New Winter Clothing For Needy Children

For the ninth year, The Republican newspaper and the Civic Club of Oakland are asking for your help. Without it, many Garrett County children will go cold this winter.

Just what is the WARM THE CHILDREN PROGRAM?

The Republican's WARM THE CHILDREN PROGRAM is basically neighbors helping neighbors. We here at the paper are asking for monetary donations (tax deductible) from you, the readers. The collected funds are being used to purchase new winter clothing for Garrett County children in need. Because the newspaper administers the program, there are no added fees or overhead costs. Every penny donated is used to buy the winter items.

How are needy children being identified?

A special corps of volunteers is working right now to identify those in need this year. (Please do not call for the service. If you have been selected, you will be notified.)

How will the children's clothing be purchased?

Members of the Civic Club of Oakland are taking the families shopping at Wal-Mart. The children, with the help of their parents, may select their own new coats, hats, sweaters, long johns, jeans, boots, pajamas, or other needed winter items, spending up to $100 per child.

The Civic Club of Oakland is again heading up the volunteer/shopping coordination in the southern part of the county. Betty Ellington is the head coordinator, assisted by several other club members. For the northern part of the county, Lisa Broadwater will continue in her role as the coordinator of shopping at the LaVale Wal-Mart. Many other functions of the program are being handled by Civic Club members, for which the newspaper staff is very grateful. Dora Hanlin has again volunteered to help handle the applications, as she has from the beginning of the program. Her help is invaluable.

Town Hall

•Public Ordinance 2005-04, dealing with indoor/outdoor stoves was adopted at the recent town meeting. Resolution 2005-03, the municipality code enforcement officer was discussed. The audit report was presented by Devine and Sheffield. The county commissioners are scheduled to attend the Jan. 23 meeting to discuss the tax differential.

•The Kitzmiller Empowerment Group is sponsoring a "Help Trim A Tree"to raise money for the fire department's "Toys for Tots" and "Christmas Food Baskets." Those wishing to participate can purchase bows to place on the tree in conjunction with the town lighting of the tree at the Community Building on Dec. 9. A red bow symbolizes remembrance; white is for police/fire/rescue; gold is for honor; and red/white/bloe is for support of country and military. Each bow costs $5. To purchase a bow, persons may contact Nancy Brady at 301-453-3193 or Kathy Elliott at 301-453-3587.

•A tree decorating and lighting ceremony will take place on Dec. 9 at 6:30 p.m. at the Kitzmiller Town Hall. The program will feature Christmas caroling, lighting of the tree, refreshments, and a sleigh ride by Ray Miller for a donation of a non-perishable food item or stuffed animal. The public is welcome to attend, and purchase a bow in honor and support of loved ones and to support a local organization. There is a $1 donation for those who don't have a food or toy donation. The donations will be used in the fire department's community baskets.

•Because the next meeting date for the mayor and town council falls on the day after Christmas, it was decided no meeting will be held in December. The mayor will call a meeting if necessary.

Commissioners Support Repeal Of GC Beer Tax

The Board of Garrett County Commissioners by unanimous vote this week will ask the 2006 Maryland General Assembly for legislation allowing it to repeal the county's beer tax. The request was presented to the board by the Maryland Beer Wholesalers Association, Lohr Distributors, and local business owners during a standing-room-only meeting at the courthouse on Tuesday.

"Garrett County is the only county in the state with this tax and perhaps the only one in the union," Bob Lohr or Lohr Distributors reminded the commissioners. He had previously asked the officials to consider abolishing the excise.

Consumers pay the county beer tax in addition to the state tax. Lohr and others noted that the added tax made it difficult for them to compete with stores in neighboring counties that do not have the excise. He said it was unfair for the county to target one certain group of retailers.

"It's a discriminatory issue and hurts retailers and consumers," said George Manis, executive director of the Maryland Beer Wholesalers Association. To prove his point, he presented the commissioners with data from a 1999 Tax Foundation report on how governmental excise taxes adversely affect private sector investments.

"The added tax puts wholesalers and retailers at a disadvantage," said Henry House, president of the Maryland Beer Wholesalers Association.

"We're already at a disadvantage because of no Sunday sales," Lohr told the commissioners. "I hope you can see our disadvantages and concerns."

Roger Resh, Grantsville Liquors, said hunters from Hagerstown were shocked to learn how much beer was when they purchased it at his store recently. The next time they visit the county, they will probably buy their beer before they leave home, Resh said.

He also noted that many of his customers purchase their beer in nearby Allegany County. A 30-pack of Coors Lite is about $19.99 (plus state tax) in Garrett County, compared to between $17.99 and $18.99 (plus state tax) in Allegany County, according to Lohr.

Get 'N' Go owner Kiley Royce said his Terra Alta, W.Va., business has 15 times more beer sales than his Oakland store. He noted that West Virginia has a soda tax. But even with that excise, soda is the same price in West Virginia and Maryland.

Beer is taxed per container size, Debbe Owston, support services coordinator for the Garrett County Department of General Services, explained. For example, there is a 2-cent tax on a 12-ounce or smaller bot-

COOKING — AN EXTREME SPORT? Seems as if holiday cooking in Garrett County has indeed become "extreme," as evidenced by this photo taken on Thanksgiving in the middle of an all-out blizzard. "As the weather improved on Thanksgiving morning, the turkey fryer was turned on by chef Mark Webster (left) of Glen Burnie," reported Gary Ruddell (center), who hosted the meal. "During the warm up and the cooking of the 15-pound turkey on Marsh Mountain, the temperature plummeted by 15 degrees and over 3 inches of snow fell." The meal, Gary said, was terrific, despite the intense cooking conditions. (Paul Ruddell is shown at right.) The wintry weather in Garrett County has been harsh these past few months, with snow falling before Halloween and ravaging the area on Thanksgiving Day. Apparently Old Man Winter is to visit again this evening, and is predicted to throw down several inches of snow in the night, and more tomorrow. And Garrett Countians will mush on, putting on more layers, snow-shoeing to their mail boxes, and frying their turkeys in the snow. Photo by Christine Wingeta.

Oakland Bypass Map On Display At Courthouse

A large map of the proposed Oakland bypass, as the design currently stands, will be posted by tomorrow afternoon on the first floor of the Garrett County Courthouse. The map will hang on a wall opposite the Assessor's office, and will be updated when and if design changes are incorporated by the Maryland State Highway Administration.

An SHA web site detailing the bypass design and listing new developments as they unfold has yet to be unveiled by the agency. The web site had originally been slated to go online this fall.

In a separate bypass matter, Garrett Countians for Smart Growth, a citizens' coalition opposed to the proposed Oakland bypass, will host an open meeting set for 7 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 15, at the Garrett County Memorial Hospital Community Service Center.

For information on the group's ongoing efforts, persons may consult the its web site at www.oaklandbypass.com.

Correction Noted

The submission from the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce announcing the upcoming events planning session (published on Page C-5) at the Visitors Center in McHenry contained the incorrect date. The open meeting will take place on Thursday, Dec. 15, at 11 a.m.

CROWNED SNOWFLAKE QUEEN at this past weekend's Christmas on Main Street in Oakland was Kalie Hostutler. She is a senior at Southern High School, and is the daughter of Henry and Kim Hostutler, Oakland. Kalie attends the Crellin Assembly of God Church, and is active in many of her church's youth group activities. She also works at Oak-Mar Restaurant and the Painted Cupboard. She has also been named to Who's Who Among American High School Students. "I feel that it would be a lot of fun and a great honor to represent Oakland as the Snowflake Queen," Kalie wrote on her application. "Also, my boss at the Painted Cupboard would love for me to represent the shop on Alder Street." Kalie is pictured above with Ray Miller of Pleasant Valley [illegible] Rides.

Mtn. Maryland PACE Reception Set For January

The Mountain Maryland Legislative reception will be held Jan. 26 and 27 at the Loews Annapolis Hotel, according to Dave Moe, co-chairman of the Mountain Maryland PACE [Positive Attitudes Change Everything] committee.

The Mountain Maryland PACE Reception is sponsored by the Cumberland/Allegany County Industrial Foundation, a private not-for-profit entity that has partnered with Allegany County government since 1964, and the Garrett County Development Corporation, which works hand-in-hand with Garrett County government to support economic development progress.

The result is a two-event program that begins with the reception on Thursday, Jan. 26, at 6 p.m., followed by the legislative breakfast on Friday at 8 a.m. The combination of these two events is intended to reach legislative and Ehrlich administration representatives and their leadership more effectively.

This year's theme is Tourism – Commerce – Partnerships – Positive Attitudes Change Everything.

Some legislative issues are $7 million for statewide tourism efforts in FY-2007; allowing a 10% truck weight limit variance on state highways; Phase 2 funding for the Adventure Sports Center International Complex; Funding and development of the Frostburg State Communications and Technology Center; full funding for the Maryland Main Street programs while maintaining Community Legacy funding and Streetscape grants for downtown revitalization projects; allow the establishment of an association health benefit plan that an association or consortium of associations may offer its members, etc.; and continue to monitor and support transportation improvement in the Mountain Maryland region.

Health Dept. Notes Fifth Rabies Case

Environmental Health Services of the Garrett County Health Department has reported the year's fifth laboratory confirmed case of rabies in Garrett County.

The most recent incident occurred this past Thursday, Dec. 1, when a raccoon fought with a dog along Savage River Road near Big Run State Park. The dog's owner shot the raccoon, and the carcass was sent to the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene Rabies Laboratory in Baltimore, where it was confirmed positive for the rabies virus. There was no human exposure in this case.

The dog's rabies vaccination was current, and it was given a booster shot and is being closely observed for a 45-day period.

State Makes Land Purchase, Distributes POS Grants To GC

The Maryland Board of Public Works (BPW) gave its approval recently for two major state expenditures that add to and improve Garrett County natural resources and recreation infrastructure. The board approved the purchase of a 41.193-acre tract in the Youghiogheny Wild and Scenic River Corridor, and also approved an outlay of over $200,000 in Program Open Space Funds to pay for improvements to parks, playgrounds, and public areas throughout the county.

The $131,813 Youghiogheny Wild and Scenic River Corridor purchase of the unimproved Frazee property completes state ownership of the corridor's lands between Sang Run and Friendsville on the east side of the river. The purchase price, which does not include mineral rights, was approved at a cost of $3,200 per acre.

"The Youghiogheny Wild and Scenic Corridor – which begins approximately two miles north of Oakland near Millers Run and ends at the southern corporate limits of the town of Friendsville – was established to protect the unique cultural and recreational resources of the Youghiogheny and its tributaries, which are unequaled by any river in Maryland," the spokesperson said of the reasoning behind the purchase of the tract, which includes 664 feet of river frontage. "In recent years, because of its scenic and recreational value, the river segment between Sang Run and Friendsville has become a priority acquisition area."

POS DISBURSEMENTS

The Board of Public Works also approved $237,501 in Program Open Space funds, which will be used to improve nine facilities located across the county. The funding disbursement breakdown is as follows:

- Loch Lynn Athletic Fields – $19,971 for further development of the athletic complex to include the installation of fencing to separate the complex from private property; construction of an additional parking area; and the installation of a flag pole including lighting and a plaque.
- McHenry Community Park – $5,027 for improvements at the park to include electrical repair of the existing well, and upgrades to the existing road.
- Accident Town Park East – $2,000 for improvements to the park including landscaping with trees and shrubs.
- Broadford Elementary School playground – $23,000 for replacement of the current playground equipment with new equipment.
- Casselman Valley soccer field construction – $89,500 for construction of a new soccer field on county-owned land near Grantsville, including a water well, septic field, public restrooms and a concession stand.
- Oakland Train Station replica train – $20,000 for installation of a train for children grades 3 and under at the Oakland Train Station; the train project is a replica of the coal cars used during the turn of the century.
- Friendsville Community Park – $26,666 for master plan upgrades, including the engineering of a connector trail from the park to the proposed Kendall Trail along the Youghiogheny River.
- Grantsville Town Park – $33,837 for installation of additional playground equipment next to Pavilion #3 to meet the growing demand.
- Eastern Garrett Park – $17,500 for improvements including installation of fencing and gates. The walking track will also be upgraded.

Woman Dies In Grantsville Area Collision Sunday

A two-vehicle collision claimed the life of an 81-year-old Grantsville woman Sunday afternoon on Chestnut Ridge Road, according to the Maryland State Police.

Lois Elizabeth Durst was making a left turn out of the Cherry Grove Church parking lot when she allegedly pulled her 1985 Pontiac Vibe into the path of an oncoming 2006 Chevrolet Silverado pickup operated by Gary Lee Gribble, 40, of Rockwood, Pa.

State troopers reported that Mrs. Durst was pronounced dead at the scene of the 1 p.m. crash, while her passenger, Paul Lewis Durst, 84, was transported to Cumberland Memorial Hospital, as were Gribble and his passengers Carl William Samler, 41, Melinda Jo Samler, 38, and Hazel Margaret Bowman, 53, all of Rockwood.

No charges were filed against Gribble.

The Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad, Salisbury Ambulance Service, and Grantsville and Salisbury volunteer fire departments responded to the scene.

Mrs. Durst's obituary appears on Page A-6.

Del. Edwards To Retain Minority Leadership Role

Maryland House Republicans in Annapolis yesterday re-elected Del. George C. Edwards (District 1A) as minority leader and Del. Anthony J. O'Donnell (District 29C) as minority whip, by a unanimous vote.

"This leadership team has brought the caucus to new levels of unity and cooperation," said Del. Christopher Shank (District 2B), after nominating the incumbents for re-election. "We have been able to support both Governor Ehrlich and each other in furthering our legislative and policy agenda."

The nomination of Edwards and O'Donnell was seconded by Delegate Adelaide Eckardt (District 37B), and the motion to close nominations and affirm the nomination by unanimous consent was made by Delegate Richard Weldon (District 3B).

"The caucus membership is eager to begin the 2006 legislative session, unified and united behind their leadership," noted a Maryland House Republican Caucus spokesperson. "They are anticipating further opportunities to stand behind Governor Ehrlich's agenda and to continue to act on behalf of the citizens of Maryland."

"We are pleased that the caucus has chosen to re-elect us, and are eager to move forward to the 2006 legislative session," Edwards said. "The results of this year's session will be pivotal in the November elections and we are focused on achieving our goals."

"Delegate Edwards and I are looking forward to continuing the success of the past few years," added O'Donnell. "We are ready to take on the challenges of the upcoming session and to work together for the people of Maryland."

Edwards and O'Donnell were first elected to Republican leadership in June of 2003. Edwards has served in the House of Delegates since 1983, and O'Donnell since 1995.

"THERE IS A FLOWER" is the title of this weekend's Christmas concert by the Garrett Choral Society, a many-member chorus made up of singers from across the county. The concert will be given on Dec. 10 at 2 and 7:30 p.m., and on Dec. 11 at 2 p.m. Tickets, which are $10 for adults and $8 for children 12 and under, [illegible] Choral Society member or at Gregg's Pharmacy in Oakland. Director Julie Turrentine is pictured above right as she leads a final rehearsal for the program, which will include a performance of Vivaldi's Gloria, Beethoven's Hallelujah Chorus, and Christmas carols accompanied by the Garrett Brass. Other pieces will give the program an international flavor, as the singers will present melodies in Spanish, Hebrew, and Latin. The group is accompanied by Muriel R. Franc. In addition to the brass players, instrumentalists featured in the program are Ellinor Benedict, cello, and Susan Peterson, flute. Vocal soloists include Dave Callis, Wayne Callis, Carolyn Deverse, Karen Winkelvoss, Betsy Dempsey, Don Sincell, Mark Franc (on Saturday), and Mary McEwen (on Sunday). Photo by John McEwen.

Garrett's Adoptive Families Are Flesh & Blood And Lots Of Love

MEANT TO BE TOGETHER (just born in differant places), Garrett County's Adoptive Family of the Year Kim and Greg Becker, with their children Tonya and David are happily anticipating the joys of Christmas. There are children in need of foster care and adoption placements in Garrett County right now, and for further information persons may call DSS Foster Care recruiter Donna Cumerlato at 301-533-3050, or DSS Adoption Services worker Monica Barnett at 301-533-3045. The next Foster/Adoptive Parent training class will begin in either February or March, and the free evening sessions involve no commitment other than open ears and an open heart. Tonya and David are shown below in a priceless sister-brother moment made possible by Kim, Greg, and a team of committed social workers. See story.

by David Foster

> "Giving birth is little more than a set of contractions granting passage of a child; then the mother is born."
> – Erma Bombeck

The phrase "perfectly ordinary" would be an apt phrase to describe a group of families that gathered for a luncheon at the Will 'O the Wisp recently, where the Garrett County Department of Social Services (DSS) hosted its annual luncheon for Adoptive Families. While the ties of flesh and blood are not in place as in most homes, these families with all the ups and downs that can be found under any roof are bound by the ties of love.

Among those on hand for the DSS luncheon were the Beckers of McHenry, Garrett County's Adoptive Family of the Year. The Beckers were among the families from each of the state's counties and Baltimore city honored at Maryland's National Adoption Month Celebration in Glen Burnie last month.

Kim and Greg Becker, and their children Tonya, 12, and David, 8, have been a happy quartet since Memorial Day, when David joined the family. Tonya was adopted earlier, at Christmastime in 2002. The children are Kim and Greg's "holiday kids," as they were adopted during holidays, and Tonya's birthday is Jan. 1, while David was born on Thanksgiving.

"Why adopt?" Kim said recently. "Because we both always wanted children. I initiated the idea with Greg, then we went to our parents to see how they felt because we wanted to know that an adopted child would have a 'whole' family, not just a new mom and dad. Both our families were very supportive and happy for us."

The couple began the process at Garrett County DSS with a series of classes that allow individuals and couples to explore the ins and outs of adoption and foster care with the help of trained social work professionals, and adoptive and foster care parents. The free sessions culminated with a short but intense licensing process. Adoptive/Foster Care classes, which are offered locally several times a year, are strictly exploratory and require no commitment on the part of the participants.

Kim and Greg, however, were committed from the start, and didn't have long to wait. "Within six months a social worker came to us and said 'We have someone,' gave us a photo of Tonya and a brief description of her background, and set us up to observe her during a playtime where she was living at St. Vincent's Catholic Charities Home in Timonium. Tonya was originally from Washington County, and had been placed into foster care at the age of 5½. We met in Feb. 2001, shortly after her eighth birthday.

"Before we went to see her for the first time, I asked God for a sign if this was the one," Kim continued. "Well, it turned out that her birthday was the same day as the birthday of Greg's dad, who had died on Halloween of the previous year. That was our sign plus the fact that we thought she was adorable from the moment we saw her."

With Tonya's permission ("I wanted to call them mom and dad right away," the girl said recently), the Beckers and her began to get to know each other through a transitioning process of short visits, both at Timonium and in Garrett County. Some of the visits involved play time, some were dinner outings to Pizza Hut, and one was a two-night stay at the Beckers'

Total Biz Garners More Than $4,000 For Salem School

Total Biz Fulfillment (TBF), Grantsville, raised $4,360 to benefit the new Salem School during a Christmas warehouse sale last month. TBF employees volunteered some 40 hours preparing for the event and another 8 hours on the day of the sale.

Enthusiasm among shoppers looking for bargains in the company's warehouse was high.

"I could hardly get my wife in here," confessed one Salem supporter, "and now I can't get her out!"

"I bought probably $400 worth of Christmas gifts for $30!" reported another buyer.

The event was TBF's second warehouse sale benefiting local charities. The first was held in June of this year, and the company plans to continue the bi-annual fundraisers.

Gary and Luanne Ruddell, president and director respectively of Total Biz Fulfillment, are long-time supporters of the Maryland Salem Children's Trust, located off I-68 between Grantsville and Frostburg. The Ruddells have both served on the Community Relations Committee, and Mr. Ruddell is currently chair of the steering committee to build the new Salem School.

"You know how we feel about the kids there and the work you all do," Ms. Ruddell told members of the Salem staff recently. "All of us wanted to help with this project."

"We're extremely grateful for all the hard work you put into raising this money for our new school, and to Gary and Luanne for sponsoring it," Salem executive director Louise Richards told TBF employees, who made a trip to the old school for a firsthand look at what they had been working to replace.

The new Salem School is designed to meet the unique needs of students, kindergarten through 12th grade, enrolled in the special education services provided at Salem. Both transitional education and full-day special education, programs unduplicated in Garrett County, are approved and monitored by the Maryland State Department of Education.

The Maryland Salem Children's Trust provides home, family, education, and therapies to children in need. Salem is a nonprofit organization and a United Way agency.

For more information about the Salem School or other Salem programs, persons may call 301-689-8176, ext. 211.

WARM THE CHILDREN

Providing New Warm Winter Clothing for Needy Children

The Republican newspaper and the GWFC Civic Club of Oakland are finishing up ninth year of Warm the Children. The program provides new winter clothing and footwear for Garrett County children in need. Because the program is a function of the newspaper and of volunteers, every penny donated goes toward the purchase of these items. The following individuals and/or organizations donated to the fund over the past week. The donation time has come to a close for this year. Contributions are now being banked for use next year, or in times of emergencies (fires, flooding, etc.) when local children need our help.

Thank you all for your generosity!

Families Are

home over Easter weekend.

"We played a lot of games, and did a lot of talking, things all families do, and got along great," Kim recalled. "That was important, because her social workers wanted to make sure that we liked her, and that she liked us. Everything was going well, and with Tonya's permission we asked Washington County DSS to speed up the placement process.

"So, on May 7, 2001, three months after we first met her, Tonya came home to live with us. St. Vincent's held a big 'Flower Ceremony' for her, which it does for every child living there when he or she leaves for a family placement. St. Vincent's staff gave her a skateboard, and we found it all very touching, especially to see that she had packed all her belongings – everything she had in the world – into one suitcase."

As when any new member joins a household, some adjustments had to be made, but Kim, Greg, and Tonya knew they were meant for each other. Finally, at Christmastime of the following year, the adoption was made permanent.

"We had some behavioral issues at times, but worked through them together," Kim recalled. "Tonya also didn't like being alone at first, and would follow me everywhere. It was almost as if she wanted to make sure we wouldn't be leaving her. We didn't have many neighbors around our home, and no children her age close by, so we were happy that she got interested in playing in a soccer league. She can entertain herself quite well also, and is a great student who loves to read on her own. We're very proud of her – she belongs with us, and we belong with her."

The new Becker family wasn't done growing, however, as Kim and Greg wanted to open the home to more children, and Tonya hoped to have a sibling. After a couple of years of no adoption referrals, the couple obtained licensing as a foster care family in addition to the adoption license they already possessed.

"I was a little leery about foster care because of the chance of getting attached to a child and then having to give him or her back to the birth parents, which is the whole goal of that process," said Kim. "But since the adoption referrals had dried up, Greg talked me into it."

Less than two months after obtaining their foster care certification, the Beckers were contacte by Garrett County DSS about a child in need of a placement. The family happened to be departing for a Fourth of July vacation trip to Connecticut the following day, but gamely picked up the boy at 6:30 p.m. the day of departure and was on the road north less than three hours later.

"We purposely drove at night hoping the kids would sleep through the long trip, but Tonya and David stayed awake and talked the entire trip – mostly to each other. They talked about everything, including the things they had in common from being in foster care."

As seems fated for the Becker family, David's story (necessarily abbreviated here because of local connections) culminated on a holiday when, on Memorial Day weekend of this year, his adoption was finalized.

"David fit in right away, and he and Tonya would be lost without one another," Kim observed. "David will say something about his past, and Tonya will answer 'I know how you feel' and go on to relate it to something from her past, and they'll discuss what they've been through. It's incredibly good for both of them.

"A neat thing is that our kids, like all adoptive and foster children, have been through a lot in their short lives, much more so than the average child their age. So when we're struggling with their behaviors, which does happen sometimes, we can look back and say 'We've come a long way.' Not only can Greg and I say that, so can our extended family, our church family, our friends, co-workers, and other adoptive/foster families. Everyone's been involved in supporting and helping us in one way or another, and that's great. It's brought us all closer together.

"We have absolutely no regrets, and we'd encourage anyone who is considering adoption or foster care to take the DSS classes. It's about improving the life of children, and it gave us the family we always wanted.

"We're licensed for four kids, and David wants a brother and Tonya wants a sister. So we're waiting for another sign."

And what would that sign be?

Irritating and Tiresome...

Our nation's preoccupation over the past few years with what is called "political correctness" is beginning to get extremely irritating and tiresome. We are all walking around on egg shells, evidently terrified that we are going to offend someone or violate their civil rights with the "wrong" choice of words. As with most forms of human behavior and thinking, this whole concept is being taken to extremes, now well into the realm of ridiculous, at least in some respects.

The best example to note this time of year is the effort by political-correctness proponents to get us all to stop using the word Christmas. We are supposed to stop saying "Merry Christmas," and instead say something like "Happy Holidays." We will no longer put up Christmas trees, but "holiday" trees. Our kids will not get off school for the Christmas holidays, but this will be their "winter break."

This is being endorsed because the root word of Christmas is Christ, and not everybody in our nation is Christian. Therefore, use of such a word may be offensive to those of the Jewish faith, or perhaps to African Americans for whom Kwanzaa is the season being celebrated, or for atheists who don't have any belief in a divine creator.

One response that comes to mind is "Well, excuse me!" Another might be "Give me a break!" Sorry, folks, but Christmas is a Christian holiday — always was, always will be. It is a long tradition that an evergreen tree is erected and decorated for Christmas. Despite the fact that the tree was originally a pagan symbol, and despite the fact that many non-believers also erect them in their homes this time of year, the practice is a Christian tradition. So, no, these are not holiday trees; they are Christmas trees.

Now, with all of that said, it is recognized, accepted, and celebrated that at this same time of year we also have the seasons of Chanukah (the Jewish Festival of Lights), and Kwanzaa for many of our African American citizens, to whom we warmly say "Happy Chanukah" and "Happy Kwanzaa." But can anyone imagine expecting that the Jewish menorah should no longer be called a menorah, but just a candle holder, so as not to offend non-Jews? Or replacing the Kwanzaa word "karamu" with the non-threatening word "feast" so as not to offend persons who do not celebrate Kwanzaa?

And one more related point: We Americans are expected to respect the cultures, traditions, and practices of other nations and peoples, and rightfully so. But what about our culture, and our traditions, and our practices? When a female television reporter from the U.S. (or any female, for that matter) visits a middle eastern nation, she is expected to cover her head when out in public. Not doing so would be highly offensive to the citizens of that country. It's part of their culture. Can anyone imagine a middle eastern female coming to America and being told to remove her head cover, and our being highly offended if she elects not to do so? We would be skewered on the world stage if that were to happen; maybe even attacked.

To the Editor:

As a property owner in Garrett County, I've been following the industrial wind plants proposed by Synergics Wind Energy. A recent news story featured various county government officials who, without making any promises or providing specifics, suggested that taxes from wind facilities might fund worthy initiatives such as free local community college tuition for county residents and a parks and recreation program.

Since other areas in the vicinity have not received promised "tax revenues" from wind plants (the commissioners should check with their colleagues in Meyersdale and Thomas), and since claims about local taxes made by representatives of wind plants proposed for this county are unsecured and extremely vague, a correlation between wind plant tax revenues and potential county services seems premature–if not deceitful. More at question, however, is the money trail. At a recent Public Service Commission evidentiary hearing in Baltimore, the spokesman for Synergics Wind Energy, when asked to substantiate the claim that his towering windmills would generate $750,000 in business personal property taxes to the county in the first year of operation, refused to do so, stating, when pressed, that his company would pay whatever the law required. Indeed. Fact is, this is the same message and same lack of value these windmills have pushed on the other counties as well.

County officials' publicly counting wind power's "tax revenue" chickens well before hatching suggests they still back Synergics and its marketing claims or scams. You decide! These are the same officials now in business with the wind industry who want to cloak their scheme behind free tuition and parks and recreation—as they stick it to the people and property along Backbone Mountain. I challenge county government to show explicitly how these projects will be funded from wind revenues. And if officials cannot produce these numbers without equivocation within a clear time line, they should stop making empty claims.

Maybe it's time for Garrett County's elected officials to tell Synergics that they are not welcome on Backbone Mountain.

Sincerely,
Kent Warren

MARGULIES

To the Editor:

There are several topics that I should like to see discussed in basic terms:

(1) Rowe v. Wade: Abortion. How does/should it concern the average, "normal" citizen? Just whose "business" is it?

(2) Why should the United States "squander" American lives and treasure in Iraq? What is the practical justification? Are we to trade lives for petroleum? Is that really "worthy?" What desire of benefit could drive us to pursue such base expectation?

(3) Is it worthy of the United Sates government to expend the lives of honored citizens and their assets while other citizens languish in desperation in New Orleans, etc? We might utilize huge trucks, such as employed in Canadian mining operations, to transport storm debris to vast federal properties to be designated for salvage, incineration, and/or burial.

It breaks down to a question of relative values and priorities.

Respectfully,
Irving M. Day Jr.
Deep Creek Lake

To the Editor:

I'm well aware that warnings regarding unbridled development have been stated several times here by others; however, new straws have appeared which have broken this camel's back. The Garrett County and Deep Creek Lake area are in peril of losing what so many of us have found appealing for so long. In defining "long," however, I really mean the relatively short time my family and I have been here, compared to the length of time natural beauty existed before being violated. I have lived, either part- or full-time, in the same place just north of Paradise Point since 1951.

The latest example of environmental pollution was noticed last Thursday night when a series of lights was turned on in an area known for its concern about the environment and concept of neighborhood. I wasn't certain whether it was an amusement park, a new roller coaster or a shopping mall. It is a brightness which reflects across the water and shines into the woods and sky, from dusk to dawn.

I am not opposed to development or 'progress,' as long as it is done with intelligent planning, vigilance, and sensitivity to surroundings. What is troubling, however, are the environmental and civic regulations that are not being consistently enforced. For example, an out-of-state investor/builder recently bought a neighboring lot and immediately clear-cut the trees; affecting drainage, natural wind-flow, light, and wildlife. Noise pollution is supposedly being monitored, either by an ordinance or renters' instructions, and is not. Now, what of light pollution? I understand the need for safety lighting in commercial areas, but in the woods? Do we really want to look like a small body of water surrounded by suburbs?

Wake up, folks! Is the goose that laid the golden egg ailing??

Gerald McGee

To the Editor:

As the Independent Living Disability Advocate of Garrett County for Resources for Independence, I would like to share my story about Warm the Children. I assisted 11 families, a total of 16 children, in completing applications for Warm the Children, which provides $100-worth of shopping at Wal-Mart for each child.

The Republican and the Civic Club of Oakland are responsible for the entire program, which begins each year with Mary McEwen at the newspaper reaching out to readers, asking for donations. The next step is the "heart of it all," the donating. Amounts of $1 to $1,000 are sent in, and every donor receives a hand-written thank-you note, all done by Civic Club members led by Ellen Fritz.

Children in need are identified by the school system, public agencies, churches, and other advocates. The applications are processed, and volunteers take the children and their parents shopping. This year, to date, 225 children have been served, equaling $22,500, generously donated by readers.

Betty Ellington of the Civic Club, along with many other volunteers, gives dedicated hours to assist in the shopping. To see the sparkle in children's eyes as they choose each personal item, some clinging to their new winter coats or spider man snow boots, brings a warm feeling to one's heart that is hard to express. In our community, $100 per child is a wonderful gift.

The Wal-Mart staff proudly participates from start to finish. Families are greeted by the warm smile from Fran, and are served by Janice in endless trips to storage room. All the volunteers take great personal pride in their commitment to the program. And it does more than Warm the Children — it warms the hearts of so many. None of it could be possible without the readers' "warm consideration" in donating.

I personally had the opportunity to shop side-by-side with each of our families and with the kind and giving assistance of Betty Ellington. I will hold forever the warm and joyful feeling I had, and I am proud to be part of such a wonderful program. I felt the need to share with everyone just how "warm" the children, families, and entire staff are because of the many donations by you, our citizens.

With sincere thanks,
Mary Ellen Nasif

To the Editor:

First, thanks for the amazing set of pictures of our gymnastic bear! I am sure readers would be interested to know what engineer Bantz next tries in his efforts to defeat the opportunistic creatures!

Second, I miss the "View from My Window" column, and am intrigued by the irony that we now get a 'View from Iraq." We've gone from the musings of a man of peace, a man of the cloth, to the frank observations of a soldier, a man of war, a man of a different kind of uniform from the cloth he wears. It is both jarring and interesting, and my high school English teacher, Earl Boyum, always stressed comparison and contrast as a means by which to learn about and analyze our world. The Republican has certainly added to this with the recent column change!

Third, it is always educating to learn more about our world from "Ask the Everyday Scientist!" His breakdown of the various types of energy in the November 10 Republican was a masterpiece, and a classic. His ability to break complex subjects into easily understandable nuggets of data makes me wonder why his column has never caught on for national syndication. So many people have so little understanding of science, and so few media (especially newspapers) spend much time covering it, that it is a wonder more readers don't appreciate the knowledge he has to offer every week.

Fourth, I commend The Republican editor for the catholic topics covered in the weekly musings. I have been surprised by how frequently the topic of the week is not something parochial or local, but something gleaned from activities or events in Europe or Asia or elsewhere. And even when what some might think is a fairly predictable topic for the week is addressed, such as the annual Great American Smokeout, I am always surprised by the honesty expressed in the editorial. If I were to Google the Great American Smokeout on the Internet and read the various editorial musings of 1,000 other editors in various large and

IRAQ, Dec. 7

Not much here to write about this week. I'm getting back into the swing of things here. Feels like a lifetime has gone by since I was home, and it was only last week. We are busy getting ready for the elections next week. Lots to do and be ready for.

In the meantime, three e-mails from your readers have asked the following:

1) I am interested in sending "letters or items." Can you tell us more of what the soldiers need, outside of what the USO website recommends. For example, if they are not using phone cards as much, what other items may be useful?

Anything is great, snacks are the best, things that we can eat on the run. Phone cards are OK, but they are extremely expensive to use here – it's like 10-to-1 to call home. Any personal hygiene products are great too, because we have very limited supplies.

Also, there is a web site out there, www.supportatroop.com, that we just found out about. Soldiers set up a "wish list" on Amaaon,com, and people back home can buy them something from it. It seems OK, and one of the guys here already got something. (I'm not asking for anything.) People can search for any soldier.

2) I would love to know how the soldiers communicate with the people, but you have stated they do not have much interaction. What about on the base? And how are the people reacting to their ex-leader being on trial? What do the people in the towns he patrols think of Bush? Are some of the Iraqis being trained to be the new military over there? If so, who is doing that – our men? How big are the barracks you are located in? Iraq people are sometimes smaller in body size (height mainly) than Americans, so do the buildings reflect this?

As far as communicating with the Iraqis, I don't do too much talking to them. We don't get out of our tanks, for security reasons. We do have patrols that go into the towns to talk to people, see what the problems are, and what we can do to help them.

My barracks is an old Iraqi airbase control tower, where I share a room with three other soldiers from my platoon. Most of the houses are smaller (unless the family is rich – then they have larger homes). From what I've been told, most don't have furniture, though I'm not sure why. Most Iraqis are about the same height as Americans, not 6-5, but around the average American's height.

I've been on leave for the past few weeks, so I'm not sure how they are reacting to Saddam's trial. Therefore I can't comment on that.

3) Is this the Brian Carlson who's Dad was assistant principal and uncle taught at Southern High School? Does he have a sister named Natalie? If so, he is only a couple years older then me, and I was in high school with his sister. (From Evelyn Bittinger of Charles Town, W. Va.)

No sorry, I am from Ligonier, Pa., and went to school there. I've been asked that question a lot since moving to the Oakland area.

Note: Persons – including children – interested in submitting a question for Sgt. Carlson may do so by e-mailing The Republican at dfoster@therepublicannews.com, or writing to this office at P.O. Box 326, Oakland, MD 21550.

Local Lawmakers Slate Legislative Forum For Public

Senator John Hafer and Delegate George Edwards will conduct their annual pre-legislative public meeting on Saturday, Dec. 10, at 10 a.m. in the auditorium at Garrett College.

The public is encouraged to attend the meeting to voice their concerns and provide input for the legislative session.

Accident Light-Up Correction Noted

A photograph appeared in last week's issue of The Republican showing people of the town of Accident readying for the holiday season. It should be noted that there were two errors in the story. First, it was Joe Canfield of Beitzel Corp. who helped hang the wreathes. Secondly, the town's light-up ceremony will be held Sunday, Dec. 11, at 6 p.m., not on Wednesday, as was reported.

A TRUE SURVIVOR — On October 29, 2004, William "Bill" Warnick of Grantsville barely survived an inadvertent, self-inflicted gunshot wound. In the seconds that followed the incident, Warnick developed a tension pneumo-thorax, or "sucking chest wound," that quickly made it impossible for him to breathe. An extremely rapid response and action by members of the Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad restored breathing to Warnick and saved his life. Warnick is, however, still years away from excruciating pain relief and full recovery, say his doctors. Pictured with Warnick, seated at right, are three of the four crew members who used advanced life support to save him. Seated left is Josh Pope, center is crew leader John Frank, and standing is Doris Beall. Not present for the photo was Paul Harman, paramedic. The crew and Warnick gathered around the first anniversary of the accident to discuss the rescue and recover with Craig Speicher, who took the photo and is writing a full story that will appear in a future issue of The Republican.

CIVIC CLUB OF OAKLAND HELPS WARM THE CHILDREN IN MANY WAYS – A donation of $250 was given to The Republican newspaper's Warm the Children campaign last week by the Civic Club of Oakland. This monetary boost is just one way that the Civic Club has greatly enhanced the program, as the club members are also very involved in operating the unique effort that raises money to buy new winter clothing and footwear for Garrett County's children in need. When the program began 9 years ago, Mary McEwen of the newspaper handled the running of it mostly on her own. As it grew over the years, it was too much for just a few people, and the Civic Club, which had been involved in the program from the very beginning, took on far more responsibility, serving as the main volunteer coordinators and taking on the enormous task of writing the hundreds of thank-you notes. This year the effort brought in over $26,000, and at least 225 children are being served. The remaining money will be kept in savings, and used for local children's benefit in the event of fires, floods, and other disasters. Pictured from left are Betty Ellington, chief volunteer coordinator; McEwen, director; and Ellen Fritz, who heads up the many thank-you note writers, also all members of the Civic Club. "Without these two women, along with Dora Hanlin and the entire Civic Club, Warm the Children may very well have been stopped a few years ago, because it was just too much for so few to handle," McEwen said. "This donation is wonderful, and is icing on the cake, considering the many other tasks the club members do for the success of the program."

4-H Club News

NORTH GLADE

by Samantha Gibson, Reporter

The North Glade 4-H Club held its monthly meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 16. Members in attendance were Rachel Winegardner, Rebecca Winegardner, Lee Custer, Todd Custer, Derek Gilpin, Tyler Gilpin, Samantha Gibson, Nicole and Joe McClosky, Justin and Jeremy Ashby, and Michael McConnell.

Several new members also attended this meeting: Benjamin Rodeheaver, Morgan and McKenzie Rafferty, Brittany Shreve, and Megan and Kyle Sherbin.

Old business discussed was:

The October skeet shooting activity was a great time and well attended. The senior members went with a guide and were able to shoot skeet from different stations along a trail. The junior and clover members stayed at a stationary station. They learned basic gun safety and then were able to shoot still and moving skeet targets.

After the shooting activity the club cooked hot dogs over a fire and held a short meeting.

The hog raffle ends tonight and the drawing will be held at this meeting.

Treasurer Rachal Winegardner gave a report for the Fall Harvest Social, and we raised $300. Also a $100 donation was given to the club at the social by Mr. and Mrs. Don Rodeheaver. A thank-you note needs to be signed and sent to them.

New business discussed was:

New members (listed above) were introduced, and June McClosky explained how to keep a 4-H Record Book.

The members voted to have a pot-luck Christmas party at the 4-H building. It will be held Wednesday, Dec. 21, from 6 to 8 p.m. Each family is to bring a dish and a gift to exchange ($5 value).

The senior and junior members will play Gift Bingo for their exchange. The clovers and younger siblings should also bring a gift to exchange if they want to participate (boys bring a boy's gift; girls bring a girl's gift). Call June with any questions (301-387-2990).

The club will once again sponsor a Warm Up the Community Christmas tree that will be placed inside of Curt's Corner Anchor Mart. The purpose of the tree is to collect canned goods and warm clothing items (mittens, coats, etc.) for needy families in our community. Club members and area residents are asked to drop off items under the tree at Curt's Corner, beginning Dec. 14. The items will then be distributed as needed by the club.

At the conclusion of the meeting the Hog Raffle was held. The two winners were Joshua McKnight and Mr. Lohr of Swanton.

After the meeting the members made Christmas ornaments for the Warm Up tree. The next meeting will be held during the Christmas party on Dec. 21 from 6 to 8 p.m.

DONATIONS SOUGHT BY NORTH GLADE 4-H – For the third year, the North Glade 4-H Club will place a Warm Up the Community Christmas Tree inside Curt's Corner/Anchor Mart store, located at the corner of Rt. 495 and North Glade Road in Swanton. The purpose of the tree is to collect items needed by local families to stay warm through the winter. The club will also like to help feed the community this winter. The following items are needed for adults and children: gloves, hats, scarves, coats, thermal underwear, warm pajamas, and non-perishable food items (canned or boxed). The items can be dropped off at the store beginning Dec. 14. Persons with questions may contact June McClosky at 301-387-2990. In the front, from the left, are Tyler Gilpin, Justin Ashby, Todd Custer, and Nicole McClosky. In the back are Derek Gilpin, Lee Custer, Rachel Winegardner, Liz Regina, Samantha Gibson, and Rebecca Winegardner.

Oak Park Church Taking Steps Into Family Ministry

Participants in Oak Park Church of the Brethren's family ministry mission will present their "faith chests" this Sunday, Dec. 11, during both worship services at 8:15 and 10:30 a.m.

"Everyone is invited to share in our vision to bind parents and children as God intended," said Pastor Mel Menker.

The event is part of the church's on-going effort in equipping parents to "regain the historic and Biblical role as the spiritual leaders of the home."

"We have taken a number of steps to facilitate that transition," Menker said.

He notes that recent surveys have shown that parents want to be those leaders, but over the decades several factors have taken that role away from them. As a result, the bond between parents and children has been "unintentionally damaged."

One of those steps that the church has developed to help repair that damage is a remembrance tool called a "faith chest." The box is designed to go with a child from birth through high school. At the service of dedication for infants, the parents of each child will be given a handmade wooden chest made by the people of the church.

"In each faith chest, memory items will be placed over the years as perpetual reminders of God working in the life of each child," Menker explained. "These memory items include such things as certificates, videos of their baptisms, and other events, and special spiritual projects. A faith chest is an 'eternal' memory that can remind a child of their relationship with God, especially as they go through difficult life challenges."

Other steps that the church has taken include providing ongoing classroom and training opportunities for parents, partnering with the families in the rites of the church, developing a mentoring program, and providing a "dynamic" Sunday School program for children called "Promiseland."

"Created by the Willow Creek Community Church in Chicago, Ill., this concept provides solid Biblical understandings for the children in a vibrant hands-on approach," the pastor said. "The media is changed multiple times within the Sunday school, keeping the children interested and fresh."

Promiseland runs from 9:15 until 10:20 a.m. every Sunday morning.

For more information about the family ministry, persons may call Menker at 301-334-2243.

The public is invited.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

As the Christmas season is rapidly approaching, it is not surprising that winter is here in Bittinger. We are having all kinds of wintry weather. When I heard an unsettling forecast I embarked on stocking up some necessities. Our roads were "winter-mix" meaning some clear patches of road alternating with snow-covered sections blended with slush and too many spots of ice – and even worse, black ice. You never know what is around the corner, which is why I drove slowly. If you slide, you don't know where your car will go. I guess the best place to go is in a nice, soft bank of snow, unless there happens to be one of the many pickups parked along our road, courtesy of deer hunters.

This particular day I was out, it was pretty foggy and any oncoming vehicles were almost invisible. In this kind of condition, drivers tend to drive in the middle of the road. I thought I ran out of "D" words to describe the weather during the early days of winter when I used dreary, drab, and dismal, but I have to add another one – "dangerous."

That day I was out on the road, Lesa and Maddy Whittemore enjoyed a cozy day at home after a few hectic days, which included a long road trip the weekend after Thanksgiving to attend a bridal shower for Gregory's bride-to-be in Kentucky. Last weekend they celebrated Maddy's 12th birthday on Saturday with 12 of her girlfriends, including my Meredith, and Caitlin and Emma Bass.

My daughters rushed to the next event on their busy schedules, attending the annual Bittinger 4-H Club caroling event, along with some singers from Emmanuel Lutheran Church who sang the traditional Christmas carols at Goodwill Mennonite Home. My talented and sweet nephews, Darryl and Elliot Glotfelty, entertained the home with some guitar music.

The following Sunday morning was so icy that Emmanuel Lutheran's Sunday morning worship service was canceled. Glade Mennonite did go on with their service, according to Sherri Weaver, and they were surprised at the good turnout. The children of Glade will present a Christmas program on Sunday morning, Dec. 18. They will hold a song service Christmas morning.

Pastor Mitchell will do just one Christmas Eve service at Emmanuel at 7 p.m. Lynn Patton will conduct St. John's and Zion's services. Thank goodness we have an early service this year. When our pastor had to do all three services sometimes we came up with the late service at 10 p.m. The young people with the choir will present a program titled "The Signs of Christmas." Communion will be celebrated along with the traditional candle lighting service during the singing of "Silent Night."

Outside our little world a big controversy is trying to take the saying "Merry Christmas" and replace it with "Happy Holidays," which, of course, is taking the central issue of the holiday which is celebrating of the birth of Christ. But through this controversy we are not immune to the pressure to spend more for lavish gifts. The Kay Jewelry commercial, saying "Every kiss begins with a diamond," especially annoys me, as if nothing but a diamond gift is worthy of a kiss.

My family got a real live Christmas Carol one week before Christmas in 1956 when my little sister Carol was born. When she came home she looked like a Christmas sugar cookie. Mother and Dad named her Carol because she was their little Christmas carol.

Last week Gary and Sharon Buckel went south to Florida to visit Kenny Sisler and the former Alice Vitez. Then they swung through Lexington, Ky., to visit with Dave and Donna Buckel.

There is an unusual cluster of birthdays in mid-December, being mostly those of the Buckel boys. The late Pete Buckel's birthday was Dec. 12. Pastor Jim Mitchell shares a birthday with Gary Buckel on the 15th. The next day, the 16th, happens to be the birthday of both Dave and Denny Buckel.

Another reason to go slowly around the intersection of Accident Bittinger Road and Rock Lodge Road is a very large black bear that is hanging around there. It visited again on the porch of the Bass home and later that evening it knocked down Ruth DiPaolo's bird feeder. It made a huge racket, and when she looked out he was standing by her porch railing. She tried to get a picture, but don't know if she was successful. She was surprised that her little fluffy guard dog [illegible] not raise the alarm, as any unusual intrusions will cause him to bark and stir up a fuss.

Sheila Southerly spotted some big bear tracks around her laws. She hopes they will soon disappear, as the cold weather should drive them into hibernation.

Torrey Poholsky talked to his dad Lenny the other day bemoaning the dismal performance of our Steelers last Sunday. He told his parents he was sweating in about 70-degree weather at his college in North Carolina. He will be in for quite a shock when he comes home for the holidays.

My car door was frozen shut this morning and after quite a struggle to get into it, it would not start. The fresh fluffy snow this morning is pretty, so the muddy mess is now replaced with our usual Christmas winter scenery.

Phyllis Mazer, Columbia, and Susan Scheffrea, Rockville, visited with Ferne Beachy and Sam and Cindy Stanton Monday and Tuesday.

Special Events!

The birth of one baby was announced this week.

A son was born to Paul J. and Robin (Roth) Nazelrod, Friendsville, on Nov. 20 at Garrett County Memorial Hospital.

Adorable Adoptables

A HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS? These two female siblings have been at the Garrett County Animal Shelter for several weeks and would love to be adopted into a warm, cozy home for the holidays. Also at the shelter is a young longhaired female tabby. She was brought in as a stray and is described as very friendly and soft. "Please come in and meet them and all the other nice felines we have," said a Humane Society spokesperson. "Please make sure your pets have adequate shelter from the cold weather. This includes dogs, cats, rabbits, and even farm animals. Straw is available at the shelter that can be used for insulation and warmth in dog houses. Take only what you need." For more information, persons may call the shelter at 301-334-3553.

Auditions For Spoon River Anth. Slated At OTT

Auditions for Edgar Lee Master's play Spoon River Anthology are scheduled at Our Town Theatre on Sunday, Dec. 11, from 2 to 5 p.m.; Monday, Dec. 12, from 7 to 9 p.m.; and Wednesday, Dec. 14, from 4 to 6 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

The show will be presented Jan. 25 to 29.

A large number of actors from age 16 and up are needed for the production, according to Jane Avery, director of the production.

"This is the type of play where we can cast 7 to 70 people," Avery said. "I'd love to have a lot of people in the production, especially those who have never been in a play and who would like to give it a try."

The play is a series of small monologues which are the words of the members of a small town in Illinois during the early 1900s.

"It's always difficult to rehearse a play in December and January because of the weather, so I'm hoping to have only six rehearsals for the actors – three with the entire cast and three for each individual actor. That way most of the rehearsal times are flexible," Avery said.

Questions about the production may be directed to Avery at 301-334-5640, option 3. The play will be produced through special arrangement with Samuel French Incorporated and is funded in part by the Maryland State Arts Council and the Garrett County Arts Council.

small newspapers all across America this week, I would be willing to wager only one editorial bluntly told smokers, "You stink." So many editors are concerned these days about being politically correct that many have forgotten that the purpose of an editorial is not to be wishy-washy and dance around all sides of an issue, but to make an emphatic point!

Sincerely yours,
Douglas Scott Arey
Westover

To the Editor:

The proposal by the county commissioners to create a scholarship program for Garrett County residents to attend Garrett College is one of the most constructive and forward-thinking initiatives in my experience. Creating an opportunity at this scale for people in the county to take advantage of higher education will do more to raise the earning power and knowledge base of our workforce than any one action conceivable to me

I want to commend the commissioners for coming up with this policy. If there is new revenue generated from the windmills, what better use is there than to invest in our own people in a way that will give long term benefits? Criticism of the program because of the revenue source is disingenuous at best.

The scholarship program creates real opportunity for all our citizens. It is unique in the country. This program makes a lot of sense, with the county's improved economic conditions and the challenges of growing the skills and knowledge required of future workers and businesses.

Sincerely,
Duane Yoder
President
GC Community Action Comm.

Dear Mr. Yoder,

Just to clarify, I couldn't agree with you more that this would be a marvelous thing for the county to be able to finance, and perhaps I should have made that point more clearly in last week's editorial. I believe it is obvious, with every single issue of our paper, how exceedingly important we here at The Republican believe education to be for all of our residents.

It just seems that, with the county finances as healthy as they are these days without wind turbines, there should be a number of other ways to fund such a program than with turbine tax revenues.

My opinion was – and still is – that this selection by the commissioners for the use of these yet-to-be realized funds, albeit quite worthy, is more a case of political back-pedaling on their part. As always, others have very different opinions about it, and I appreciate your expressing yours.

Editor

To the Editor:

I have spent 34 years working with Garrett County kids, and to imply that politics is the motivating factor in my support of tuition credit at Garrett College for Northern and Southern high school students is blatantly ridiculous, absurd, and insulting.

David C. Beard
County Commissioner

To the Editor:

[illegible] reference to "Our New Addition" column by Beth Bowers, millions of cats and dogs are euthanized every year in this country because there are not enough homes for them. It would have been far more commendable of Ms. Bowers to have adopted a shelter animal who may otherwise have been euthanized than to promote her purchase of a dog from a breeder, a purchase which, incidentally, teaches her children nothing about the reality of pet overpopulation and the importance of being responsible citizens.

I am very grateful that, as a child, my mother instilled in me the value of rescuing abused and abandoned animals; we adopted our cats from the Maryland SPCA, the Humane Society of Baltimore County, and Baltimore City Animal Control. They all made wonderful pets, and I urge your readers to visit the many shelters and rescue groups in Maryland that are devoted to finding animals new homes. They just might save a life!

Lacey Levitt
Los Angeles

Dear Ms. Levitt,

Since you probably see only our on-line edition, you likely don't know that every issue of our print edition contains two, three, four, or more photos of cats and dogs from the Garrett County animal shelter, all available for adoption. Hundreds of local animals have been spared because of our many years of providing this coverage.

Just thought knowing this might brighten your day.

Editor

To the Editor:

I understand the concerns some groups have for themselves and the community regarding the Oakland bypass project. However, I don't believe their concerns should stop the project from proceeding as other concerns did in the late 1970s. At that time the estimated cost was $ 6 -7 million and the bypass's basic route remains the same. Now opponents estimate the cost is $42 million.

It is a fact that after the extremely tumultuous times of the mid 1990s when Bausch & Lomb and Kelly Springfield closed and unemployment rates were in the low to mid teens that Garrett County and Oakland have grown and our unemployment rate has plummeted. According to the Maryland Department of Labor, in October 2005 our Garrett County unemployment rate was 4%.

As a result of that growth, Oakland's retail economy is at an all-time high and there is very little retail space available to expand unless the Oakland mayor and city council adjust the zoning map or annex.

According to the Maryland State Highway Administration, in 2004 the annual average daily traffic volume on U.S. Route 219 near Wal-Mart was 15,175 vehicles per day. On Oak Street (MD 135) near the intersection with US 219 and Hutton Road (MD 39) the average daily traffic was 15,675! It shouldn't be surprising then as Garrett Countians for Smart Growth state, "58% of all trucks" going through Oakland are making deliveries. However, that means that 42% of the trucks going through Oakland are not making deliveries, but are going elsewhere!

Given the continuing growth opportunities outlined by Jim Hinebaugh, director of the Garrett County Department of Economic Development, of another possible big-box retailer and a possible distribution/ trucking company locating in the Southern Industrial Park, it would be illogical to abandon the Oakland bypass project.

In closing, I noticed that the Garrett Countians for Smart Growth lament that the bypass will "traverse through prime agricultural … property" as though it will negatively impact our agricultural and family farm community. I would respectively refer them to the column, "Farming on The Mountaintop", page C-8 of your November 17, 2005, issue. It would appear that the Garrett County Chapter of the Maryland Farm Bureau passed a resolution in support of the Oakland bypass project at its most recent annual meeting.

Sincerely,
Dave Moe
Republican Candidate for The Maryland House of Delegates

NHS BOOKS FEATURED AT FSU CHILDREN'S LITERATURE FESTIVAL – More than 100 authors from Northern High School had their books featured at several events this year. First, the books were on display and used in a small group presentation at the Frostburg State Children's Literature Festival, directed by Dr. William Bingman and Dr. Barbara Ornstein. The festival takes place every spring and includes four notable authors, small group presentations, book signings, and a luncheon. The books were also used in a presentation this summer in Wheeling, W.Va., for elementary school staff. The staff plans to use an adaptation of the book project in their school. The books were part of a children's book project for Shawn Nicklin's world history classes. The books will be donated to the four elementary schools in the northern end of the county in the spring of this year. Several current students plan to donate books to Northern Middle School as well. Students from Northern High School will visit at least six elementary schools in the county to help younger students create books of their own. The elementary schools include Friendsville, Route 40, Grantsville, Accident, Dennett Road, and Yough Glades. Last year, more than 500 students created books in the county. One of the best parts of this project, said Shawn Nicklin, "is seeing my students mentor young people." Pictured above are 10 authors with their books. In the front, from left to right are Shayla Rodeheaver (Olympic Games including boxing and wrestling), Andrea Warnick (Famous Women including Rosa Parks and Queen Elizabeth I), Sarah Shawley (Cathedrals including Canterbury and Chartres), Ashley Birkby (Famous Horses including General Lee's horse), and Cassie Fike (Operation Desert Storm, dedicated to her brother who fought in the war). In the back row are Loren Klink (The 60's including the Cuban Missile Crisis and Elvis), Crystal Fazenbaker (Famous Women, dedicated to her sister who passed away at three months of age), Heather Thomas (Forms of Writing including Cyrillic, [illegible], and Yiddish), Jackie Rodeheaver (Olympic Sites including Berlin and Greece), and Alyson McKenzie (Joan of Arc including her fight for justice).

Rams Make It A Sweet Debut For New Coach Paul Pacella

It was a sweet debut for new Southern High School boys' varsity coach Paul Pacella, as his relatively inexperienced Rams used tenacious defense to hand previously unbeaten Bishop Walsh a convincing 47-23 defeat in Oakland on Tuesday.

While it was the season opener for the Rams, the Spartans came to Oakland riding a 3-0 record.

Southern took control of the contest early and never looked back, with the Spartans' best quarter being the second, in which they recorded just nine points. They were held to only four points in the third stanza, and five in the final quarter.

Pacing the Rams in scoring were Ryan DeWitt and Joe Tressler, who finished with 14 and 12 points, respectively.

DeWitt also spearheaded his team's rebounding effort by pulling down eight. Southern out-boarded BW by a 27-18 margin.

Sean McCreery was credited with three assists and three steals for the Rams.

Leading the Spartans' scoring was Nathan Harriott, who had only six points.

"I was very pleased to get a win in our first game," Coach Pacella said. "Our players have really responded in practice, and they carried out our game plan, especially on the defensive end, very well."

Pacella added that several Rams stood out defensively.

"Joe Tressler and Andrew VanBogelen did an exceptional job of keeping BW forward Nathan Harriott in check. He scored only six points with none coming in the second half," he said.

"It was a great experience for me in my first game as coach," he continued. "The crowd, especially 'The Sixth Man' (students), was terrific!"

The Southern junior varsity squad also coasted to a 57-37 win in the preliminary contest behind 17-point efforts by both Drew Proudfoot and Jordan Pacella. Leading the BW jayvees with 13 points was Alex Trivanovic.

The Rams will likely face a stiff challenge at home this Friday when they host Beall, a team that unexpectedly crushed Northern on Tuesday. The jayvee game will tip off at 6 p.m., and the varsity contest will get under way at 7:30.

"Beall will be a great challenge," Pacella said. "They have four returning starters and very good size, which makes them one of the better teams in the area."

Southern will travel to Petersburg next Tuesday.

To paraphrase Clint Eastwood, "A team has got to know its limitations." The Northern High School boys' varsity basketball squad got an early idea of where it needs to bone up as a powerful effort underneath the basket by the Beall Mountaineers helped knock NHS off in Tuesday's season opener. The hosts took a 46-30 win over a very talented Northern squad by concentrating on the Huskies' soft underbelly – the inside game.

"Our main concern is post defense and rebounding, because we will be outsized in many games and do not have a major inside force," NHS head coach Paul Edwards said in preseason comments before the game that proved a harbinger of what the Mounties had in store. "Those are the main challenges we'll have to overcome."

Neither team could gain a clear advantage in the first half of Tuesday's contest, as the opening quarter ended with Beall up by a narrow 7-5 margin, and the guests held an identical two-point lead at the half, 21-19. The guests widened the margin to four points by the opening of the final stanza, 32-28.

Beall took control in the fourth quarter by tightening down the screws in the paint and limiting the Huskies' shooting opportunities to long-range attempts. NHS was held to a lone bucket over the final eight minutes, while the Mounties put 14 points on the board.

Beall's performance was paced by team-high scorer Justin Shipe, who had 11 points and eight rebounds, while teammate Matt DeRosa tallied 10 points, and Adam Eshleman contributed seven points and seven rebounds.

Northern senior point guard Chris Speicher had a game-high 12 points for the Huskies, and sophomore forward Kory Gibson had eight, including a pair of buckets from three-point range. No other Husky scored more than two points.

Northern's junior varsity took it on the chin in a 44-14 loss to its Beall counterpart. Dan Cunningham led all scorers with 12 points for the Mounties.

NHS won't have any easy pickings as it tries to get on the winning track this week, for Cumberland's two powerhouses are slated to pay visits. Fort Hill will be at Northern tomorrow and Allegany comes to Accident on Tuesday. Both contests have 7:30 p.m. varsity tip-offs, which follow the 6 p.m. jayvee meetings.

SEASON PREVIEW

Despite the early stumble, there are high hopes in the Cove as the Huskies appear to have the ingredients to cook up a superb campaign. The 2005-06 Huskies are "perhaps the best team talent-wise I've ever had," said seventh-year NHS skipper Paul Edwards, who comes into the season with a trio of returning three-year starters and a fourth starter back from last season's 14-10 unit.

"This team is experienced and deep," Edwards commented. "Senior forward Blake Walker and senior guards Brent Beachy and Chris Speicher each earned post-season accolades last year, and are set to finish out with some pretty lofty career numbers. Sophomore forward Kory Gibson is also a returning starter, and he and senior forward Paul Logan have made some major improvements over the off season, as has junior guard Lucas McMillan. I think those guys will surprise some people."

Beachy was a Second-Team All-Area selection last season, as he paced Northern's scorers with a 15.2 point per game average while hauling down 6 rebounds and 3 assists per outing. The 6-2 shooting guard is likely to climb into the school's Top 10 career scoring list, according to Edwards.

Walker, a 6-2 forward, is also a deadly shooter who is on pace to make his mark on the program's all-time leaders list. Last season he averaged 13.2 ppg, nailing 58 percent of his field goal attempts and 82 percent of his opportunities from the free-throw line, and grabbing 5.4 rebounds per contest. He has a chance to finish in the top five in field goal and free throw shooting, and in the top 20 in career scoring.

Speicher, one of the most exciting point guards in the area, is coming off an 11.3 ppg, 6.7 assist per game season. The 5-9 backcourt general has the school assist record in his sights this year.

"Our biggest strengths are our depth and experience," commented Edwards, who is assisted this year by a staff of Ron Opel, Harv Speicher, Chris Elliott, Gregg Hostetler, and Dallas Lang. "We will be a legitimate nine-deep squad, and all 12 guys are wholly committed to winning. That competitiveness is a big strength – these guys absolutely love to compete. We can shoot, play defense and run with anyone.

"Our main concern is post defense and rebounding, because we will be outsized in many games and do not have a major inside force."

Northern will have some tough tests this year, as western Maryland features several very strong boys' teams this season. Edwards pointed out that Allegany is looking for a "three-peat" region title with basically the same cast as last year. "Fort Hill moving down is always tough, Bishop Walsh will be big and a solid club, Southern will be better than most people think they will be, and I think Beall will be pretty good," the NHS coach stated.

"As always, our goals are to win our own Christmas Classic, the WMIL and 1A West Region titles, and the state championship. I think we have the potential to go a long way."

Ram Girls Declaw Lions In Cager Campaign Kick-Off

The Southern High School girls' varsity basketball squad mounted a strong stretch effort last night to take a 59-39 win over host Tucker County in the Rams' season opener.

The contest was tied after the first quarter at 10-all, but SHS started upping the pressure through the second stanza to claim a 27-23 halftime advantage. By the opening of the final quarter the Rams were up 39-31, and outscored their hosts by a 13-8 margin over the last eight minutes.

Southern senior Kendra McLaughlin led all scorers with 17 points, including a pair of three-point buckets, and classmate Sarah Cosner recorded a dozen points while junior Sarah Stephens contributed nine points and five steals. Senior Caitlyn Brown pulled in 12 rebounds.

The Lions were led by Chelse Gsell's nine points.

The Rams' junior varsity got off to a winning start as well with a hard-fought 36-34 win. Morgan Anderson led the way with 10 points.

The Rams' home opener is set for Wednesday night when Westmar's Wildcats pay a visit for a 6 p.m. JV match-up and a 7:30 p.m. varsity battle. SHS visits Smithsburg on Friday, Dec. 16.

SEASON PREVIEW

A strong foundation is in place for the SHS team to build on this season, for the Rams return three of their five starters from last year's 18-8 squad. That floor experience, especially in the form of last year's leading scorer McLaughlin and leading rebounder Brown, gives SHS coach Rodger Bowman cause to believe the Rams can make a productive run through the 2005-06 campaign.

The four seniors who departed from last year's team – starters Jasmine Scheffel and Kayla Nazelrod, and important substitute players Julia Bosley and Ashley Stuck – leave a void, to be sure, but the return of McLaughlin at guard, Brown at center, and starting point guard Stephens bodes well for the Rams. Joining the starting lineup will be forwards Cosner, and Brittany Boyce.

"Our starting lineup can change at any time, with Adrienne Yoder, Jessica Petrella, and Elizabeth Ray coming in at forward, and also Brittany Scheffel, Kerry Conroy, and Torie Bosley available at guard," Bowman noted.

"With our strong senior leadership I feel the new players will be able to understand the team concept that we are building. If we use our height to our advantage, we should be very good at rebounding."

Bowman and assistants Steve Cosner and Ken McLaughlin have their fingers crossed in hopes that injuries don't place stumbling blocks in the way of Southern's efforts. Despite her strong performance last night, McLaughlin is coming off surgery during the off-season, and Petrella is recovering from a nagging injury that kept her out of most pre-season practice sessions.

"Want to improve every game with our focus on that game," the SHS skipper said. "Allegany, Keyser, Smithsburg, and Fort Hill could be the most difficult opponents on our schedule, and will provide us with some real tests. With hard work, we think we have a chance to make it to the state tournament."

NHS Girls Open With Big Win Over Saiisbury's Elks

It was a hugely successful opening-day hunt for the Northern High School girls' varsity basketball squad, which handily bagged the Salisbury Elks by 21 points, 49-28. The Huskies played Beall last night, but the results were not made available this morning.

Senior guard Jessie Fratz paced the Huskies' home court victory over Salisbury with 11 points, while classmate Amy Shaffer, sophomores Brittany Stein, Sarah Voelkel, and Kasie Fratz, and freshman Megan Wiley contributed six points apiece. Wiley also hauled down eight rebounds and snagged two steals, while Voelkel and Kasie Fratz each grabbed six rebounds.

Salisbury was led by Lindsey Otto with 10 points.

The game started off close, and NHS held a slim 6-4 advantage after one quarter of play. The Huskies trotted out to a 20-11 lead at the half, and were up 32-22 going into the final stanza.

Northern is slated to visit Allegany Monday and Fort Hill next Thursday, Dec. 15. Game times are set for 6 p.m. junior varsity, and 7:30 p.m. for the varsity.

Lakers Win Two More JUCO Games; Streak Upped To Six

Convincing, on-the-road victories this past week over CCBC-Essex and Montgomery-Germantown extended the win streak of the Garrett College men's basketball team to six, as the Lakers crushed Essex Saturday in Baltimore, 71-47, and whipped host Germantown last evening, 89-58.

The results upped the Lakers' overall record to 6-2 and kept their Maryland JUCO mark perfect at 3-0.

Barry Cornish paced the Lakers with 17 points and seven rebounds in the win over Essex, while Ivan Funcic hit three straight three-pointers and finished with 13 points. Teammate Nehemiah Boykin was right behind with 12 points, and Tyrice Watkins, who had a pair of long-range goals, chipped in with nine points.

The Lakers held a commanding 37-17 advantage at halftime.

Leading Essex offensively, and the only player on his team to reach double figures, was Jacob Culver with 15 points.

Cornish again led the Lakers last night against Montgomery-Germantown, netting 21 points on eight buckets and five of six attempts from the foul line. Watkins, Funcic, and Chris Henderson also finished in double figures for the Lakers, hitting 16, 13, and 12 points, respectively.

The Lakers took control of the contest early and never looked back, hitting a pair of three-points immediately for a 6-0 lead. They stretched that margin to 20-4, and were on top 43-20 at intermission.

Garrett also finished with a 46-32 lead in rebounds, with Cornish grabbing 11.

Reaching double figures in assists was Pat Carwile, who dished out half of the Lakers' total of 24.

Smith led the Gryphons in scoring with a game-high 25 points.

GC coach Dennis Gibson was pleased with his team's "focus," and pointed out the performance of Watkins.

"Tyrice ran the offense very well, moving the ball around and making good decisions," he said. "He was the catalyst for us on offense, plus he had five blocks."

The Lakers will try to keep their winning streak going this Saturday when they host Harford CC in a 7 p.m. JUCO contest.

Lakers Out-Joust Knights, Crush CCAC, Cage Cats

The Garrett College women's basketball team took all three of its outings this week, opening Saturday with a 59-56 squeaker over the College of Southern Maryland before going on a tear by downing CCAC-South 85-69 Monday and demolishing Potomac State last night by an 81-51 margin.

It took a balanced Laker effort to knock off the host Knights Saturday, and sophomore guard Jami Anderson led the way with 18 points on eight field goals and two successful free throws in four attempts. The sophomore also dished out nine assists and snagged three steals. Classmate Eugenna Carson and freshman Ashley Hill contributed 11 points each, and sophomore Kierra Wilkins recorded 10 points. Freshman Flodysha Peterson hauled down 11 rebounds, Carson snagged seven, and Wilkins dished out five assists while nabbing four steals.

Southern Maryland's Kalee Smith had 18 points and Brittany Bines 14 points.

Garrett led by 10 at halftime, 35-25. The game could have gone either way at the foul line, where a total of 59 attempts were taken; however, each squad shot less than 50 percent from the charity stripe.

"I think the long trip took its toll," said Garrett head coach Thea Garland. "We led the whole game but we couldn't put them away at the end. We're just thankful for the win."

Playing in Pittsburgh Monday, the Lakers left nothing to chance by taking a 16-point win over host CCAC-South. Anderson paced the squad with 21 points, and Wilkins chipped in 17. (Further details were not available.)

Last night's home court contest with Potomac State was a blowout seemingly from the opening tip-off, as the Lakers raced out to a 48-26 halftime lead and never looked back.

Carson sparked GC with a double-double tally of 21 points and 11 rebounds, and Wilkins hit for 13 points while dishing out five assists and nabbing three steals. Peterson also put in a fine all-around effort of 13 rebounds, four assists, and three steals. Anderson put up 11 points, as did Northern High product Jeseca Gibson.

The Catamounts (4-5) were led by game-high scorer Nikkeia Daniels, who had 23 points, while Kacey Kahl had their second-highest tally with nine.

Garrett (5-2 overall, 3-1 Maryland JUCO) visits Frederick Saturday before the Christmas break. The Lakers following contest won't take place until Wednesday, Jan. 4, when Baltimore City comes to McHenry.

Trophy Whitetail Hunting

Local Garrett County residents, Donald & Robin Moreland, have opened a trophy whitetail hunting business in south eastern Ohio. Located only three hours from Garrett County in the wooded hill country of Athens County, South Eastern Ohio Trophy Whitetails offers some of the finest whitetail hunting there is.

Offering trophy whitetail hunting on over one thousand acres in Athens County. Guests stay in one of three modern, private cabins, complete with air conditioning, satellite television, along with ponds for fishing. The cottages are also rented for summer vacations. These properties have been intensely managed for over eight years to produce trophy whitetail that will gross 150 B&C to over 200 gross B&C points. Pictured are two bucks grossing over 150 B&C recently taken by this year's bow hunters. The buck on the right, hanging on the Moreland's barn was harvested on opening day of Ohio bow season by Athens County neighbor, Mike Rex. This buck had 17 points and a gross B&C score of over 239. The deer mount on the left shows the sheds found from the Rex buck found during the 2004 hunting season. The deer mount on the right is the actual deer taken October 1, 2005.

Ohio ranks # 4 for record book deer harvested. The Morelands offer world class whitetail hunting that rivals Illinois, Texas, and Canada, for half the price of most trophy hunts and only three hours away.

THE BUCK STOPPED HERE for 14-year-old Frank Bartram, who brought down this fine seven-point near Swanton on Junior Hunt Day during his very first deer hunt. Frank had to crawl a far distance on his belly to get into position to take the buck with his open-sight Remington rifle as his dad supervised. He is the son of Jeff and Jackie Bartram of Oakland.

Northern Matmen Open With Wins Over Keyser, Hyndman

tle/can. A 30-pack case, therefore, has a 60-cent tax. In Fiscal Year 2005, the county collected $151,114 in taxes, according to Owston. The revenue goes into the county's general fund.

House explained that the beer tax began in 1933, soon after prohibition was repealed, as a way for the county to generate funds to construct shelters at school-bus stops. The commissioners and others noted that few, if any, bus stops exist in the county now.

Shortly after their meeting with the wholesalers and retailers, the commissioners announced their decision to support legislation to abolish the beer tax.

Delegate George Edwards and Senator John Hafer will introduce the proposed legislation when the General Assembly convenes in Annapolis. The 421st session will run from Jan. 11 until April 10.

The commissioners will also meet with the local lawmakers next Tuesday to discuss their legislative requests for the upcoming General Assembly session.

DEEP CREEK BAPTIST CHURCH

From Our Church To Our Community

SHUSH IT'S CHRISTMAS

A few weeks ago I thought to myself, there is simply no way that the anti—God mongers in our country can tamper with Thanksgiving. The word is self explanatory. During the next week while shopping in Oakland, I went by one of our local businesses with a large sign in the window that read; HAPPY TURKEY DAY.

Have you noticed the absence of the word Christmas in all the hoopla to get you to buy presents for everybody you know and some you don't know? We are supposed to give these gifts to one another on that mysterious, coded day called "DECEMBER 25" or "THE HOLIDAY". Why don't we just come out with it and call it "WAL-MART DAY"? I feel sorry for dads and mothers with young children, trying to answer their questions and be cool, and politically correct.

In politics it's called "the spin." In advertising, "the hustle." It would be silly if it weren't so sad and sinful. Sad because a very needy world is doing its best to conceal the one gift that keeps on giving and is the gift for the person that has it all or has nothing at all. This greatest of all MAKEOVER is sinful because it is an "IN YOUR FACE" rejection of God's very personal love to us. The Birth Announcement could not be more to the point and passionate. It reads:

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believes in Him, shall not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved."
John 3:16, 17

It seems to be human nature to believe we are not alone in the universe, and that we have ancestry beyond our own species. Man has tried in vain to validate these yearnings. A remake of H.G. Well's War of the Worlds is currently making the rounds in the theaters and video stores. Actor Orsen Wells created a panic on Halloween night in 1939 when he read a portion of Well's story over live radio as a news story. We have a tornado taking Dorothy over the rainbow to a land called Oz. Than there was Close Encounters of the Third Kind. Though scientist Carl Sagan didn't believe in an afterlife, he wrote in his novel, Contact as if he wished there was life after life. An "out of this world" TV Series with Captain Kirk and the starship Enterprise has become a national fixture. The desire for something to be "Out There" without it being GOD goes on and on.

Then there is the matter of looking for our "roots". Where did we come from? How did we get here? And who are we? The evolutionary model says it's all an accident. Two specks or sparks randomly ran into each other, and several million years later you and me evolved from a long line of living animals, creatures and organisms.

All of this is painfully prophesied and has been public record in the ancient Christian Scriptures for two thousand years. The first chapter of Romans talks about us humans, "exchanging the truth of God into a lie..." (verse 25) Jesus said in John 3:13 that no one has left this planet and gone up to Heaven has come down from Heaven to planet Earth. (John 3:13)

The Jews of Jesus' day were people of the book, but as Satan used God's word to trick Eve into sinning, so the resistant will of the human heart deceives itself and deepens its own darkness. Jesus told a crowd of His countrymen:

"You search the Scriptures. for in them you think you have [illegible] life: and they are they which testify of Me; and you will not [illegible] have life."
John 5:39,40

There is nothing wrong with the fun of fantasy as long as we can separate fact from fiction and do indeed embrace the things that are fact. There is simply too much out there that fits the indictment Jesus made in John 5:40. "You will not come unto Me..."

Matthew's description of Jesus' birth includes the prophecy of Isaiah, found in Isaiah 7:14 and quoted in Matthew 1:23:

"Behold, the virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call His name Immanuel, which being interpreted, is God with us."

The cardinal belief system of Christianity is clear.

"And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness; God was manifest in the flesh..." I Timothy 3:16

"GOD. . .has spoken unto us by His Son... who, being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His person..." Hebrews 1:1-3

"...has given to us the ministry of reconciliation; which is that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself..." II Corinthians 5:18,19

Our planet has, without a doubt, had an alien visitor, but He wasn't actually a stand-in for Superman or Santa Claus, though He did some of the wonderful things these action heroes do in make believe. Listen once more to what Christians believe to be fact.

"Christ Jesus, who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man. . ."

It may surprise you to know that there are people out there that won't accept simple answers. These people bow to complicated concepts, to metaphysical mysteries. They dabble in delusion and smile condescendingly to our old fashioned ignorance. I am here this morning to tell you that the gospel of Christ is the only solution out there that has something for everyone. It is as simple as love and as complicated as faith. You want metaphysical? Here it is:

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God... And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. John 1:1,14

Evolutionists have searched in vain for "the missing link" that will tie one species to another species. Their imagined fantasies have been discredited time and time again. I believe we can say without any embarrassment that at this technological time in human history, it takes more faith to believe in evolution than it takes to believe that God took on human form and appeared on earth in a Bethlehem manger.

In an honest appeal to be helpful and not holier-than-thou, I would like to tell the evolutionist that he or she is looking in the wrong direction to find "the missing link." Those three important questions: Where did we come from? How did we get here? and Who are we? can only be satisfactorily answered by looking up, not down. "The Missing Link" between you and your origin is Jesus. Only He carried with Him what you were, created in the image of God, and what you are, human flesh. When mankind insists upon solving the 3 identity questions by accident and animals; he empowers the moral monster within himself. One does not get rid of sin by denying its existence. We unleash it.

When we embrace the gospel, the incarnation, the Christmas Story, we give the gift of GOD to ourselves. How sad and how sinful is our state of affairs, when we consciously cross Christ out of His own birthday celebration. For the good of every human being on planet earth we should be SHOUTING, IT'S CHRISTMAS. and resisting the wrong solution of a tainted tolerance that masks the message of Christianity with a SHUSH, IT'S CHRISTMAS. [illegible] The end

Footnote: This sermon was preached by Pastor Donald M. Wilson at the morning worship service of the Deep Creek Baptist Church, Oakland, Maryland on the first Sunday of December 2005. After the sermon the congregation sang a Christmas Carol. Pastor Wilson [illegible] away from the pulpit, then stepped back and said; "Oh, by the way, "Happy Holiday" to which he received a resounding "Merry Christmas."

Bartlett: Oil Depletion Requires 'Man On Moon'-Scale Solution

by Jacqueline Rettimann
Capital News Service

WASHINGTON — The decline in world oil reserves is such a pressing and enormous problem that it will take a project of the same magnitude as putting a man on the moon to solve it, Rep. Roscoe Bartlett, R-Frederick, told House colleagues Wednesday.

In 1970, the United States already reached the halfway point of its oil production and has been facing diminishing supplies ever since. The rest of the world will soon approach the same "peak" or tipping point — some experts project that will arrive as soon as 2015, but no later than 2030 — and when it does, it will have to face numerous economic, political, and social issues that come along with it.

"How and when we as individuals and government leaders will respond to global "peak oil" is what we need to address immediately," said Bartlett in his written statement before the House Subcommittee on Energy and Air Quality.

"I believe global 'peak oil' presents our country with a challenge as daunting as the one that faced the astronauts and staff of the Apollo 13 program," the congressman said. "Contingency planning, training, incredible ingenuity and collaboration to solve the problem brought the Apollo 13 astronauts back home safe."

Already there's evidence of the kind of problems an oil shortage could create. Gas prices that topped $3 per gallon nationally after Hurricane Katrina damaged U.S. production capability in August caused widespread discontent and a call for a better energy policy.

"The U.S. government must lead and inspire Americans' unmatched ingenuity and creativity to end our unacceptable and unsustainable energy vulnerability and to prevent a worldwide economic tsunami from global 'peak oil,'" Bartlett said.

Bartlett said he hoped to heighten American interest for this looming worldwide problem through the passage of a House resolution he sponsored to "establish an energy project with the magnitude, creativity, and sense of urgency that was incorporated in the 'Man on the Moon' project."

His bill also calls for the United States to more efficiently use fossil fuels, such as oil and natural gas, and to accelerate the transition to alternative and renewable sources of energy such as solar, wind, ethanol, and hydrogen.

"Almost like children who have found the cookie jar, we have shown no restraint," said Bartlett. He told the committee that the U.S. consumes 25 percent of the world's oil, and pumps it out four times faster than the rest of world from its reserves, which constitute just 2 percent of the world's supply.

Professor Kjell Aleklett from Sweden's Uppsala University warned the United States during the hearing to think about a future when it cannot solely rely on international oil, the source of two-thirds of the country's oil supply.

"Peak oil is a reality," he said. "Why should the United States consume twice the amount of oil than Europe does? We do just fine with half."

Exactly when the world will peak is not as important as to what actions should be done to offset it.

"Maximum and peak oil is coming," said Robert Hirsch, senior energy program advisor for Science Applications International Corp., but no one can predict exactly when. Hirsch said that if the United States waits until the peak occurs, the world will have energy problems 20 years afterward. If the U.S. waits 10 years before the actual peak, then it will still face a decade of problems. If the U.S. does something now, however, the problem could be avoided.

"The central theme here is that there is not much time to act," said Rep. Tom Udall, D-N.M., who also testified at the hearing. In his written statement, he echoed the bill's mission to "embark on a program of research and development with the same magnitude and sense of urgency of the Manhattan Project or putting a man on the moon."

But witness testimony was not unanimous. Robert Fsser, senior consultant and director of global oil and gas resources for Cambridge Energy Research Associates, told the committee the world "is not running out of oil imminently or in the medium term."

"Rather than an isolated 'peak,' we should expect an 'undulating plateau,' perhaps three or four decades from now," he said. "The major risks to this outlook however are not below-ground geological factors but above-ground geopolitical factors."

Bartlett insisted however that world peak oil is a national security risk and denied claims that it is a lot like the fabled boy who cried wolf. "We've cried, 'Wolf. Wolf.' several times in the past," said Bartlett. "From what I remember, the wolf ate all the sheep. One day the wolf will come."

RESTORATION OF TRAIN STATION RECEIVES HONOR AWARD – The restoration of the historic 1884 Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Station in Oakland has received one of two Honor Awards from the West Virginia component of the American Institute of Architects. The restoration was completed by Schamu Machowski Greco Architects (SMO) of Wheeling, W.Va. Victor Oraco, AIA, managing principal of SMG Architects' Wheeling office, led the restoration. The windows on the first floor were restored, retaining more than 70 percent of the stained glass from the original windows. Clear glass was replaced to meet modern safety codes. Masonry was repaired, and the building's paint colors were analyzed and returned to the original hues. The roof was replaced using slate mined from the same quarry that produced the original. The restoration brought the building into compliance with modern fire and safety codes and included full replacement of heating, plumbing, and electrical systems. The cost of the restoration was $750,000. The building now serves as the Oakland Visitor's Center and includes a theater and model train display, highlighting the development of the town of Oakland.

The Christmas House

by Georja Skinner

Review by Terri Schlichenmeyer

c. 2005, New World Library, 111 pages, $19.95

So you thought you'd put a few decorations on your house this year. One brightly lit tree and one strand of bulbs over a door or along the eaves; that's all. Then, a neighbor bought a box of lighted icicles and put those up on his house. Another neighbor, on a one-upmanship campaign, put out a 10-foot-tall inflatable snowman. Still another has a waving Santa on his roof. And so it goes. Soon your neighborhood is lit up like a... well, like a Christmas tree.

How did this get started? In her new book The Christmas House, Georja Skinner says you can thank her father George, and a dream he had.

The year was 1934, and George Skinner was a young man with a bright future. He was a talented athlete, enrolled in college. He and his father were close, and George was looking to add another member to the family: he had a steady girlfriend, and he was thinking about getting engaged.

And then tragedy struck. While swimming laps in a local pool, George was suddenly stricken with polio.

At this time, polio was extremely debilitating and much-feared. Vaccines for the disease weren't available and there was no known cure. George was rushed to the hospital and placed in an iron lung, which helped him breathe. Inside the machine, he spent hours lying on his back, unable to move, thinking. He wondered about his mother, back in Canada. He thought about how his life had changed. And he built a Christmas attraction in his mind, over and over.

Although doctors said that George would never walk again, they didn't understand his determination. After spending nearly two years in the hospital, he was home and exercising to regain his strength, and he and his father began to work on The Christmas House. They built and plotted, decorated, and lighted. That winter, people flocked to the Yuletide fantasyland that George had dreamed about during his recovery.

Two years later, tragedy struck again. The Skinners' home was heavily damaged by fire and many decorations were lost. Undaunted, George promised that the Christmas House would reopen, and he kept that promise. Despite the fire, an estimated 100,000 people visited the Christmas House in its last year. George's dream lifted Depression-era spirits, and soon others began decorating their own homes at Christmastime.

The Christmas House is a true story of miracles on several levels, and you almost have to read it to believe it. This all happened in a time when Los Angeles was a small town and an outdoor lighted Christmas display was a rare sight to see, which brings me to what I liked best about this book: the pictures, and the story-between-the-lines of the innocence and trust of America, some 70 years ago.

If your family has a tradition of reading a Christmas book aloud in the weeks leading up to the holiday, this one is good and it will last you a few days. The Christmas House is a story that will light up the holidays for you all.

Applications Still Accepted For Loan Repayment Prog.

The Maryland Higher Education Commission is continuing to accept applications for a loan repayment program aimed at encouraging individuals to work in certain fields in Maryland that provide service to low income, underserved residents, or underserved areas.

Through the Janet L. Hoffinan Loan Assistance Repayment Program, qualified applicants may receive up to $7,500 annually to repay college expense loans. Individuals employed in the following fields may apply: lawyers (judicial clerks in any court are not eligible); nurses; nurse faculty; physical and occupational therapists; physician assistants, social workers; speech pathologists; and teachers.

With the exception of nurse faculty, an applicant's annual gross income cannot exceed $60,000 or $130,000 if married. To address the severe shortage of nursing faculty, the income limitation has been set higher. For nurse faculty applicants, the annual gross income may not exceed $75,000 for an individual, or $160,000 if married.

Eligible teachers must have graduated from a Maryland college and be employed full time at a Maryland public school designated as a Federal Title I school or a school identified for improvement by the Maryland State Department of Education. Additionally, teachers in certain subject shortage fields such as special education and computer science at any Maryland public school may also be eligible.

The application and lists of eligible schools and shortage fields are available on the MHEC web site at www.mhec.state.md.us. Under the section "Financial Aid Applications." The deadline is being extended until funds are awarded.

The Janet L. Hoffman Loan Assistance Repayment Program, named in honor of lobbyist and long-time supporter of Baltimore City in the state legislature, is designed to attract qualified individuals to government and the non-profit sector. The program particularly targets areas in which there are critical manpower shortages in the state and lower salaries than in the private sector.

LOCAL STUDENTS PREPARE SCHOOL KITS FOR HURRICANE VICTIMS – A desire to assist victims of the recent hurricanes in the Gulf Coast prompted Lisa Carr's Northern Middle School class to adopt a project of creating kits consisting of school supplies for the young evacuees who lost everything as a result of flood and wind damage. Students measured, cut, sewed, strung ties, and filled the bags with notebooks, pencils, rulers and other essential school supplies. All totaled, the seven students completed 51 school kits. Assisting the class with the project were Nancy Friend and Sheila Lewis. Harriet Berg, representative of the TriState Relief Sale and Mennonite Central Committee, presented a video demonstrating how others are creating school kits and how they are distributed through Mennonite Central Committee around the world to help victims of natural disasters and refugees who would not be able to attend school without these necessary items. Volunteers supporting the TriState Relief Sale, a benefit auction which will be held July 21 and 22 at the Garrett County Fairgrounds, are already at work creating quilts and woodwork items to be donated to the auction. Funds raised will help others in the United States and around the world with similar needs. The Northern Middle School class is considering creating health kits which consist of towels, soap, and toothpaste in 2006. Persons with new items to donate or who would like to support projects such as the school kit project may contact Berg at 814-445-6945. Seated above is Cara Bauernaster. Standing, from the left, are Meghan Bequette, Charlie Cornelius, John Cosner, Trevor Patton, Thomas Garlitz, and Jeremy Dom.

"Xmas Wrapsody" Fundraiser Slated By Dove Center

The Dove Center will hold a "Christmas Wrapsody" at Studio 24E in Oakland next Friday, Dec. 16, from 6 until 9 p.m. The event is billed as a "gift-wrapping extravaganza."

"Bring us your Christmas gifts to wrap," said a Dove Center spokesperson. "Prices vary according to size of the package."

All proceeds from this event will benefit the center, the local domestic violence and sexual assault resource facility.

"As holiday season is upon us, often we become stressed out and overwhelmed with the hustle and bustle of the holiday activities and obligations – finding those perfect gifts and Christmas parties," the spokes person said. "Often we find ourselves up very late on Christmas Eve wrapping gifts for our loved ones. This year, let the Dove Center help reduce some of the holiday stress."

Studio 24E is located at 210 Alder Street.

The center is also sponsoring Christmas wish trees at local beauty salons. Interested persons are asked to call their salons to see if they are participating.

For more information about either of these events, one may call the Dove Center at 301-334-6255 or 301-334-9000.

Correction Noted

An error was made in a story that was published in last week's paper regarding the Students of the Month at Southern High School. It should be noted that Travis Keller is the grandson of Dorothy and William Rishell, not their son.

FUN AND GAMES TO BENEFIT ANIMALS The Garrett County Humane Society is selling six types of Monopoly games for the holiday season: Dog-opoly, Cat-opoly, Farm-opoly, Bird-opoly, Horse-opoly, and Chocolate-opoly. "They are $24 each and would make a great gift for someone no matter how old or young they are," said Lisa Baker, Humane Society president. "These fun versions are also education, plus are a great thing to have on hand during the long winters we have up here!" The games may be purchased at Pineview Veterinary Clinic, located along Garrett Highway just north of the Oakland town limits, or at Yellowstone Log Homes, located just off Mosser Road in McHenry. For more information or to place an order, persons may call Carol at 301-334-1561, in the Oakland area, or Lisa at 301-387-4425, in the Deep Creek Lake area. Volunteers Needed To Assist AARP's Tax-Aide Program

AARP Tax-Aide, a free volunteer-run tax counseling and preparation service, is seeking greeter-receptionists. The volunteers would welcome clients and help prepare intake forms for seniors and other taxpayers who arrive seeking tax return assistance.

Experience with computers would be helpful, said an AARP spokesperson. The greeter-receptionists, however, will be trained to comply with Internal Revenue Service taxpayer privacy policy.

Volunteers should be willing to work at least four hours a week during the period of Jan. 31 through April 15.

Anyone interested in volunteering can call Roland Bennett at 301-334-4762 or Gerald Gank at 301-334-1323.

The program drew 60 guests, including several elected officials and representatives of varied groups and agencies including the Maryland Department of Transportation, Maryland State Police, Department of Natural Resources, and Maryland Forest Association. The demonstration was sponsored by the Mountain Logger Cooperate Association and Association of Forest Industries (AFI) as part of their campaign to address industry concerns regarding weight limits, axle weights, and the interpretation of the laws. As a measure of logging's importance to the regional and national economy, Luke's NewPage paper mill is one of the company's five mills that combine to produce 2 million tons of coated paper – nearly 20 percent of the total annual coated paper production in the U.S. Pictured below at the demonstration site are, from the left, Luke mill manager Rick Watro, DNR staffer Dan Rider, state delegate Kevin Kelley, Garrett County commissioner Fred Holliday, state senator John J. Hafer, MSP captain Smith (first name not available), DOT staffer David W. Czorapinski, Del. Karen S. Montgomery, and Dave Opel and David Opel II, both of Double D Logging. Photos by Lisa Broadwater.

BITTINGER 4-H FALL REPORT

by Darryl Glotfelty

The fall months have brought a variety of speakers and different activities to the club's schedule. At the September meeting, the club enjoyed a slide show presentation by Bob Stephens on his church's trip to Sri Lanka to assist a village in building needed facilities after the tsunami. In his presentation he told us a little bit about the history of Sri Lanka and many interesting facts about the devastation of the December tsunami that occurred last year.

During October, the club participated in a variety of activities. One of these activities included going to Firefly Farm, one of the only independent farms that produces goat cheese. We were given a very interesting tour of the farm about the steps in the production of goat cheese. Everything from the milking of the goats to the packaging of the cheese was shown in our private tour. Everyone enjoyed samples of some of the many varieties of cheese that are produced at the farm.

Another activity the club participated in was the Adopt-A-Highway program. Members who participated in the activity were Darryl and Elliot Glotfelty, Emma and Scott Bass, Caity and Mere Sussman, and Alex and David Beitzel.

In November, members of the club presented their demonstrations. Demonstrations included: Darryl Glotfelty, "How To Carve a Pumpkin"; Sam Sherrard, "Card Throwing"; Scott Bass, "Making Useful Knots"; Emma Bass, "Baking a Cake"; and David Beitzel, "Changing a Blade on a Circular Saw."

During November, the club also had its final buckwheat cake supper for this year. All of the proceeds were donated to the Salvation Army for hurricane relief. The club would like to thank everyone who came out and supported the cause. We would also like to thank Railey Mountain Top Vacations and Dr. Charles Walch for donating the sausage to the club. The next dinner will be sometime next spring.

The Bittinger 4-H Club will close the 4-H year with their final meeting in December. Anyone wishing to join the club can contact Marci Glotfelty at 301-245-4543.

Many thanks to Bob Stephens for his presentation and Firefly Farm for the tour we received.

Winter Solstice Celebration Set At Discovery Ctr.

The Discovery Center at Deep Creek Lake State Park has slated a Winter Solstice celebration for Wednesday, Dec. 21, to note the shortest day of the year and "welcome the lengthening days ahead," said park naturalist Caroline Blizzard. The 90-minute event will also benefit local citizens in need, as participants are asked to bring a nonperishable food item to donate to a food bank in Garrett County.

The celebration will get under way at sundown (approximately 6 p.m.), with nature and multicultural readings around an outdoor fire. Participants are encouraged to bring their favorite writing to read or have read by someone else.

The solstice will also be marked by a drumming demonstration, as "people have used rhythms to welcome the seasons and other significant events thought out time," Blizzard said. Participants may take part by bringing their own percussion instruments or using one available at the event.

Hot chocolate, cider, and s'mores will be available.

For further information, persons may call the Discovery Center at 301-387-7067.

Saba Appointed Head Of Teacher Excellence Board

The board of directors of the American Board for Certification of Teacher Excellence (ABCTE) has appointed David W. Saba, former Oakland resident, as the organization's new president, according to an announcement Monday by board chairman Tony Colón. Saba currently serves as ABCTE's chief operating officer, and has worked as acting president since October.

Previously, Saba served as the organization's vice president of development and evaluation. At ABCTE, Saba has overseen several major initiatives, including the launch of the organization's first comprehensive candidate recruitment and marketing campaigns. The efforts generated a 500 percent increase in certification enrollments.

In addition, Saba directed the development of an entire suite of teacher preparation materials, and he is spearheading the development and launch of the national Master Teacher program, which will recognize teachers of distinction and proven effectiveness.

Upon making the announcement, Colón said, "David Saba is an experienced executive who will lead the American Board to great success. He is responsible for many of the American Board's recent achievements and advancements. We are truly grateful that he will serve as our new president, and we have the utmost confidence in his judgment and abilities."

"With a focus on ensuring that every child receives a high quality education from truly effective teachers, ABCTE's founding leaders developed a premier national teacher certification program," Saba said. "I am honored to lead the organization in its next phase – the implementation of that program throughout the country and the development of new initiatives that will make a difference for students and schools across America.

'Great teachers matter so much to the lives of families across the U.S., and as a father, I am honored to lead ABCTE and its phenomenal staff as we recruit and certify highly qualified teachers for all kids," he said.

Before joining the American Board, Saba earned recognition as an executive at Kaplan Inc., where he directed the organization's mid-Atlantic test preparation centers. While a resident of Oakland, Saba was employed in a management position with Bausch & Lomb, and was successful in two start-up ventures. He was a member of the Garrett County Memorial Hospital Board of Governors.

A graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, Saba also served as a Navy lieutenant commander and helicopter pilot for eight years, being awarded the Battle E and Navy Achievement medals. He completed a master's degree in engineering management at the University of South Florida.

Saba resides in northern Virginia with his wife Lee and two high-school aged daughters.

Maryland Remains Among The Wealthiest States In The Nation

by Caroline Zaayer
Capital News Service

WASHINGTON –Maryland remains among the wealthiest states in the nation, ranking third in median household income, and 15 of the state's counties rank higher than the national average, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

The numbers for 2003, the newest released by the Census Bureau, show that Howard County has the highest median household income in the state and ranks eighth in the nation at $79,455. Los Alamos County, N.M., is first in the nation, with $93,089.

Montgomery County is second in Maryland and 11th nationally at $76,546. The national median is $43,318.

There were no significant changes in the income levels of the state, although Carroll County surpassed Frederick as the state's fourth wealthiest. Calvert had the highest median income gain between 2002 and 2003, adding $2,187. Baltimore City continues to rank last in the state, with a median income of $29,066.

High income doesn't necessarily mean anything if the cost of living is also high, said Chris Foster, deputy secretary of the Maryland Department of Business and Economic Development. While housing prices in Maryland are high, the cost of living has not negated its high income level.

For Maryland, "it's great news," he said. "Wages have outpaced the costs."

The federal government and defense are major economic contributors, Foster said, and that will grow as base closures in other states send thousands of jobs to Maryland.

Howard County has attracted families over the years because of its location between Baltimore and Washington, its good school system, low crime rate, and available public services, said Jim Robey, county executive.

The wealth in Maryland simply means there are a lot of residents commanding a higher salary, he said.

High income, however, doesn't mean there are no problems.

"Land value is escalating," Robey said, as the demand for homes causes the prices to spike. "What do you do for moderate-priced housing?"

The county is also short on public transportation, he said, which is needed to attract business and workers.

The high income level means more businesses want to move to Howard County, said Pamela Klahr, president of the county's Chamber of Commerce, and there are more funds to spend on public services and schools.

There is also more money being spent in general, she said, and business in the area is booming.

The wealthiest counties in Maryland also have the most residents working outside the county. Only 38 percent of Howard County residents work in the county – the lowest in the state, according to the Census Bureau.

Washington has the second-highest increase in daytime population in the nation, as more than 400,000 people commute to the city to work.

FITNESS AFTER 50

by Christy Hoalcraft
Fitness Director
Flowery Vale Fitness Center

Flowery Vale Health & Fitness Center will be having a holiday luncheon on Monday, Dec. 19, starting at 11 a.m. Fitness center members and guests should bring their favorite holiday dish and celebrate with us.

With the cold weather season in full swing, make sure you are listening to your body. Shoveling snow, carrying wood, and many other tasks that the cold weather brings can often be too much for certain people. Along with the cold temperatures, not performing these tasks every day puts many people at risk for certain ailments, including heart attacks. Most heart attacks start slowly, with mild pain or discomfort, and most people think that they cannot be having a heart attack and wait too long before seeking medical attention. Here are some signs that may suggest that you are having a heart attack:

•Chest discomfort. Most heart attacks involve discomfort in the center of the chest that lasts more than a few minutes, or that goes away and comes back. It can feel like uncomfortable pressure, squeezing, fullness, or pain.

•Discomfort in other areas of the upper body. Symptoms can include pain or discomfort in one or both arms, the back, neck, jaw, or stomach.

•Shortness of breath. May occur with or without chest discomfort.

•Other signs: These may include breaking out in a cold sweat, nausea, or lightheadedness.

If you or someone you know is experiencing chest discomfort along with any of the other symptoms, do not wait longer than a few minutes before calling for help. Call 9-1-1 and get to a hospital ASAP. Calling 9-1-1 is the fastest way to get life-saving medical treatment. EMS can provide treatment upon arrival; almost an hour sooner than if a person arrives by car to the hospital.

Please be safe this season, and if you know you should not be shoveling snow or doing other tasks that require a lot of exertion, ask for help or use equipment such as a snow plow or snow thrower to make it easier on your body.

Weight Gain: A Side-Effect of Certain Drugs

Obesity is on the rise in the U.S. For the most part, poor diet and lack of exercise are to blame. However, certain medications can make the problem worse. Although tablets and capsules carry very few calories,[1] certain prescription drugs can cause you to gain up to a pound a week.

While weight gain is a side effect listed in the prescribing information on a wide variety of drugs, certain medicines are much more likely to cause a person to gain weight. Long term use of oral (not nasal) steroids has been known to worsen obesity. Popular anti-depressants like fluoxetine, sertaline, or paroxetine can help shed pounds initially, but this type of weight loss is temporary. Even over-the-counter products like the allergy or cold medicine diphenhydramine have been your doctor's knowledge, even if discontinuation of certain drugs might help shed a few pounds. In the quest to lose weight, it is important to talk to your doctor about the foods you choose, your exercise routine, and the medicines you are taking.

TV-PIPELINE

New fame is found by a co-star of 'Lost'

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Terry O'Quinn

Q: What is the name of the actor who plays John on "Lost," and what is his marital status? –Mary LaRose, Westmont, Ill.

A: He's Terry O'Quinn, who finally is attaining a certain stardom after years of reliable supporting-player work in projects from the series "Alias" and "JAG" to the movies "The Stepfather" and "The Cutting Edge." He has two children with his wife of many years, Lori, and he has relocated his family to Hawaii while "Lost" is in production, which the hit ABC series should be for some time to come.

Q: I started watching "The West Wing" from the beginning on home video. However, I've found only seasons one through four. Are the remaining seasons available on video? –Terri Sergeant, Denver

A: The boxed DVD set of season five – the first year of the show in which series creator Aaron Sorkin wasn't involved – was released Dec. 6. Warner Home Video has been releasing seasons of NBC's White House drama each spring and fall, so it's likely that the sixth year will hit home video in April or May.

Q: Aaron Brown! How can they do this to us? What is the story behind his departure? I am beyond upset about this! –Millicent Dillon, San Antonio

A: We can tell, we can tell! When CNN decided to restructure its lineup to move an hour of Wolf Blitzer's "The Situation Room" into Anderson Cooper's former "Anderson Cooper 360" slot, the network also made the decision to move Cooper into Brown's former "NewsNight" berth and that it didn't have a place for Brown anywhere else on its schedule. As with any move made by any network, it had a lot to do with ratings. At this writing, former ABC newsman Brown hadn't announced his future plans.

Q: What ever happened to the star of "Early Edition"? I think his name was Kyle Chandler. –Therese Harper, Reynoldsburg, Ohio

A: A well-timed question, since Chandler (yes, that's his name) resurfaces this week in "The Lord of the Rings" director Peter Jackson's big-screen remake of "King Kong" opposite Naomi Watts, Adrien Brody, Jack Black and a really big ape. Prior to that, Chandler's last major credit was Rob Lowe's short-lived NBC series "The Lyon's Den," in which Chandler played against type as the rogue of a law firm. He also has worked with Joan Cusack in the ABC sitcom "What About Joan."

THE CHRISTMAS BIRD COUNT in Garrett County is set for Saturday, Dec. 17. Some lucky birders may see a red-breasted nuthatch, such as the one shown above, which are seldom found on the mountaintop. (When they are, they are often upside down). See story for details and information on how to volunteer for the annual event. Photo by Caroline Blizzard.

Annual Christmas Bird Count Seeks Local Volunteers

The Garrett Natural History Association is seeking area volunteers for the Audubon Society's Christmas Bird Count (CBC), slated locally for Saturday, Dec. 17. The Audubon Society's longest-running wintertime tradition, the annual CBC draws participating birders from across the western hemisphere.

As in past CBCs, this year's event will encompass all points within a 15-mile diameter circle (approximately 177 square miles) centered on the intersection of Mayhew Inn Road and Lakeshore Drive.

The Garrett County CBC is open to birders of all skill levels, and local residents can participate by serving either as field observers or feeder watchers. Field observers will move from place to place in the area recording the number and species of each bird seen and heard, while feeder watchers count the number and species of birds that come to their feeder. Each counter also records the number of hours they spend watching birds.

Over 55,000 volunteers from all 50 states, every Canadian province, parts of Central and South America, Bermuda, the West Indies, and Pacific Islands count and record every individual bird and bird species seen in a specified area. Each count group completes a census of the birds found during one 24-hour period between Dec. 17 and Jan. 5 in a designated circle 15 miles in diameter.

CBC compilers enter their count data via Audubon's web site at www.audubon.org/bird/cbc, where count results from 1900 to the present are available, or through the Bird Studies Canada's homepage at www.bsc-eoc.org, where the 106th Count results will be viewable in near real-time.

To volunteer for the Garrett County CBC, persons may call Connie Skipper at 301-387-5227.

Community Prayer Service Scheduled

The Mountaintop Ministerial Association has scheduled a community prayer service for Monday, Dec. 12, at 6:30 p.m. at St. Peter the Apostle Catholic Church in Oakland.

"The reason for the prayer service is to offer prayers for those who are serving in the United States military, their families, and our nation during this important effort to stand undaunted in the global war on terror," said an association spokesperson.

He noted that there are a number of service personnel from this area currently serving in Iraq, Afghanistan, and other military theaters.

"The Christmas holiday is especially difficult for military families who are separated from loved ones, usually for one year or longer," he said. "The association feels a need to lift up soldiers and their families in a special way."

The public is invited to attend.

"No one will be asked to pray publicly," the spokesperson stressed. "Your attendance at this prayer service and prayers will provide support and a ray of hope for these families whose loved ones are protecting our freedom."

Prior to this 30-minute event, a community pasta meal will be offered at St. Peter's Parish Hall from 4:30 until 6:30 p.m. This is a free meal offered by the church and is open to everyone.

For more information persons may call Donna, at 301-334-2202.

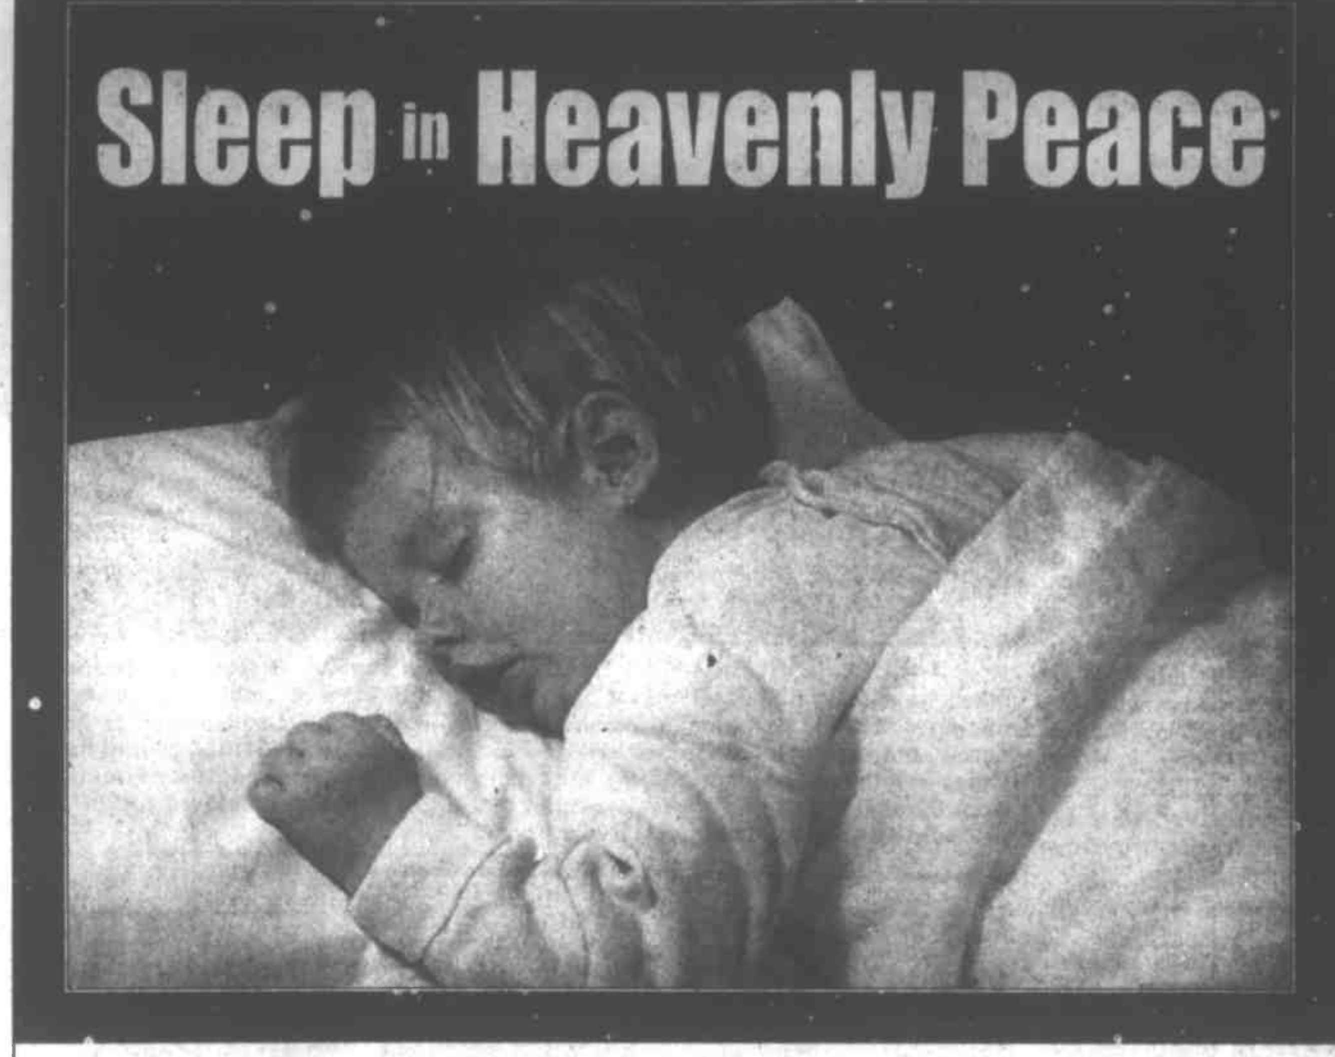
Sleep in Heavenly Peace



Peace is the stillness of a baby sleeping. Peace is a quiet walk in the woods, the tranquility of a small pond. Peace is gentle love for one another.

Great word...Peace! It seems to be in stark contrast to our busy, crazy lives today. More and more things to do, too much traffic, noise and crowds everywhere we go; and in the world around us, war and natural disasters. These things are not peaceful. But, peace is not something outside ourselves. It is within. It is the quiet calmness of mind and soul, unperturbed, undismayed.

It is difficult to acquire this frame of mind, this serene spirit. To achieve it we need guidance and help. We can turn to our church. There, we can get our problems in order; get a better perspective on our difficulties and consult with our Creator. "May the God of peace...equip you with everything good for doing His will, and may He work in us what is pleasing to Him...." (Hebrews 13:20-21)

Peace of heart is a two-way street—our way to God, and His way to us. Let God help you find peace within as you attend your chosen house of worship each week.

Cranberry For Prevention Of Bladder Infections

Cranberry is the fruit of the vaccinium macrocarpon plant. Historically, cranberry was used to treat a variety of disorders including skin wounds, diarrhea, diabetes, bladder problems, and liver problems. In recent years, cranberry has been used to prevent urinary tract (bladder infections). Cranberries contain a substance called proanthocyanidin. It is thought that this substance prevents bacteria from binding to cells in the bladder. There is some evidence that consuming cranberry daily can prevent bladder infections in some young and older women. However, there is no reliable evidence that cranberry is effective in treating bladder infections.

Cranberry is available in extracts, teas, capsules, and tablets. The berries are also used to make juices, jellies, and added to other food products. The best dose of cranberry to prevent bladder infection has not been determined; however, doses of 1 to 10 ounces of juice daily have been shown to be effective. Cranberry is usually well tolerated.

How Well Do We Listen?

Most of us are poor listeners because we simply cannot be quiet long enough to really let the other person tell us what is on their mind. Another obstacle to good listening is the seemingly natural tendency to judge the other person. However, more often than not, when someone wants to talk to us, they really just need us to listen uncritically, and that means accepting what they tell us at face value without judging them. A good listener will accept the other person, and more importantly resist the temptation to judge, criticize, or even offer advice. For generally unless the person explicitly asks for advice, it is usually wisest to keep your advice to yourself. The psychologist Carl Rogers described the quality that most typified the good therapist (as well as the good listener) as "unconditional positive regard." That is, the good listener is someone who regards the person positively, no matter what they might tell them. And although in some cases this can be extremely difficult to do, perhaps nothing comes closer to Jesus' warning to "judge not, and you will not be judged; condemn not, and you will not be condemned; forgive, and you will be forgiven" (Luke: 6:37).

The Sovereign Lord has taught me what to say, so that I can strengthen the weary.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

- According to statisticians, Christmas is the most deadly day of the year for Americans: On Dec. 25, there are, on average, 12.4 percent more fatalities than on any other day of the year — and that doesn't count seasonal-depression suicides and turkey-carving accidents.
- It's still not known who made the following sage observation: "After the unexpected has happened, there is always someone who knew it would."
- It's been reported that the 30th president of the United States, Calvin Coolidge — for reasons unclear — rode a mechanical horse up to three times every day. President Andrew Jackson kept his racehorses at the White House, and President Warren Harding played poker there twice weekly.
- Researchers report that for the average 160-pound man, 29 pounds of that weight is just the skeleton.
- A newspaper in New Jersey discovered something odd about a medical examiner's report. After a brief investigation, their findings were published: "The medical examiner's office filed a report based on clinical observation that listed the cause of death as pneumonitis, or a bad cold, but an autopsy found Mr. Acevedo had died of multiple gunshot wounds to the head."
- Chimpanzees are the only primates — other than humans, of course — who have been known to hunt for meat in the wild.
- It's not terribly unusual in Scotland to order your breakfast oatmeal topped with Scotch.
- Lollipops are 99 percent sugar.
- For the first 12 years of its existence, that ubiquitous office staple Liquid Paper was called "Mistake Out."

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Dec. 16, 1811, the greatest series of earthquakes in U.S. history begins when a quake of an estimated 8.6 magnitude on the Richter scale slams the Mississippi River Valley near New Madrid, Mo. The earthquake raised and lowered parts of the Mississippi Valley by as much as 15 feet. At one point, the Mississippi River momentarily reversed direction, giving rise to Reelfoot Lake in northwest Tennessee.
- On Dec. 12, 1901, Italian physicist and radio pioneer Gugliehno Marconi succeeds in sending the first radio transmission 2,000 miles across the Atlantic Ocean from England to Canada, disproving detractors who told him that the curvature of the Earth would limit transmissions to 200 miles or less.
- On Dec. 18, 1916, Betty Grable is born in St. Louis. During World War II, she became a top box-office draw and was voted "favorite pin-up girl" by American servicemen. Paramount had Grable's legs insured for $1 million.
- On Dec. 15, 1939, "Gone With the Wind" premieres in Atlanta. The film, based on Margaret Mitchell's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, became an instant hit, breaking all previous box-office records.
- On Dec. 14, 1947, the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) is founded in Daytona Beach, Fla. It was the first formal organization for stock-car racing, a sport said to have begun with souped-up bootlegger hot rods during Prohibition.
- On Dec. 13, 1957, the last two-seater T-bird is produced. Through 1957, Ford's Thunderbirds were jaunty, two-seat sports cars that boasted removable hard tops and powerful V-8 engines.
- On Dec. 17, 1963, the U.S. Congress passes the Clean Air Act, a sweeping set of laws designed to protect the environment from air pollution. It was the first legislation to place pollution controls on the automobile industry.

Intruder Alert

Q. I have three cats with their own issues, but the biggest problem right now is this female Maine Coon mix from down the street named Mahogany. She kills squirrels and even takes down raccoons! She comes under our gate and into our back yard and tries to hurt my cats. She injured the youngest cat, Clyde, and is scaring the other two. She even comes into our house! Clyde stands up to her, but I still don't want them to get hurt. What do I do about Mahogany? — *Worried in Wilmington, Del.

A. You'll need to do three things: control all the cats' access to your house, alert Mahogany's owner to the problem, and make sure your cats' immunizations are up to date.

Some cats are content to be indoor cats, but others want desperately to be outside, even for a little while. The indoor-outdoor cat issue is becoming a hot-button issue for pet owners, and you'll have to decide if your cats should be inside all the time, or if you want to work on a solution that gives them some outdoor time.

First, access: If you have a cat door installed, de-install it quickly. Let your cats outside only when you can keep an eye on them. It sounds like you already have your back yard fenced, but you'll need to extend that gate or raise the threshold so Mahogany can't get under it. And don't let Mahogany inside, no matter what.

Second, the neighbor: Approach Mahogany's owner politely, without accusing her of anything, and talk to her about the cat's dominant approach to other pets. She needs to control her cat's behavior just as you must. It's a touchy issue though, so again, be polite and don't escalate things.

Third, get the cats to the vet for a checkup and shots, and check Clyde for fleas and ticks every time he returns from outdoors.

Q. I have a set of tall, clear beverage glasses with decanters that feature a pine-branch design with gold rim. I have never seen similar glasses elsewhere. — *Laura, Pueblo West, Colo.

A. According to a major dealer in St. Louis, your glasses and decanters were made by the Libbey Glass Company during the 1950s and generally sell in the $20-$35 range.

Q. I have a large collection of football cards and am curious about values. — *Tom, Albuquerque, N.M.

A. One of the better guides is the 2006 Standard Catalogue of Football Cards, now in its 9th edition. This massive reference has prices and listings from 1894-2005 covering 3,400 sets and more than 500,000 individual cards. It is published by KP Books, retails for $24.99 and may be ordered through the company's toll-free telephone number, 1-800-457-2873.

Q. I have a cider press that is still in working order. It was patented by the Thomas Mast Company of Springfield, Ohio, in 1866. Where can I sell it? — *Jim, Darlington, Pa.

A. A source that might be helpful is Stephen DelSordo, Heritage Resource Group, 305 Oakley St., Cambridge, MD 21613. DelSordo and his associates locate, provide and authenticate artifacts for museums and collectors, and they might be able to steer you to a possible buyer for your press.

PHOTOS RECALL PEARL HARBOR ATTACK These photos were purchased by Charlotte (Brown) Marsh, who served as a PN3 for the U.S. Navy in Oahu in the mid 1970s, for $3 apiece from an elderly Japanese man who was selling all his belongings along the road. The pictures were taken of the Pali mountain range while the Navy was surveying the area prior to the building of the Hickman Air Force Base. The base was officially activated on Sept. 15, 1938, and was the principal army airfield in Hawaii and the only one large enough to accommodate the B-17 bomber. This road was destroyed by the weather and the Japanese attacks on Dec. 7, 1941, according to Marsh. She was born in Shaw, W.Va., and now lives in Oakland.

Hoyes, Paradise Churches Slate Christmas Prog.

The Deep Creek United Methodist Ministries of Hoyes and Paradise will hold their annual Christmas program this Sunday, Dec. 11, at 7 p.m. at the Hoyes Church. "Love Came Down at Christmas" is the title of the program this year, which was written by Amy Chesla and Sam and Sue Wachter.

The evening will begin with the traditional Christmas scriptures and readings, interspersed with special music by the choir and the congregation. This segment of the program will close with carol singing.

The second part of the program will tell the Christmas story using an adaptation of the cantata Three Wise Men and a Baby, a humorous telling of the Nativity. Children will join with the adults in portraying angels, shepherds, wise men, and even the animals in the stable.

Music will be provided by a children's choir and the adult choir, and the congregation will join in singing carols.

A time of fellowship will conclude the evening's events.

"Everyone is invited to join this celebration of Christ's birth," said Pastor Wachter.

Planning Session Set For 2006 Art And Wine Festival

The Garrett County Chamber of Commerce has slated a planning meeting for 10 a.m. on Thursday, Dec. 15, at the Visitors Center in McHenry to begin preparations for next year's Deep Creek Lake Art and Wine Festival. The event, which raises funds for the American Red Cross, is slated for Saturday, Sept. 9, 2006 at the Garrett County Fairgrounds in McHenry.

"The 2005 Art and Wine Festival was a huge success," said chamber president Charlie Ross. "It drew over 800 persons and raised nearly $11,000 for the Hurricane Katrina relief efforts of the Red Cross," he noted.

"Because of the Art and Wine Festival, hundreds of evacuees assigned to Camp Dawson felt the warmth of local, caring fellow-Americans, and dozens of recent local fire victims received warm food, new clothing and an immediate place to stay," said Debbie Bishop, board chairperson of the ARC's Western Potomac Chapter. "Funds also supported blood services efforts for our four local hospitals. We look forward to the 2006 Art and Wine Festival."

Anyone interested in becoming involved can contact Jo Donaldson at jod@garrettchamber.com, or call 301-387-4386.

TERRA ALTA NEWS

TREE LIGHTING

Despite a foot of snow, the tree lighting ceremony conducted by Terra Alta Betterment Inc. and the town was again "a great success." Santa and Mrs. Claus gave out gift bags to over 100 children. TABI officers extend appreciation to JC and Romona, the Stone family for bringing their animals, Danny Hull for hauling the animals, Tina and Mike Smith for entertainment, the White Oak Church children for the live nativity, Jean Yester for baking the cinnamon rolls, members of the Civic Club and Ladies Auxiliary for the cookies, Kaye Royce for the Beanie Babies, Mrs. Taylor of Alpine Lake for the wooden labels, Clear Mountain Bank for donating a pig for TABI to raffle off, and the Town of Terra Alta for plowing and keeping the community building assessable.

TABI also thanks the Fraternal Order of Orioles, C&P Enterprises, Charley Lewis, Cranberry Medical Clinic, BB&T, East Preston Floral, Homes for all Seasons, Terra Alta Lions Club, and Trinity United Methodist Church for donations.

The drawing for the pig will be held December 12 at 3 p.m. at City Hall. School children will be drawing the winning tickets. Crop Signs Draw Attention To Farmers' Efforts To Protect Bay ANNAPOLIS – In order to help educate Marylanders about the conservation efforts of farmers and the importance of the Maryland Cover Crop Program, the Maryland Department of Agriculture has produced outdoor cover crop signs that farmers may place adjacent to fields planted in cover crops.

"We hope these signs would help to educate citizens on the many ways in which farmers are working to protect our soil and water resources," explained Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley. "Planting cover crops is one of the most efficient and cost-effective conservation practices being used on Maryland farms. We thought it was important Maryland citizens knew what cover crops looked like."

Cover crops are small grains planted after the fall harvest of summer crops, including vegetables, corn, tobacco, and soybeans, to improve the soil, control erosion, and recover unused plant nutrients remaining in crop fields before they have the chance to run off into waterways. Oats, wheat, rye, and barley make excellent cover crops because they grow rapidly in the fall and are winter-hardy. They are easily recognizable as green fields amid the stark winter landscape.

The Maryland Agricultural Water Quality Cost-Share (MACS) Program provides farmers with grants to plant cover crops following the fall harvest of summer crops. This year, dedicated funding provided by Governor Robert L. Ehrlich Jr.'s new Chesapeake Bay Restoration Fund enabled MDA to offer farmers more attractive cost-share rates for early planting of cover crops.

Earlier planting achieves increased nutrient uptake benefits. This resulted in an overwhelmingly successful signup, which quickly depleted the record $3.6 million projected to be available from the fund. When Governor Ehrlich learned of this, he committed to providing an additional $1.4 million to the program so that all applications – accounting for 200,000 acres of cover crops – could be approved.

Sign-Up Opened For NRCS Habitat Incentive Program

Virginia L. Murphy, state conservationist for the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), announced recently that Maryland and the District of Columbia received funding of $439,798 from the 2002 Farm Bill to use to restore wildlife habitat through the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Wildlife Habitat Incentives Program (WHIP).

Landowners interested in filing an application for funding consideration through WHIP should immediately contact their local NRCS or Soil Conservation District office located at USDA service centers. Applications will be ranked according to criteria that will determine which proposals offer the most wildlife habitat benefits. Sign-up opened on Monday, Nov. 28, and extends through Friday, Jan. 6.

"This is the eighth sign-up that has provided opportunities for farmers and landowners to create wildlife habitat through WHIP," said Murphy. This conservation funding provides cost-share reimbursement to farmers and landowners who plant grassland habitat or restore riparian buffers, streambanks, and wetlands for wildlife habitat. WHIP conservation practices restore and manage habitat to benefit game birds, song birds, waterfowl, and other wildlife.

WHIP is a voluntary conservation program that provides technical and financial assistance to landowners and managers to restore upland, wetland, and riparian habitat areas on their property. The program provides full flexibility to landowners, offering cost-share agreements that usually range from 5 to 10 years in duration.

"Maryland enjoyed tremendous success during previous enrollment periods by assisting landowners to implement WHIP conservation practices," said Mark Rose, NRCS Maryland assistant state conservationist for programs. "WHIP funding can help landowners pay for the planned restoration of upland habitat (primarily native warm-season grasses), riparian buffers, shallow water areas, wetlands, and control of exotic invasive plants (such as phragmites) when needed to restore native habitat."

NRCS state conservationists, with advice from their state technical committees, identify high priority wildlife resource needs and conservation practices that are eligible for cost-share assistance through WHIP. Other cooperating wildlife agencies or nonprofit organizations may provide expertise and additional cost-share funds to help landowners implement their projects.

"NRCS Maryland works in partnership with the local soil conservation districts, Maryland Departments of Agriculture and Natural Resources, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to tailor WHIP to meet the state's priority natural resource needs," said Steve Strano, NRCS Maryland acting state biologist. "WHIP is an important conservation program because it provides opportunities for those who are interested in managing their lands for wildlife and restoring habitat that was lost because of intensive farming and urbanization.

"Private and public schools are encouraged to apply for WHIP funds to create wildlife habitat areas and stream buffers on their school grounds. Conservation practices installed through WHIP provide schools with an excellent resource for developing outdoor classrooms where wildlife can be studied."

Based on Maryland's identified wildlife habitat priorities, conservation practices eligible for WHIP funding in Maryland include: restoration of grassland habitat in field borders and entire fields; restoration of riparian buffers with trees, shrubs, or herbaceous plants; stabilization of stream banks with trees, shrubs, or herbaceous plants; restoration of wetlands; and establishment of shallow water areas for wildlife.

"Conservation benefits provided through participation in WHIP will also reduce the impacts of invasive species by restoring habitats to their native plant communities," said Strano.

To qualify for WHIP, the application must consist of at least one acre of eligible wildlife habitat improvement practices, or at least $300 of WHIP cost-share assistance. Lands already enrolled in other USDA programs such as the Conservation Reserve Program, Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program, and the Wetlands Reserve Program are not eligible for WHIP.

NRCS is USDA's lead conservation agency, and has worked hand-in-hand with farmers and landowners for almost 70 years to conserve natural resources on private lands. Maryland's landowners can learn more about WHIP and other conservation programs by visiting the NRCS Maryland homepage at www.md.nrcs.usda.gov.

STEPPING INTO INVESTING!

With less-than-spectacular stock market performance and bank deposit interest rates at disappointing levels, you may have been reading lately about how many investors are turning to real estate.

If you don't regard yourself as a "big time" investor, but have some interest in how it all works, consider some basic ways to get started. The strategy is simple – try to buy low and sell (or rent) high. Ideally, someone else's payments will finance your investment (mortgage).

A good place to begin looking is foreclosures – properties usually bought at auction for less than market value. If you can rent it for more than the mortgage payment, you're in the black. Just be very careful not to buy a home that will require more investment in improvements than you can recover.

On the flip side, you may be able to purchase a "fixer-upper" that needs serious repairs (not just paint and new windows). Don't balk at the cost of repairs, because you'll often find these properties at bargain-basement prices. Again, be completely certain you negotiate the lowest price and can afford the repairs to turn a profit from the sale or rent.

Of course, there are many ways to get involved in real estate investments. These are just two of the simplest and most straightforward for those who are getting their feet wet.

If you'd like to buy a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call at the office, or on my cell phone at 301-501-DALE.

Different Type of Farming Brings Christmas Trees For The Season

By Brenda Ruggiero

Mention farming in Garrett County, and most people will think of cows and crops. But another type of farming is thriving here as well, especially at this time of year — Christmas tree farming.

Thousands of Christmas trees are produced in Garrett County each year. There are five tree farmers listed with the Maryland Christmas Tree Growers' Association, and numerous other farms produce trees as well.

One person who knows the ins and outs of this profession is Randy Sisler. He and is wife, Jean, operate Sisler & Sisler Tree Farm Management Company, which currently provides management for about seven farms throughout the county.

One of their main farms is Mountaintop Tree Farm, located on U.S. Route 219 near Oakland, behind Pineview Veterinary Hospital. Currently owned by Larry and Aleta Glotfelty, the farm began operation in 1959, when Dr. Frank Custer fust planted trees there.

Today, about 65 acres are in production, including an average of about 50,000 trees.

Randy got involved with Mountaintop in 1993.

"I was working for another nursery, and then was asked to come and work on this farm to help them get caught up with the harvest," he said. "And it just kept going and going and going."

Randy noted that the most popular type of tree in this area is the Frazier fir. Others grown throughout the county include Canaan fir, Douglas fir, Korean fir, Concolor fir, blue spruce, Norway spruce, red spruce, white pine, and Scotch pine.

"We're open Thanksgiving Day to Christmas, seven days a week," Randy said. We do 'choose-and-cut,' plus we have pre-cut trees hanging in the building for selection if they don't want to go to the field and cut their own."

Like other farmers, a tree farmer's season begins in the spring.

"We start in early April by cleaning up the fields from the harvest the year before," Randy said. "Then we start planting. We plant an average of about 6,000 to 8,000 trees each year on the mountaintop — about eight to 10 different varieties. Then we go into a spray program of herbicides and insecticides, then mowing. Around August, we start shearing the trees, and shearing usually goes right up to the first of November. We start harvesting around the tenth of November, and we harvest an average of 5,000 to 7,000 trees."

TREES FOR THE SEASON — Just about any kind of Christmas pine imaginable is available at several tree farms in Garrett County. One of these establishments is the Mountaintop Tree Farm near Oakland. The farm is operated by Sisler & Sisler Tree Farm Management, run by Randy Sisler (below) and his wife, Jean. Photos by Cheryl DeBerry.

According to Randy, each tree is cut with a chain saw, then dragged to the roads to be baled, stacked, and loaded onto a truck.

"Next, they're brought back here to the main buildings, and we stack them under a windbreak — a bunch of Norway spruce — out of the sun. We separate them into their orders, and then after we have enough trees to fill an order, we call in a tractor trailer and they're loaded again. So from start to finish, the tree is actually handled about 10 times."

In addition to local customers, Mountaintop supplies around 18 retail lots in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania. Trees have also been shipped as far as the Caribbean Islands.

Along with many other tree farmers throughout the state, Randy participated in Trees for Troops this year. The program is a nationwide effort to collect donated six– to eight-foot Christmas trees to be distributed to U.S. military bases. The effort was started by the National Christmas Tree Association, and FedEx agreed to provide all tree shipping at no cost to growers.

Besides Christmas trees, area farms sell wreaths, garland, and live trees.

At Mountaintop Tree farm on snowy weekends, dog sled rides are also offered by Yellow Snow Dog Sled Adventures.

Tree farmers face many of the same challenges other farmers face, including the weather.

"We had a drought this year, and the year before it was too wet, and we had a lot of root rot," he explained.

In addition, an electric fence surrounds the farm to limit deer damage, and insects are sometimes a problem.

"There's always something going wrong," Randy said. "Bad weather slows us down on harvest. If it's too hot, the trees will dry out as you're harvesting them, and if it's too cold, you can't harvest because they're too brittle."

After Christmas, Randy is involved in Christmas tree recycling for the county — visiting various sites to chip up trees during the second week of January.

Randy noted that, although Jean is allergic to Christmas trees, she is able to do the bookwork for the company. Their three children also help out as much as they can. They include 15-year-old Sean, 13-year-old Nicole, and 8-year-old Maria.

Randy grew up on his parents' farm near Oakland, and helped them raise beef and swine. He was involved in 4-H and FFA at Southern High School, and noted that he learned a lot of management skills through those organizations. He also attended Garrett College for agricultural management and mechanics.

Randy also serves on the board of directors for the Maryland Christmas Tree Growers' Association, and has been a member since 1987. Mountaintop Tree Farm also recently hosted the 50th Maryland Christmas Tree Association Meeting.

In the off-season, one might assume that Randy would seek a warm climate in which to take a much-needed vacation. However, he noted that he prefers to spend that time blowing snow.

Another Events Planning Session Set By Chamber

A second meeting to discuss a new spring series of events and activities has been slated by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce for 11 a.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 15, at the Visitors Center in McHenry.

All persons interested in learning more about the chamber's spring marketing blitz are invited to attend the meeting, according to chamber. president Charlie Ross. The Marketing Roundtable of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce is planning to promote the new spring series, and is seeking organizations or groups willing to host events.

"There is the possibility that the events could be developed to offer fundraising possibilities to local nonprofit organizations, as well as promotional opportunities for businesses as tourism dollars flow into the county," said Ross. "Latest figures reported by Garrett County officials showed an increase of nearly 50 percent in the gross accommodations sales for this September over September 2004."

More detailed plans are needed. Organizations or individuals interested in working on these or other possible themes should contact chamber publicist Jo Donaldson at 301-387-4386 or jod@garrettchamber.com.

Town Hall

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

The Sewer Rehabilitation Project is approximately 60 percent complete. Construction will be suspended at the end of this week because of the winter weather and is expected to resume approximately on April 1, weather permitting. The contractor's crew will remain on site for an additional week through Dec. 16, working on temporary repairs to driveways and road crossings. During the period that the project is closed down, the town crew and the contractor will make road repairs as necessary. It is anticipated that the project will be completed, including grading, landscaping, and finish work, before the end of spring.

LOCH LYNN HEIGHTS

•Loch Lynn residents are invited to join their neighbors for the annual holiday get-together at the Community Building on Thursday, Dec. 15, from 6 to 8 p.m. Live music will be provided by JC & the Boys and the Brights. Hot chocolate, coffee, and punch will be served. Residents are encouraged to bring a plate of cookies to share. Santa will arrive on a fire truck at 6 p.m. to distribute treats to the children.

•The Planning Commission will meet on Dec. 19 at 6 p.m.

•At the December council meeting, the mayor and council adopted the Garrett County Municipal Assistance Program Support Resolution #2005-05 and Municipal Code Enforcement Program Support Resolution #2005-06.

The next regularly scheduled council meeting will be on Jan. 3.

ACCIDENT

The regular monthly town meeting was held on Thursday, Dec. 1, at the town hall.

•Clay Riley from Thrasher Engineering was present to discuss the sewer re-hab project. He reported that the post-construction video was almost complete. He told the council that the video will show which private laterals need to be replaced. As soon as the filming is complete, the residents who have lateral violations will be contacted and informed when the work has to be completed.

•Major Gary Berkebile and Deputy Dan Duggan were present at the request of the council and several residents at the November meeting. Major Berkebile reported the traffic on Accident-Bittinger Road will be monitored more to try to slow the cars down that drive over the 25 mph speed limit.

•Several residents were present to ask Craig Garrett questions pertaining to the meat processing business he wishes to build south of town. After talking with Accident's zoning administrator at the Garrett County Zoning and Land Development office, the town was made aware that a slaughterhouse is considered an industry and is not permitted anywhere within town limits. Garrett said he plans to purchase property south of town, out of town limits, and build his business.

•The town's annual Christmas decorating contest will be held on Thursday, Dec. 15. Residents who wish to be judged are encouraged to have their decorations turned on that night.

•The Holiday Festival of Music will be held on Saturday, Dec. 10, at Accident Elementary School. The Accident Elementary School music department and the Accident Concert Band will provide the music. A freewill offering will be taken to benefit the Garrett County veterans. The program is sponsored by Thrivent Financial for Lutherans.

•The Accident Community Planning Group is sponsoring the tree decorating and lighting ceremony to be held on Sunday, Dec. 11, at 6 p.m. The tree is located in front of Flowery Vale along South Main Street. The program will feature the announcement of the names on the bows, which were purchased by individuals and businesses in memory of a loved one or in honor or support of EMS personnel or military, lighting of the tree, and caroling to St. Paul's Lutheran Church, where a music program will be held featuring the Grantsville Bell Choir.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday, Jan. 5, at 7:30 p.m. at town hall.

Salem Garners Grant For New School Building

A $500,000 state grant has been awarded to the Maryland Salem Children's Trust toward the construction and equipping of a new $1.9 million school building at the Salem School in eastern Garrett County.

"As the father of two, I have made improving the fortunes of Maryland's children one of my central priorities as governor," said Governor Robert Ehrlich as he announced the Board of Public Works funding decision. "This new facility will provide a state-of-the-art building that will help promote a stable, safe, and healthy environment for Salem's students."

The new 10,000 square-foot academic building consists of four classrooms, a media center, therapy rooms, a kitchen and dining room, offices and an art and music room. Construction of the facility began last March and is expected to be completed early next year.

"The Governor's commitment to Maryland's youth is evident by this grant," said Del. George Edwards. "This new building will help promote resiliency, health, and recovery for children abused, neglected, and abandoned."

Man Sentenced For Burglary Of DCL Area Home

A Cumberland man pleaded guilty in Garrett County Circuit Court to first-degree burglary. Judge Jim Sherbin sentenced Brent Allan Hampson, 24, to seven years in the Division of Corrections, to run consecutively to the 9-year sentence he is currently serving.

Hampson is one of two men indicted by the grand jury in September for burglarizing a Deep Creek Lake area home in March 2004. Officers with the Garrett Bureau of Investigation interviewed a witness and received information from C3I officers that a chainsaw stolen from the burglarized home had been pawned.

"This led to a joint investigation with West Virginia State Police, who obtained a search warrant for a trailer in which Hampson was staying in May 2004," said State's Attorney Lisa Thayer Welch. "Additional items of stolen property were located, and Hampson confessed to his involvement in the burglary."

The co-defendant was also indicted, and his trial is scheduled for the near future.

In other court news, James Michael Harris, 41, Ijamsville, pleaded guilty to felony theft and was sentenced to one year in the Garrett County jail, with all of that suspended but 10 days. Following his release, Harris will be on probation, with conditions that include payment restitution.

He was charged after a complaint was filed that he had taken $4,200 to buy new windows, which were to be installed in a lake-area residence. But Harris had never taken steps to perform the job.

It was also learned that he was not properly licensed to perform this work, noted the state's attorney.

In another case, Robert Charles Baker, 74, Oakland, pleaded guilty to second-

NO, IT'S NOT THE BIRD FLU VIRUS — It's just something that many a Garrett Countian faced today: an icy, icy windshield requiring much elbow grease to clear. Ice is everywhere, as yet another storm system passes through, this time affecting several East Coast states, from north to south. School was canceled in Garrett County today, along with much of the surrounding area, as freezing rain mixed with snow is to continue throughout the day. Traveling is dangerous, in a word, and all who venture out must use caution when driving or even walking. According to reports, the freezing rain should change over to snow late tonight. Only a few inches are predicted, so things should return to some normalcy by tomorrow afternoon. Photo by John McEwen.

Local Lawmakers Hear Residents' Concerns; Discuss Legislative Issues

Senator John Hafer and House Minority Leader George Edwards held their annual prelegislative session for constituents Saturday morning at Garrett College. About 25 persons attended the event, which was sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Garrett County.

The local lawmakers listened to residents' concerns and discussed some of the major issues expected to be addressed in the Maryland General Assembly in Annapolis next month.

"Who knows how this next session is going to go," Hafer said. "It's certainly going to be different; I can tell you that much." He added that there would be "a lot of flurrying around and shuffling around" by the various factions.

"We do have a surplus," Edwards reported about the state budget, "but we still have a structural deficit." According to experts, he said, the state will recover from that deficit if the economy continues to improve for the next two or three years.

Maryland finished fiscal year 2005 with a $1.2 billion surplus, according to figures released by Comptroller William Donald Schaefer in August.

Edwards said people see that number and immediately start asking for more funding. He and Hafer stressed, however, that the state still had to watch its spending, despite the surplus.

They noted that in addition to the structural deficit, there were built-in increases for some items – such as K-12 education, Medicaid, and health insurance – that had to be accounted for in the new budget.

When fully implemented in 2008, the Thornton bill (the Bridge to Excellence in Education Act) alone will require the state to spend $1.3 billion that year and every year after that, eating up any surplus, Hafer said.

"That's where the structural deficit comes into play," he said.

Wendell Beitzel of Accident noted that medical malpractice insurance and tort reform were major issues during the last General Assembly session. Premiums for physicians who deliver more than 30 babies a year increased more than 80 percent in January 2005.

Some doctors have left the area, and some have stopped delivering babies because of those costs, Beitzel said. He asked if any stop-gap measures would be introduced this legislative session to assist doctors with their insurance and, thus, help communities retain physicians.

"It's hard for rural areas to get physicians and keep them, and even harder to get specialists," Edwards said. "We need to try to do something to help reduce these expenses."

He added that there would probably be some bills on tort reform, but many still did not support it.

"It was a turf battle between doctors and lawyers," Hafer said about the debate on the issue during the last session.

Beitzel also asked if the state's share of property taxes would be rolled back. Because of budgetary constraints during his first term, Gov. Robert Ehrlich allowed taxes to be increased from 8.4 cents to 13.2 cents per $100 of assessed value.

Edwards said the governor was looking at lowering the tax, but others were not happy with the idea.

"It has about a 50-50 chance of passing," Edwards said.

David Moe, Oakland, asked the legislators to help businesses with their health insurance needs. He noted that during the last session, HB 52, the Maryland Association Health Plan Act, failed to pass. Under the plan, small businesses would have been able to collectively purchase insurance through a nonprofit

Chamber Urges Christmas Shoppers To Patronize Garrett Co. Businesses

The Garrett County Chamber of Commerce is asking shoppers to consider making some of their Christmas gift purchases at locally owned businesses. "Shop the top of 'Mountain Maryland,'" said chamber president Charlie Ross, echoing a theme the organization used several years ago to promote local shopping.

"Money spent in Garrett County ends up helping many people since the business owner and employees often spend their money in Garrett County," Ross stated. "Local businesses also support many educational and charitable activities in the county."

During the holiday season, many businesses are extending their hours to make it easier for their customers. "We have such variety available through our local merchants, why travel long distances and fight the crowds, when you can probably find what you want close to home," Ross stated. "You may find fewer crowds at the specialty stops, and you can find some unusual or specialty items."

Many area residents make items to sell. These are available at many of the gift shops and at The Shoppe at Heritage Square, a chamber-run venture located at the Oakland Train Station. Located within walking distance of other downtown businesses and restaurants, the Shoppe is open seven days a week. It will be open until 9 p.m. tomorrow, Friday, Dec. 16, and on other weekdays it is open until 7 p.m. The store will close at 5 p.m. on Christmas Eve.

Correction Noted

The state-generated press release that formed the basis for last week's article concerning the state's purchase of land along the Youghiogheny River contained an inaccuracy.

Maryland does not own all the land on the east side of the Yough River from Sang Run to Friendsville; the state does own the vast majority of that eastern stretch, with the exception of several small parcels at Kendall.

MOBILE HOME DESTROYED — A malfunction in a propane heater led to the destruction of a mobile home located along Steiding Church Road Wednesday morning, and also caused the 79-year-old occupant to sustain minor burns. Volunteers from the Deer Park, Bittinger, and Oakland fire departments were summoned to the home of Marvin Hale at 9:34 a.m. They contained the blaze in about 10 minutes; however, the home was declared a total loss, estimated by Deputy Fire Marshal Jamie Rodeheaver to be $10,000. The owner of the mobile home is Hale's son Terry of Carroll County. Also responding to the scene were the county air cascade unit housed at Deep Creek VFC, and the Southern Rescue Squad, which treated Hale at the scene. He is now being assisted by neighbors and the American Red Cross. Photo by John McEwen.

General Services Provides Update On GC Projects

The Garrett County commissioners on Tuesday received an update on the status of several capital projects from Gary Mullich, director of General Services, and Gary Love, solid waste supervisor. The projects included the exhibit hall, performing arts center, detention center, public works center complex, airport runway expansion, and various landfill initiatives.

EXHIBIT HALL

The county has completed its review of the preliminary design for the Garrett County Exhibit Hall, Mullich reported. The EADS Group, the architectural firm contracted for the project, presented the design on Oct. 31. Recommendations have been sent back to EADS for use in its the final design.

"We're basically fine tuning what you've seen before," Mullich told the commissioners.

The more than 43,000-square-foot hall is slated to be built off Rt. 219 south of Deep Creek Lake in Thayerville. Construction of the state highway entrance to the hall site has been shut down for the winter, Mullich said.

PAC

The final interior perspective for the Performing Arts Center (PAC) has been received from EwingCole, the project's designers, and has been reviewed and approved by the PAC board of directors, Mullich reported.

"This was the final component needed from EwingCole per the request for proposals," the director said.

The PAC Committee is investigating types of fund-raising campaigns, he added.

The architectural firm presented the commissioners its initial PAC design in October. The $18 million auditorium is slated to be built near the exhibit hall.

DETENTION CENTER

Mullich also reported that the county has contacted Century Engineering about working with LR Kimball and the Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE) on the relocation and opening of Cherry Glade Run. The stream needs to be realigned before construction of the new Garrett County detention center begins.

That center is slated to be built at the current site of the Garrett County Roads Department's Oakland garage site, located between Rt. 219 and Fourth Street.

State Awards $2.4 Million For GC Learning Resource Center

Garrett College received a $2,471,200 grant this week from the state of Maryland that will go toward construction of the college's new Learning Resource Center, slated to break ground in the spring. The new facility, which involves construction of an 18,000 square-foot building that will house the campus library, learning assistance program, testing rooms and offices, will also receive $1.4 million in matching funds from the county.

Designed by CSD Architects of Baltimore, the Learning Resource Center is being projected as the future heart of the McHenry campus. The multi-use facility places an emphasis on information technology and collaborative learning.

"The LRC and new library are designed to be a center for culture and learning that will elevate the profile of the whole campus," Garrett College Library director Dana Shimrock said. "It will not just be a research center, but the hub of intellectual life at the college.

"The building will be spacious, well lit and aesthetically attractive. The entrance will have a cyber-café linked to the student center, encouraging social interaction that tends toward learning. Passing through the entrance, patrons may choose to enter an attractive reading area with comfortable soft seating and magazines, newspapers, and other reading materials.

"Further in, high-tech computer stations will be set up on special amoeba-shaped tables, with enough room around them to allow students to work independently or in groups," continued the library's director. "Continuing on into the facility, students and others will enter into the great reading room with books and custom-designed computer tables supplied with data ports for plugging in personal laptop computers. Soft seating and study tables along a curved glass curtain will provide an inviting place to read and study."

The new LRC will accommodate new pedagogical approaches which encourage students to work in groups, and to make presentations using digital media, according to Shimrock. State-of-the-art technology will provide high speed Internet access for rapid retrieval of the library's multiple electronic databases and other information. The facility will house classrooms, group study rooms and high-end multimedia equipment for instruction in information literacy and other college classes.

"The new library will present a sense of community, providing spaces where users can come together and be inspired to learn and grow intellectually," Shimrock stated. "It will be a place where faculty and students can meet on common ground outside the classroom, and where social and academic interaction will combine to benefit the college and the greater Garrett County community."

The Maryland Board of Public Works approved the award of the overall $3,720,700 construction contract to the Harbel construction company of Cumberland. The state share of the contract is $2,471,200, while Garrett County's share is $1,465,956. Groundbreaking for the new facility is planned for March of next year, and it is slated to be completed in summer 2007.

"An educated, skilled work force will attract and create new jobs, and increased opportunities will improve the quality of life for every Marylander," Governor Robert Ehrlich said as he announced the BPW decision. "Delivery of quality education is my top priority, and since fiscal year 2003, we have invested a record $150 million to improve facilities at Maryland's community colleges. This new center will give Garrett College a first-class facility that will serve its needs well into the future."

Pedestrian Hit; Investigation Is Continuing

The investigation is ongoing in an accident involving a pedestrian Monday evening near the intersection of Yough View Road and Hutton Road, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

Dora Opal Hunter, 41, Friendsville, was hit by a vehicle as she was attempting to cross Hutton Road to retrieve mail from the mailbox, police said. The vehicle was driven by Ervin Randolph Connley, 47, Terra Alta, W.Va. According to the report, Connley was traveling westbound on Hutton Road when he crested the small hill near Yough View Road, and at this time Hunter was walking across the westbound lane of Hutton Road.

Hunter was treated at the scene by Southern Rescue Squad and Oakland firefighters. She was then transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital for further treatment.

Board Of Educ. Announces Snow Makeup Days

Two snow makeup days were announced for the Garrett County school system at this week's board meeting, according to Dr. Wendell Teets, superintendent.

School will be in session on Martin Luther King Jr. Day, Monday, Jan. 16, and Presidents' Day, Monday, Feb. 20.

An update of the water line installation at the Northern School Complex is expected to be completed by early to mid-January. Also at the meeting, Kay Carlson of the superintendent's office was recognized for her dedication to the school system.

The student nutrition and wellness policy and the computer and music program of studies were approved by the board. The next meeting will be held Tuesday, Jan. 10, beginning at 4 p.m., at the board office on Second Street in Oakland.

Man Sentenced

degree assault. Sherbin sentenced him to one year in the Garrett County Jail and suspended the sentence. Baker was placed on supervised probation, with conditions to include counseling as directed by his probation agent.

In January, Baker was charged by officers with the Garrett Bureau of Investigation, who had responded to a complaint made by Mrs. Baker that she had been assaulted and locked in a bathroom of the couple's residence following an argument. She had pried open the bathroom door and fled the residence, according to the state's attorney.

After observing evidence at the scene consistent with her report, officers arrested her husband.

In other court news, Scott Jeffrey Donaldson, 35, Delmont, Pa., pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana. The judge imposed a 30-day sentence, suspending all but four days. Following his release from the Garrett County Jail, Donaldson will be on probation. He was also fined $250.

He was stopped along Rt. 219 by a Maryland State Police trooper in March after the officer observed Donaldson and one of his passengers not wearing seatbelts. Donaldson was arrested after a computer check showed that his license was suspended in Pennsylvania.

The officer located a smoking pipe and a plastic bag of marijuana on Donaldson when he was searched after his arrest.

Second-degree assault charges against Keith Franklin Douglass, 26, Westernport, and Thomas Allen Harris, 33, Rawlings, were dismissed in Garrett County Circuit Court last Tuesday. Both men were charged in May following a scuffle at a campsite in the Savage River Forest over the custody of Harris's children.

The state's attorney informed the court "that the matter is being properly addressed through the custody case in the Circuit Court in Allegany County."

In other court news, Harold Lee Owens, 53, Gormania, W.Va., pleaded guilty to driving under the influence of alcohol. He was sentenced to one year in the Garrett County Jail, with all of that suspended but 60 days. He will be on probation upon his release. A fine of $250 was also imposed.

Owens was arrested by Garrett County sheriff's deputies in July 2004 along Rt. 50 near Wilson-Corona Road. Owens's vehicle was observed crossing the center of the roadway and traveling in the opposite lane. The deputy observed signs that Owens had been drinking and determined that he was under the influence, according to the state's attorney.

In an unrelated case, Corinne Renee Lehman, 28, Salisbury, pleaded guilty to driving under the influence of alcohol and to speeding. The judge then granted Lehman's motion for probation before judgment disposition and placed her on probation for one year. Fines totaling $350 were also imposed.

Lehman was arrested in May by a Maryland State Police officer patrolling on Rt. 40. She was initially stopped for a speeding violation, but was arrested for the alcohol charge after the trooper determined Lehman had consumed alcohol, and she failed a series of field sobriety tests, the state's attorney said.

Eston John Darnell, 24, Morgantown, W.Va., appeared in Garrett County Circuit Court last Tuesday for a charge of driving while his license was suspended. The charge was placed on the stet (inactive) docket, with the condition that Darnell not drive until his license is valid.

He was cited by a Maryland State Police officer, who encountered Darnell in his vehicle along Rt. 42 near Friendsville in June.

Revenue Board Estimates Forecast $12.8 Billion For Fiscal Year 2007

The Maryland Board of Revenue Estimates informed Governor Robert L. Ehrlich Jr. yesterday that the state can expect general fund revenues to top more than $12.8 billion in fiscal year 2007, an increase of more than 5 percent over the current fiscal year. The increase is largely because of continued growth in income and sales tax collections.

Overall, income tax revenues in FY 2007 are forecast to increase by 6.8 percent over FY 2006, with personal income tax revenue increasing by 6.7 percent and corporate income tax revenue increasing by 7.6 percent. Sales and use tax revenue is projected to increase by 5.1 percent in FY 07. Lottery revenues are expected to increase by 2.6 percent.

"Maryland's economy is performing well," said Comptroller William Donald Schaefer. "History has shown us, however, that it can take a turn for the worse at any time. We need to keep in mind the commitments already made on the state's budget and plan responsibly for the future."

Personal and corporate income taxes, sales and use taxes, as well as lottery revenues represent 87.3 percent of total Maryland general fund revenues. Franchise, excise, licenses, and other miscellaneous fees represent the remaining 12.7 percent of the general fund. These sources of state revenue are expected to decrease by 0.4 percent in fiscal year 2007, including revenue from death taxes, clerk of court fees, and revenue generated from interest on investments.

"I am very pleased to see that our state economy is going strong on nearly all fronts," said Treasurer Nancy K. Kopp. "But we must keep a watchful eye on the housing market and the price of oil and natural gas. This upturn in revenue should allow the governor and the General Assembly to replenish reserves and restore basic services and staffing deeply cut in the past three years."

"At the same time," Kopp added, "We must begin to address the state's structural deficit, the difference between the projected revenue and obligations in fiscal year 2008 and future years."

[illegible] the remainder of fiscal year 2006, general funds are expected to reach more than $12.2 billion, growing by 6.7 percent over FY 2005, with personal income tax revenue forecast to increase by 8.5 percent, corporate income tax revenue to increase by 22.3 percent, sales and use tax revenue to increase by 6.4 percent, and state lottery to increase by 3.4 percent.

"These new estimates attest to strong economic growth and sound budgeting resulting from the diligent efforts of Governor Ehrlich to enhance the business climate and exercise fiscal responsibility," said Secretary of Budget and Management Cecilia Januszkiewicz. "The Maryland unemployment rate is one of the nation's lowest, with 90,000 private sector jobs created in Maryland in just three years. While we cannot assume that the revenues will continue to increase at this pace indefinitely into the future, the additional revenues will help Governor Ehrlich address some of the issues confronting Maryland's most vulnerable citizens. The Ehrlich Administration is pleased that the increased revenues are primarily attributable to an improved economic climate and not to increased tax burdens on our citizens."

Comprising Comptroller nald Schaefer as chairman, Treasurer Kopp, and Budget Secretary Januszkiewicz, the Board of Revenue Estimates serves to provide the governor and state legislature with timely and accurate revenue estimates in order to plan the state's operating budget.

"Estimating state revenues can be a lot like predicting the weather," added Comptroller Schaefer. "No forecast is ever exactly right. However, over the past five years, the board has estimated revenues to within an average of less than 3 percent of year-ending receipts, more than 97 cents on every dollar. This is an important reason why Maryland is able to maintain its AAA Bond rating. Without the high rating, it would cost the state a lot more to fund major projects."

Liquor Control Bd. Discusses GC's First Wine Festival

The Garrett County Board of License Commissioners/Liquor Control Board recently met with the Art and Wine Festival committee to discuss the Art and Wine Festival held on Sept. 10 at the Garrett County Fairgrounds.

"This was the first wine festival license issued by the Board of License Commissioners for use in Garrett County by a current holder of an alcoholic beverage license," said a board spokesperson. "The Wisp Resort was the licensee for the wine festival license."

The Art and Wine Festival committee members updated the board on the success of the fundraiser.

"They were able to make a contribution of approximately $11,000 to the American Red Cross," said the spokesperson. "The Art and Wine Festival committee commented that they would like to make the event an annual fundraiser in the county."

The commissioners said wine festival licenses are available for the upcoming license year, which begins July 1, 2006. An applicant for a wine festival license "shall be a holder within the county of an existing retail alcoholic beverage license, state Class 3 winery license, or a state Class 4 limited winery license," noted the spokesperson.

The board of License Commissioners will be accepting preapplication written proposals at their Jan. 5 meeting. Any interested applicants should contact the office prior to this date for information on what the proposal must contain. The board's office is located in Room 105 in the courthouse. For more information, persons may call 301-334-1925.

MHEC Urges Seniors To Apply Early For College

With Maryland recording more than 310,000 enrollments last fall, its highest m history and continued growth expected for fall 2006, the Maryland Higher Education Commission encourages Maryland's college-bound students to apply as soon as possible for admission and financial aid to ensure full consideration.

"The earlier students apply for admission, the better," said Dr. Calvin W. Burnett, secretary of Higher Education. "We are anticipating increased competition for college admissions and for financial aid programs that are awarded on a first-come, first-served basis."

The college admission process varies from institution to institution, but the federal financial aid process always begins with the Free Application for Federal Stu-

Two Injured, One Charged In Two-Vehicle Mishap

Two people were injured in a two-vehicle accident on Rt. 219 near Wayne's Water and Wells Wednesday afternoon, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

A vehicle operated by Daniel Jacob Durst, 49, Grantsville, was attempting to turn into a private drive when another vehicle, operated by Bruce Lee Best, 42, Oakland, rear-ended the Durst vehicle. Best and his passenger, Lisa Diane Cole, also of Oakland, were transported by Southern Rescue Squad to Garrett County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Best was charged in the accident, police said. Deep Creek firefighters and Garrett Medical Transport also responded to the scene.

WHEN I MUST LEAVE YOU

When I must leave you for a little while,
Please do not grieve and shed wild tears
And hug your sorrow
To you through the years.
But start out bravely
With a gallant smile;
And for my sake and in my name
Live on and do all the things the same.
Feed not your loneliness on empty days.
But fill each waking hour in useful ways.
Reach out your hand in comfort
And in cheer,
And I in turn will comfort you
And hold you near;
And never, never be afraid to die,
For I am waiting for you in the sky

CHRISTMAS: WHAT WILL YOU GIVE?

What will you get?

Ponder a minute, those items purchased at the store will eventually end up at the trash dump. What then, can you give that will last?

There is a gift you can give which will last; it will make smiles, it will make memories which will last, it will end hostilities which have existed for years; it will cost you nothing and gain you most. Give love, give a smile, an act of kindness, a word or two. Call someone who is lonely, down or who needs a kind word. The love you give will last for years and not end up at the trash dump, and it won't cost you a dime!

Give thought to why we are here on this planet. Why God in His mercy gave us life. Think about the few minutes we have left before the vapor is gone. Begin a fresh life of love, forgiveness, and turn your life over to Jesus, with whom you can spend eternity. Accept Him as LORD and Savior, repent and begin to love. Cost? Nothing! What will you get? Eternity with Jesus, a reward which lasts for ever!

Merry Christmas!

They Were Right...

With holiday shopping at a feverish pitch right now, among the gift items that are almost impossible to keep on the shelves are video games. There was a lengthy report on a television news program a few days ago about this product, which included concerns about how so many of these games are inappropriate for young people because of their extremely violent and/or sexual content. It seems that the rating system for these games is not very effective in curtailing the purchase and playing of them by children.

While this is certainly a legitimate concern, it was interesting that the report did not even mention another obvious negative result of millions of American young people sitting on their duffs playing video games by the hour – poor physical health. Childhood obesity is a rapidly growing problem in our nation, and without question, video games will be a significant contributing factor in making this crisis even worse over the next few decades or beyond.

At the risk of sounding like an "old fogey," remember the days when children spent hours riding bicycles, climbing trees, playing tag, hiking, getting together for a pick-up game of basketball, softball, or football, or going boating (canoe/kayak)? In driving around a neighborhood, such activities that were so common 30 or 40 years ago are rarely seen anymore. Swimming is among the few physical activities that remain popular.

Yes, there are certainly other factors that are contributing to the problem of childhood obesity and various other health problems at extremely young ages, such as the consumption of too much fast food, plus various other forms of technology that have made life physically so much easier. There was a time when one got lots of exercise simply in order to survive, whether he wanted to or not.

It's also true that an editorial similar to this one was probably written more than once back in the 1940s and '50s with the advent of television. One can hear/see it now: "Thanks to this newfangled contraption, the chores aren't going to get done and our kids are just going to get fat!"

Well, guess what. They were right.

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to personally thank John Downer, Julie Feather, Roy Dawson, and the Garrett Transit System for providing transportation for five local men and their luggage to the Pittsburgh airport. All of the men were going to various parts of Louisiana for hurricane relief assistance.

This may seem to be a small thing, but to organize, schedule, and make it all happen on such short notice, the entire Garrett Transit System not only answered the call, but assured us that we would arrive in time to make our connecting flight to Houston. This transportation all took place on October 15, right in the middle of the Autumn Glory Festival.

Again, many thanks from Rick Wakefield, Larry Coddington, Doug Bittinger, Art Childs, John Rushing, and the management of Alpha Corporation of Dulles, Va.

Sincerely,
Larry A. Coddington

To the Editor:

The other day I had the privilege of visiting our Garrett County Historical Society Museum, and, boy, what an eye opener. The people of Garrett County are absolutely endowed with the most complete and organized museum in the state and surrounding counties.

There are many different rooms displaying the periods of time in our county. The history of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in a surprising railroad train room and then the military room depicting the different services in which our men and women served in during the times of war and after. The most recent addition to the museum is a replica of a colonial cabin lived in during pioneer days, along with old muzzleloading weapons.

I want to commend the president and board of trustees, the curators, and volunteers for their grand effort in making this museum possible.

If you want to spend several days (because you can't do it in one day) with your family, I recommend an enjoyable visit to the Garrett County museum.

Very truly yours,
DeCorsey Bolden

To the Editor:

Again this year the debate has begun as to whether Christmas should be a federal holiday. Even if it were just for historic reasons (Christmas began the democracy in the modern era which has spread all over the world), we should keep the day in honor of the constructive social contributions of Christians in our own and other countries.

But another argument is the much touted tolerance-diversity-inclusivity argument. The religious have been exceedingly tolerant of the behavior of the God-denying, allowing gambling, the teaching of "alternative" unnatural sexual behavior, some forms of pornography, and many other social ills. If only in the name of diversity and inclusivity, they should be tolerant of the religious ceasing work one day a year to recognize the individual who taught the world compassion, love, longsuffering, forgiveness, and the way of life on earth that leads to eternal spiritual life.

We would have no civilization if masses of people did not follow the socially constructive disciplines Jesus taught. Whether someone accepts the virgin birth and resurrection or not, they should be glad to honor (or at least allow others to honor) Jesus, the Light of the world, publicly on Christmas day.

Yours in Christ,
Nancy Dobson

To the Editor:

This is in response to Ms. Levitt's letter in last week's Republican.

Let me take the liberty of tweaking the first sentence of your letter...Millions of cats and dogs are euthanized every year in this country because there are not enough responsible pet owners who spay or neuter their pets.

To presume that Mrs. Bowers is not a responsible citizen because she chose not to adopt from a shelter is less than commendable of you.

When a person chooses to obtain a pet, one does so by choosing the right pet for her home and family lifestyle and affordability. And while there is great value in rescuing the abused and abandoned animals you speak of, it isn't a realistic solution for all families.

A responsible pet owner will teach her children the importance of training and good care, including spaying or neutering their pet, thereby, not contributing to pet overpopulation.

The obligation really does begin with the pet owner who doesn't care for her pet, and shouldn't be passed off to someone who wants a certain type of pet and chooses to buy from a reputable breeder rather than adopt from a shelter.

To the Editor:

The national media has been full of reports about how many retail businesses have dropped the celebration of Christmas from their advertising in favor of a "Happy Holidays" approach. I don't necessarily disagree with them, as it seems to me the focus on retail sales during Christmas time has become a bit tawdry.

In a free society, business has the right to claim an inclusive holiday policy. If you find it offensive, shop at a competitor that greets you as you prefer. It's probably best to leave the real meaning of Christmas with the faithful and get it out of the stores anyway. After all, faith is a personal matter and certainly not meant to be bound to business or government affairs.

Speaking of government affairs, I noticed in your last edition an article about state employees at Deep Creek Lake State Park holding a "winter solstice" celebration to "welcome the lengthening days ahead," including drumming to "welcome the seasons."

What? Since when do our tax dollars support a neo-pagan celebration? We pound on Wal-Mart for saving "Happy Holidays" while in the back door slips this wacky tax funded Solstice "Happy Holidays" program. What happened to all of those state government budget shortages we have been hearing about? How many school books would this "celebration" buy, or how many prescriptions for the poor, or meals for the hungry?

We welcomed the winter season a few weeks ago with a snow shovel. Good Lord, who needs a drum?

To the Editor:

I agree with President Bush that it would not be at all good and especially not in our future interests to leave Iraq. If we look at history and other "wars" in which we have been involved, those with a clear victory have had positive results not only for the U.S., but also for the world.

Leaving Korea after years of fighting and maintaining a border line was a mistake, as we are still involved at maintaining that line and North Korea is still a thorn in the side of the world with threatened nuclear research and bomb building. The communist regime just waited for us to leave and then went back to things as usual.

Viet Nam was the same thing all over again, without learning a lesson from Korea. We became involved after 25 years of war and just maintained the status quo while thousands of Americans died attempting to control that border. We again left without a clear winner and the entire country became communist and returned to the former rule. Today they are no further ahead and are still governed by a government that doesn't have the interests of the people at heart.

However, if you look at the first and second world war, which had a clear winner and loser, we see that both Japan and Germany – the losers – have become world-recognized leaders and are contributing powers to the world union.

Have we learned nothing from the past and do we not have to stay in Iraq until there is a clear winner and the people of Iraq can have

SINGING SONGS, WARPING TIME

I'm getting old. It's just a fact — I'm aging, right along with the rest of you. I am beginning to see my life in manila file folders. Every annual event has a folder, and I stuff each one with memories. I can leaf through the files, with memories all piled up in places, and relive them. The fattest file is surely the one from this time of year. When I sing those same Christmas carols each December, that folder flies open, and all the memories come spilling out...

"The first Noel, the angels did say..." First, the images are from St. Mark's Lutheran Church — the old one that looked like a stone fortress — at Christmas. Those were my first Christmases, of course, and I was always in the annual pageant. It's funny how that seems like years and years of my life, but really it was just a few. My boys are in that place now, being 13, 11, and 10. They say things like, "We always do that at Christmas," or "I remember that ornament — we've had it since I was little." Yet to me, we've had that ornament just a few years. To them, it's from back in the hazy ages when they were toddlers. And back in the true dark ages, the mid-1960s when I was a toddler, I remember vividly being manhandled by the ladies of the church, always in hats and, it seemed, lime green dresses that were a little tight across the front, as they manipulated me into the proverbial Angel Costume. It consisted of a small white pinafore with coat-hanger wings lined with silver tinsel, and a tinsel halo. Simple, yet how thrilling! And a little scary, with all the bustling and those ladies with the bright red lipstick herding us kids around. I realize now that they were stressing out, those ladies. They didn't call it that in those days, but they sure felt it.

"O, Little Town of Bethlehem, how still we see thee lie..." And there was the Christmas parade in downtown Oakland, featuring Santa Claus. I remember being very bundled up, and really short. I surely was not very old. We would each get a little white paper bag with an orange, some chocolate drops with white cream, ribbon candy or hardtack, and a popcorn ball, sometimes with a note inside that was good for a gift at a town store. Some years we saw Santa at the Mountain Lake Park town hall instead, and were given the gift bags there. I didn't particularly like sitting on Santa's lap. Here was this stranger, big and loud, and I was supposed crawl onto his lap? I remember that sometimes he smelled like smoke, or had a bulbous nose. I would reel off my list and hop off that lap as fast as I could. Weird tradition, if you think about it.

"Fall on your knees, O hear the angel voices..." Again at the old St. Mark's, doing an interpretive dance to that Christmas song, choreographed by my brother's girlfriend Suzie (now my sister-in-law). That was pretty cool. Some of the older folks thought it bordered on sacrilege, but they got over it. It was the '70s, after all. I was about 10. Those Christmas Eve services were always surreal. For such a long time I anticipated the coming of Christmas, and I can remember telling myself, in the middle of those candlelit services, "This is really it. It's really here." We always have a midnight candlelight service at the church, too. When I was small, my sister and I went on to bed and one of my aunts or uncles stayed with us while everyone else went to church. I remember when I started going — how strange that was! To not only be allowed, but be encouraged to stay up past midnight! Freaky.

"The holly and the ivy, when they are both full-grown..." That tune always takes me whisking back to the annual Christmas party hosted by my piano teacher, the late Mary Douglass. She would invite all her students to her home on Crook's Crest just days before Christmas. We would play and sing all sorts of Christmas melodies. Martin Heise traditionally played "The Boar's Head Carol," and "Gesu Bambino" was performed as a duet. Singing in rounds was a big deal, too — like "Christmas is Coming, the Goose is Getting Fat," and "Merry Christmas, Everyone." I didn't realize how much I was learning about music by singing those fun songs. She was a gifted teacher. She could be strict and a bit intimidating, but she sure knew her stuff.

"And heaven and nature sing..." The bass line in that carol is the important part. The men come in with that echo: "and heaven and nature sing..." Makes me think of my dad, a great bass singer. He had a rich, full, and deep voice. Singing is such a tradition in my family. We sing "Happy Birthday" in parts. Really we do. I grew up listening to my parents sing, and when I hear men intone those lines now, I miss Dad, who has been gone for two and a half years. I'll probably miss him all my life, but music sharpens those thoughts, and gives me the sense that he is somewhere close by. His sister, my aunt Eleanor, died just two weeks ago. That was the last of his immediate family, and it's strange to think that generation has passed. She was smart, and loved a good laugh. I looked forward to seeing her when I was a kid, and her Christmas visits were no exception. She always brought my sister and me such thoughtful gifts. Her husband at that time, Bob Hesen, was such a nice man. He died when I was a teen. I'm sure I'm aging, because I'm talking about people who have passed on, and who meant a lot to me. That's something aging people do. Life is quick — and that's something aging people realize.

"Silent night, holy night, all is calm..." Wow, so many memories. But mostly I think of how happy I was to have a baby to rock to that song. I wanted to be a mom all my life, and at last I became one. And then again, and again. Whew! But I am ever thankful for that most important part of my world, and through those raucous, lively boys, and with the man I love, I live my memories and make new ones at the same time, stuffing that folder 'til it's fat. The boys are building their own fond remembrances, I hope, that perhaps they will share, especially when the music is in the air, and their file folders come open.

To the Editor:

Are you looking for a way to express kindness to your neighbors at this time of year? How about providing a meal to a homebound senior citizen in your neighborhood?

The Area Agency on Aging Meals on Wheels program delivers 160-170 meals Monday through Friday to senior citizens who are unable to do so for themselves due to various circumstances. Since the Area Agency on Aging will be closed December 26 in observance of the holiday, volunteers are being sought to deliver a holiday meal to one of these older adults who will not have family members to share the holiday with them. It is as simple as making an extra holiday dinner plate and delivering the meal "from your table to theirs."

The Meals on Wheels program will once again coordinate these efforts by teaming up volunteers with homebound seniors requesting a holiday meal. The volunteer can then contact the senior to make arrangements for delivery of the meal.

As you make preparations for your special meal, please remember those in your community who are unable to prepare such a plentiful meal for themselves. Why not make it a family affair by including your children in this community service?

If you would like to volunteer for this program, please contact the Area Agency on Aging at 301-334-9431, ext. 178, or 301-895-5818. Your time and efforts will be greatly appreciated.

To the Editor:

In this day of the ACLU, atheists, the secularists, and the plain old Ebenezer Scrooges of the world mounting annual attacks on Christmas, it is time for a proper defense of Christmas in America. Whether these previously mentioned groups like it or not, Christmas goes to the heart of the American experience and exemplifies what makes America great.

First, from the traditional end of the holiday, Christmas is the holiday of true blending of our national culture. It sets aside the misguided notion of multiculturalism and brings us together with a blending of cultures to a unique American culture. We borrow Christmas traditions and symbols from many cultures – a tree from Germany, a yule log from England, poinsettia from Mexico, St. Nicholas from Scandinavia, and many others.

Christmas also allows us to bring in our own personal and family traditions and make them part of the holiday. We bring these traditions together for a uniquely American Christmas, thus bringing us together as a people. But what is at the heart of the holiday is the birth of Christ, our Savior and Lord. This is what some find objectionable, and they would like to co-op Christmas and make it some winter holiday without Christ.

To remove Christ from Christmas and have the holiday survive is akin to removing your heart and expecting to live. I do not see many druids still celebrating winter solstice. Some people do not understand most Christians' desire to share the joy of Christmas. It only comes from the joy that we have from the gift of God's Son who came for our salvation.

So, remember in your effort to bring atheism, secularism, and plain ol' "bah humbug" to Christmas that Christmas is the holiday that brings us together as a people, family, and nation, and represents God's love for us, whether you choose to accept it or not.

Merry Christmas!

To the Editor:

"Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." Something we have heard for years and most of us have probably said. This has been a traditional greeting for hundreds of years, and this time of year has for a long time been referred to as the Christmas season. However, this year more than any, saying "Merry Christmas" has become outlawed by the p.c. (politically correct) police. While they may not actually exist as a civil service organization, they do exist as a minority of the American populous that wants to take away the rights of the majority to celebrate its Christmas holiday in the public square. The leading organization trying to ban the public celebration of Christmas is the A.C.L.U. (American Civil Liberties Union), also known as the Against Christian Liberties Union. They have been suing towns across the country that publicly display the Nativity scene or display signs that say "Merry Christmas."

Why are we as Americans tolerating this? Why is the majority once again bowing to the wishes of the minority? In a democracy the majority is supposed to rule, and for many years the majority has been silenced by the minority. This year more than any, Christmas is being attacked. The A.C.L.U. has sued or threatened to sue many of the stores we love to shop at to get them to stop saying, advertising, or in any way publicly displaying any reference to Christmas. It has been replaced with "Season's Greeting," or 'Happy Holidays." These stores include: Wal-Mart, Kmart, Sears, Costco, Staples, KB Toys, Target, Lowe's, Home Depot, Toys R' Us, J.C. Penney, etc. They even have gone so far as to ban the Salvation Army from placing its Santas with their famous red pots from their stores or no longer allowing them to say "Merry Christmas" as they ring their bells. At the same time, these stores have no problem advertising a "Happy Hanukkah" or "Happy Kwanzaa." The only difference is, Christmas has Christian roots and that somehow makes it unacceptable to these liberals.

So, I welcome the celebration of the other holidays as well, but why can't they just leave Christmas alone? If you agree with me, please join with me in wishing everyone you see a "very merry Christmas." Wow, that sure felt liberating.

To the Editor:

I am a bachelor without children, in my early 40s with over 20 years of professional experience in various fields. In the last four years I lived in Garrett County as a full-time resident (September 2001 to September 2005), I have gradually become more aware of systematic discriminatory behavior on the part of employers and landlords.

Regarding employers, I have applied for employment well over a dozen times around Oakland and Grantsville over the past four years and have only secured two interviews and one offer of part-time employment paying under $6 per hour. But enough about me.

As a member of the Suicide Prevention group in Garrett County, I have learned that employment issues are a contributing factor in completed suicides by primarily middle-aged men.

As far as housing goes, it has been reported to me by several people that potential landlords do not return phone calls seeking application information, so landlords have made plain they do not wish to consider such people for tenancy.

Serving the past few months as a Garrett County commissioner appointed member of the Mental Health Advisory Committee, I have been told by clients and staff of Garrett County Lighthouse Inc. that some local housing management organizations have intimidated them into vacating. While there may be some infraction of the letter of the lease in each case, certainly the compromised health of these individuals needs to be taken into account and their case manager notified in ample time to attempt to help correct the situation before it adds to Garrett County's homeless.

Let us strive to treat our less independently wealthy residents with the appropriate dignity.

Sincerely,
Jared Zitwer

December 8 blizzard, I had the misfortune of driving from Oakland to Pittsburgh airport, and back. The snow had started even before my daughter and granddaughter's plane landed, and the airport road was treacherous, with heavy traffic and cars slipping and sliding. We hoped in vain that, surely, Interstate 79-S would be better. But it wasn't, and on the long trip through Pennsylvania we saw not one snow plow or police car, and things hardly improved when we finally reached I-68 in West Virginia. We did see a couple of snow plows beyond Morgantown, but for some reason they were on the westbound lane and of no use to us as we chugged along while the weather got worse and worse.

Imagine our relief and joy when we crossed the Garrett County line and were greeted by the lights and sounds of at least a dozen snow plows, all busily clearing both roadways! We got to Keyser's Ridge at 2 a.m., and even there two plows were at work in the midst of a fierce whiteout, so that we could at least make out where the road was.

And so, I am writing this letter to thank the brave people behind the wheels of the Garrett County snow plows. You are out there when nobody else should be, making us safe, and your work is truly exceptional. I am glad I moved here.

To the Editor:

In a recent headline in this paper, Garrett County officials proposed using wind energy revenue to send residents to our local college. It is generally unwise to begin planning to spend $1,000,000 before it is actually received, especially in this case, given our neighboring counties' experiences with promised wind energy windfalls.

Which taxing mechanism could be used to collect these monies is unclear. We do know that there will be no increase in property tax dollars since the turbines are slated for leased land. In fact, property values within the viewshed will, most likely, decline. The business personal property tax on equipment like this is questionable at best, for it is unclear what the value of the equipment will be for tax purposes. Additionally, only a tax specialist with access to confidential records knows which tax offsets will be available to the wind energy corporation.

The article states that the project will be regulated as a public utility. This is untrue. Neither the Clipper nor Synergics project will generate enough electricity to qualify as a public utility. Why is county government unaware of this?

It is unfortunate that we find ourselves in the predicament of losing such an important natural treasure, and it is a shame that the claims of the wind industry have not been properly investigated by our leaders. But it is truly repugnant to read this cynical attempt to influence opinions with empty promises of free college. Despite the statement to the contrary, this is a transparent effort to make lemonade out of some very rotten lemons.

Very truly yours,
Kimberly Connaughton

To the Editor:

To Mr. Calhoun of Friendsville:

While it is true that President Bush may not have the best exit strategy, the important facts that many liberals tend to overlook are that a ruthless tyrant was removed, and more importantly for Americans, the war on terror is being fought on our terms in their backyard, not ours. The desired effect of this war is a free, democratic Iraq. It is amazing how quickly people forget the reasons we are in Iraq. The liberal media have succeeded in subduing the patriotic outburst that followed the attacks of September 11, 2001, but what they cannot suppress is the American soldier's will to succeed and accomplish the mission.

The morally responsible decision is for us to stay the course. My comrades and I spend countless hours daily working with Iraqi security forces and Iraqi government leaders; however, the task is not complete. By leaving, we abandon Iraqi friends, just as we abandoned friends in 1975 when the last choppers lifted off the embassy in Saigon.

Mr. Calhoon, you say that by leaving now we have not lost anything. You show the true tone of liberalism – offering only criticism of the current leadership with no alternative plan of action. Our mission is to establish a safe, secure, democratic Iraq. Will it be democracy as we know it? Probably not. Can Iraq be an ally against Islamic facism in the Middle East? I believe it can. The overwhelming majority of Iraqis stand against the extremist and cowardice acts of terrorists, and they remember what it was like under Saddam.

You claim that portraying our enemies as evil is a vicious, dishonest attempt to brainwash the American public. You should step out of the bubble in which you live and call the parents of those who have had their heads hacked off by vicious cowards hiding behind hoods. Talk to the families and friends of Nick Berg and Jack Hensley and see what they have to say about the enemies we are fighting. You cannot fight the war you want; you must fight the war you are given.

This is a test of will; a test of resolve. If we pass this test we provide a beacon of light in the Middle East. Osama bin Laden and Abu Musab al-Zarqawi are hoping we fail. The fighting men and women of our great nation do not like to fail.

P.S. Mr. Calhoun, I wish you a Merry Christmas, and may God bless you and your family in the upcoming year.

To the Editor:

As a concerned citizen of Garrett County, I am perplexed by the recent decision by our illustrious commissioners to do away with a 75-year-old "users' tax" on beer.

This beer tax was originally established in the 1930s when a 2-cent tax was put on each bottle of beer sold in Garrett County. Beer probably sold for 10 cents a can back then, so it was a very stiff tax for any time. The beer tax is still land garage will move to the proposed public works center complex, which will be built off Rt. 135, across from the Southern Garrett Business and Technology Park.

DAPPY NEEDS A NEW HOME – Dappy, the young female yellow Lab mix pictured above, is currently housed at the Garrett County Animal Shelter. She was recently given up by her owners because their child had allergies. Also at the shelter is a big yellow Lab, pictured below, that was picked up as a stray in the Deep Creek Lake area. He was not wearing a collar. Several felines in various types and colors are also waiting to be adopted from the shelter. For more information, persons may call 301-334-3553. The shelter is located along Oakland Sang Run Road and is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. and on Thursday until 6 p.m. The Garrett County Humane Society reminds residents to make sure all their outside pets have plenty of drinking water available. "They need water at least once a day," said a Humane Society spokesperson. Water dishes freeze quickly during cold weather, and without water pets become dehydrated, causing serious medical problems. Snow is not a substitute for water, stressed the spokesperson.

In July, the county awarded a bid to Carroll Land Services Inc. (CLSI) to provide preliminary engineering services for the complex. Mullich said CLSI met last month with the MDE, the Army Corps of Engineers, and the county to identify wetlands near the proposed complex.

"No major problems were reported," he said.

Preliminary drawings for the complex have been reviewed, and comments and recommendations were presented to CLSI.

The director also reported that Century Engineering and Robert D. Beitzel have completed a water and sewer project at the proposed complex. An easement for the water line to Oakland is still required.

AIRPORT RUNWAY EXPANSION

Design work for the new terminal building at the Garrett County Airport is continuing, Mullich told the commissioners. The terminal is in Phase II of the airport runway expansion project.

"We've narrowed down three different floor plans," the director said about the terminal design. He noted that the 3,000-square-foot building would cost between $255,000 and $360,000, depending on the final design.

The county and Airport Advisory Commission are also working with the engineering firm URS on the number and location of hangars.

Work is also progressing to provide public water and sewer service to the airport site. A review of the preliminary engineering report and plans have been completed, and comments and recommendations have

Bakers To Celebrate 60 Years Of Marriage

Daniel and Margaret Baker, formerly of Oakland, will celebrate 60 years of marriage this month. They were married on Dec. 20, 1945.

The two met in Leesburg, Fla., before Mr. Baker shipped out for Europe to serve in World War II. Mrs. Baker was a resident of New York at the time and had traveled to Leesburg to visit her sister and brother-in-law, who introduced her to his friend from Swanton (Mr. Baker).

The couple wrote to each other throughout the war. After being discharged, Mr. Baker went to New York and the two were married. They established a residence in Garrett County, living in the local area for many years.

The Bakers have lived in St. Petersburg, Fla., for the past 25 years. They have one daughter (Patricia Baker-Palenik), four grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren.

Christmas Piano Concert Set At Piedmont Church

Trinity United Methodist Church in Piedmont, W.Va., will host a Christmas piano concert featuring local missionary and musician Don Stephens slated for 5 p.m. this Sunday, Dec. 18. The free concert will feature primarily Christmas music with some storytelling and original pieces mixed in.

A Westernport native and graduate of Bruce High, Stephens has been serving as a missionary in Sarajevo, Bosnia, with Youth With a Mission (YWAM) since 1995. A freewill offering taken during the concert will benefit the ministry in Bosnia.

Stephens began performing professionally in bands at age 13, and has performed concerts on four continents and in the Pacific Islands. He received his formal musical training at West Virginia Wesleyan College with an emphasis on piano, and has recorded two CDs that are available locally at the Gospel Depot in Loch Lynn.

Trinity UM Church is located at 40 Jones Street. For further information persons may call 304-355-2089.

Gabe and his dad decide to gather stories from people buying Christmas trees at Tan N. Baum's Christmas Tree Farm. The free family-oriented program includes a 50-foot multilevel stage, a cast of colorful puppets, special lighting and effects, and a variety of music styles. The puppet show's run is slated for this weekend, Friday through Sunday, Dec. 16-18, with performances at 6 and 8 p.m. on Friday; 4, 6, and 8 p.m. on Saturday, and 4 and 6 p.m. on Sunday. They say time heals every hurt, but this we cannot say. It has been seven years now since you left us. Time has not eased the pain or filled the void in our hearts. It broke our hearts to lose you, but you did not go alone, for part of us went with you
the day God called you home.
You left us with peaceful memories and your love is our guide, and though we been sent to the EADS Group, Mullich reported.

CELL #3

Gary Love also reported to the commissioners that the Cell #3 project at the Garrett County Landfill was progressing. The Beitzel Cotporation has completed the cell floor and lining system. The storm drainage control flaps have been installed. Installation of the drainage piping and aggregate drainage/protective layer in the cell is approximately 20 percent complete.

Excavation and grading work for construction of the leachate storage lagoon was approximately 75 percent complete in October. Work on the lagoon has been halted for the winter and will resume in the spring after good weather returns, Love noted.

RECYCLING PROCESSING CENTER

Love also reported that a preliminary layout and site plan have been developed for the proposed recycling processing facility at the landfill.

"Construction details and prices for construction of a steel frame structure are being obtained in order that the planning process can be completed," Love said. "Excavation and grading work for the site have been slowed by weather and site conditions."

Commissioner Fred Holliday will meet with the landfill staff Monday morning to discuss his ideas for the center.

LANDFILL OFFICE

"The landfill office is 99 percent complete," Love told the commissioners. "Minor modifications need to be completed for the building inspection and fire marshal approval."

In addition to staff offices, the facility will house the landfill's customer service area. New furniture was recently delivered for the area. The current office will become the landfill's scale house.

working, so why change it?

I would like to remind the local elected officials that the only way liquor got into our county in the first place was because of the tax dollars the county would receive from its sales.

The $151,114.05 in beer tax revenues collected in fiscal 2005 could have been used to lower our county real estate taxes. Our commissioners sought not to lower our taxes to the constant yield rate this year, so our taxes for the county were $1.5 million higher, which means we all paid higher taxes. Next year is an election year; let's see how much our taxes increase then.

I agree with you, Mr. Editor, that our commissioners are politically backpedaling and trying to cover their rears by stating that revenues generated by the wind turbines could be used for the education our local population. But if they are serious then why not use the $150,000 plus in tax revenues from beer tax funds to start the scholarships now?

For sure the beer tax revenue is a given, and it is added to our general fund. This "known" revenue could be an offset to the revenues that probably will never materialize from the windmills.

Much of our local economy is based on tourism, and our tourists buy and drink their beer here! So a part of our beer tax revenue comes from dollars made outside our county. Again, it is a "user tax," paid in part by folks who live outside our area, and we in the county benefit from their spending. So why do away with the beer tax?

Why don't our local officials use the beer tax revenues to help offset the "flush tax" those of us in the county with septic fields are now forced to pay?

If it costs $1 less for a 30-pack of beer in West Virginia or Allegany County, what is the cost of gas to travel to those area to make a beer purchase? So is beer really cheaper outside Garrett County?

So I ask our local officials, why do away with the beer tax just to please a few local business and distributors vs. helping the general populous of our county just in the name of change.

Maybe we need to make a change ourselves in the 2006 elections.

Cornish Powers Lakers To Easy JUCO Win At Harford

Another outstanding performance by sophomore Barry Cornish powered the Garrett College men's basketball team to its seventh straight victory Saturday and kept the Lakers perfect in Maryland JUCO play, as they rolled over an outmatched Harford team, 95-74, in McHenry.

Cornish, a 6-6, 230-pound center, poured in 28 points and grabbed 13 rebounds for a double-double evening. Sixteen of his points were recorded via 20 shots from the foul line.

The win upped the Lakers' overall mark to 7-2 and their JUCO record to 4-0.

The Lakers took control of the contest early and were never seriously threatened. They held a 17-point advantage at intermission (50-33).

Also reaching double figures in scoring for Garrett were freshman Chris Henderson with 20 points, Ivan Funcic with 15, and Dyer Ross with 12.

The Lakers hit nine three-point buckets for the night, with Henderson and Funcic each nailing three. Ross also had 10 rebounds to also give him a double-double effort, and Pat Carwile and Jerome Jack each dished out four assists.

Pacing Harford's scoring was Ryan Selby with 17 points. Kenny Parry, Sam Eligwe, and Terrence Allen each finished with 13.

The Lakers will be back in action this weekend when they host the Railey Realty Santa's Hoop Fest. Howard will take on Potomac State in Saturday's 5 p.m. game, and the Lakers will meet CCAC-South at 7 p.m. The consolation game will be played Sunday at 1 p.m., followed by the title contest at 3 p.m.

"Triple Towers" Pace Garrett Over Cougars

A trio of Garrett College players towered over the opposition Saturday as Flodysha Peterson, Eugenna Carson, and Kierra Wilkins helped lead the Lakers to an 81-60 win at Frederick. The convincing road triumph was a fine Christmas send-off for the GC squad, which takes a 6-2 mark into the holiday break.

Peterson dominated on both ends of the floor, as the 5-10 freshman ripped down 16 rebounds, rejected eight shots, dished out four assists, snagged five steals, and just missed a double-double in netting nine points. Carson and Wilkens both scored 14 points as Carson, a 6-0 sophomore center, grabbed 13 rebounds, and added three assists and three steals, and Wilkins, a 5-11 forward, tallied 11 rebounds, six assists, and three steals. Freshman Ashley Hill paced Garrett in the scoring column with 18 points, and classmate Jeseca Gibson contributed 10.

The Cougars' Marche Westray led all scorers with 22 points. The sophomore hit four three-pointers, and her teammate Jessica Duncan connected on a trio of treys en route to 17 points.

The Lakers held the lead from the opening bucket, and ran up a 41-31 advantage by the intermission.

GC's next outing is a home court contest slated for 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 4, against Baltimore City.

NHS Girls Edged By Beall, Blasted By Alco's Campers

After having kicked off the campaign with a win, the Northern High School girls' varsity basketball squad ran into roadblocks against Beall and Allegany recently. The Huskies were edged by the visiting Mountaineers last Wednesday, Dec. 7, by a 37-32 tally, before sustaining a 52-26 loss at the hands of Alco's Campers Monday night in Cumberland.

An undefeated Beall team took a 14-7 lead after one quarter of play, but NHS cut the gap to five at the half, 21-16. The Huskies kept nipping at the Mounties' heels through the third quarter, which ended with Beall up by a 28-23 tally.

NHS sophomore guard Sarah Voelkel netted a team-leading eight points for the Huskies, and freshman forward Megan Wiley scored six points.

The Mountaineers' Kierstin Stevenson led all scorers with 10 points, while teammates Kaitlin Greig had nine and Tasha Wilhelm eight.

Northern fell to a powerhouse Alco effort Monday, despite making a good run at the Campers over the second quarter. Allegany jumped out to a 14-5 lead after the first eight minutes of play, but the Huskies rallied during the second stanza to outscore their hosts 13-7, and were down by a slim 21-18 margin at the half. The Campers then outscored the Huskies 18-2 in the third quarter to go up 39-20 entering the final period.

Sophomore Kasie Fratz led Northern with nine points, Wiley scored eight, and senior guard Jessie Fratz netted six points.

Allegany was paced by senior Jessica Tichnell, who recorded a double-double of 17 points and 13 rebounds.

NHS's junior varsity squad was downed 45-15. Lindsay Wolf recorded five points for the Huskies, while Alco's Elizabeth Getty led all scorers with eight.

Northern (1-2, 0-2 WMIL) is slated to visit Fort Hill tonight, then returns home to host Union Monday in a 6 p.m. JV contest and a 7:30 p.m. varsity battle. The Huskies will travel to Paw Paw on Wednesday for their final outing before Christmas.

Husky Boys Upset Ft. Hill; Just Miss Upending Alco

It's been an exciting week in the Cove, where the Northern High School boys' varsity basketball team knocked off perennial powerhouse Fort Hill Saturday with a 64-60 upset before a delighted home crowd, then took another area kingpin down to the wire in a 65-54 home court loss to Allegany. The action leaves the Huskies with a 1-2 record, but with renewed confidence, especially in their interior game.

Senior point guard Chris Speicher was on fire for the Huskies in sparking the win over the Sentinels, as he scored 27 points, hit 11 of 16 free-throw attempts, sank a pair of three-pointers, and dished out seven assists. Sophomore forward Kory Gibson was right on his teammate's heels as he netted 21 points and nailed five treys. Fort Hill was paced by Devon Snell's 19 points, while Zach Blank added 17 points and Steve Iser contributed 10.

The Huskies showed they were ready to defend their house by going up 15-14 after a hard-fought first quarter. The Sentinels roared back over the second stanza by outscoring NHS 17-13 to take a three-point lead into the halftime locker room. After its "chalk talk," Northern stormed through the third quarter to retake the lead 44-42 heading into the final eight minutes.

Overall, the guests hit five more field goals than the Huskies, but NHS prevailed thanks to a 60 percent team tally at the foul line, and the seven three-pointers supplied by Gibson and Speicher, who connected on nine of 14 attempts from the charity stripe in the final quarter.

Fort Hill won the jayvee game 56-11 with McRobie scoring 13 points.

The Huskies showed some true grit in Tuesday's battle with Alco, a see-saw affair that saw a number of lead changes. NHS whipped its fans into a frenzy early by exploding for 19 first-quarter points to take a five-point lead into the second stanza. The Sentinels turned the tables over the next eight minutes by outscoring NHS 17-8 to ride a 31-27 advantage into the half. Northern fought back hard over the third stanza, netting 19 points to Allegany's 17.

Going into the final quarter, the Huskies were down by just one bucket, 48-46. Down by just four points with a little over a minute remaining, NHS resorted to fouling the Sentinels, but Alco's free-throw shooters coolly iced six of eight attempts to put the game away.

Speicher paced the Huskies with 16 points and six assists before fouling out, while senior forward Blake Walker recorded 15 points, and senior guard Brent Beachy contributed 10. Donavin Vinson led the Campers (2-0) with 16 points, including a 6-for-7 tally from the charity stripe.

The Huskies missed only two free throws all night, connecting on 12 of 14 attempts, while the guests missed only four foul shots in a 13-for-17 tally.

NHS's jayvees took it on the chin in a 65-26 loss. Zach Brosnihan put up 11 points for the Huskies, while Darrin Graham scored 16 points for Alco.

There will be little time for the Huskies to rest, as NHS visits Southern tomorrow night for a 7:30 p.m. varsity showdown (following a 6 p.m. jayvee game). Northern's following game is slated for Thursday, Dec. 22, when Berlin pays a visit to the Cove.

HUSTLING PAST FOUR DEFENDERS during Tuesday night's home court game is Northern High School varsity point guard Chris Speicher (#11), shown above going up to lay the ball into the bucket. The Huskies just missed upsetting the unbeaten Campers in a 65-54 loss that was much closer than the score would indicate. Even though he fouled out, Speicher tied Alco standout Donavin Vinson for game-high scoring honors with 16 points, while Husky forward Blake Walker (#31, shown below working his way around a pick by teammate Brent Beachy) was one off the mark with 15. Ram Hoopsters Crushed By Vikings; Record Even At 1-1

Digging themselves into a hole early and never managing to recover Tuesday evening were the members of the Southern High School boys' varsity basketball team, as the Rams were whipped by host Petersburg, 52-32.

The loss evened the Rams' record at 1-1.

Southern's offensive unit could do next to nothing in the first quarter, scoring a lone two points for the entire eight minutes, while the Vikings put a dozen on the board.

The second quarter was dead even, with both teams scoring 13 points, leaving the Rams down 25-15 at halftime.

The Vikings stretched their lead to 14 points by the end of the third stanza, 40-26.

A 10-for-14 effort at the foul line by Petersburg in the fourth quarter more than sealed the Rams' fate.

Senior Nick Gregg was the only Southern player to reach double figures, as he finished with 11 points. Ryan DeWitt and Evan Lantz recorded eight and seven, respectively.

Leading the Vikings offensively in their season opener was Ben Whetsell, who netted a game-high 16 points. Joining him in double figures was Joe Bensenhaver with 11 points.

Coach Paul Pacella and the Rams will try to get back into the win column this Friday when they host Northern. The junior varsity clash will tip off at 6 p.m., and the varsity will get under way at 7:30.

Southern will also travel to Westmar next Tuesday, and play at Keyser next Thursday.

Ram Girls Wallop Westmar With Balanced Team Effort

The Southern High School girls' varsity basketball team ran away from Westmar last night in a 74-30 home court victory. Three Rams hit for double figures and SHS mounted a stifling defense as the hosts led throughout the contest.

Southern asserted itself early by taking a 15-6 first-quarter lead, and from there raced to a 39-10 halftime advantage and a 57-20 lead heading into the final stanza.

The Rams have a talent pool that ranges far across class lines, evidenced by senior Kendra McLaughlin's game-high 16 points and seven rebounds, junior Sarah Stephens's 13 points, and freshman Torie Bosley's even dozen. Senior Caitlyn Brown had eight points, and sophomore Brittany Boyce and freshman Kerry Conroy scored seven each.

The Wildcats were led by Erica DeShong's 10 points, and Holly Williams added nine.

The SHS squad may be putting in some extra practice at the free-throw line this week; although McLaughlin sank 6 of her 8 attempts last night, the rest of the squad combined to hit less than 50 percent of its tries.

The Rams' junior varsity unit cruised to its second triumph in as many outings, taking a 26-17 win. Shayna Sweitzer led all scorers with 10 points, and Morgan Anderson hauled down nine rebounds.

Southern has a long road trip scheduled for tomorrow to Smithsburg, then the Rams return home to host Petersburg Monday and Keyser Wednesday. The Oakland contests open with 6 p.m. jayvee play, followed by the varsity contests at 7:30 p.m.

Deer Tally Takes Nosedive With Reduced Limits

A reduction in the antlerless deer bag limit in western Maryland, combined with exceptionally cold weather over much of the hunt, caused the recent two-week 2005 deer firearm season tally to drop by 22 percent from the previous year, which itself was marked by a 32 percent decrease from the 2003 harvest.

Preliminary figures released yesterday by the Maryland Department of Natural Resources stated that Garrett County's preliminary kill count stood at 1,586 deer (1,315 antlered and 271 antlerless). Neighboring Allegany County saw a harvest of 1,509 deer overall (1,228 antlered/281 antlerless).

Region A (Garrett and Allegany counties) had its number of antlerless hunting days halved this year from two days to one – the only such reduction in the state. Based on the preliminary numbers the deer population appears to have stabilized or slightly decreased in rural areas of the state, according to DNR wildlife biologists. This year's reduced antlerless season was instituted to boost the number of fawns born next spring in western Maryland.

The overall statewide harvest was 40,735 deer, down 8 percent from last year. Washington County led the pack with 4,458 deer (1,601 antlered/2,857 antlerless), and Frederick was second with 3,198 deer (1,192 anterlered/2,006 antlerless).

Junior hunters had excellent weather for their one-day deer hunt and harvested a record 3,406 deer. The Junior Hunt Days, which include a deer, turkey, and waterfowl hunt day, continue to grow in popularity. This year successful junior deer hunters could receive a DNR certificate and have their picture posted on the DNR web site.

Minor differences in harvest estimates may also be attributed to the change in check-in systems from check stations to telephone and Internet check-in. This hunting season marks the first year that DNR has used a telephone and Internet big game reporting system. Maryland hunters have quickly learned how to use the new system and are complying with its requirements. The reported deer harvest with the new system is consistent with trends at check stations in recent years and is what would be expected based on recent deer population trends.

"The new check-in system is an unqualified success," claimed Wildlife and Heritage Service director Paul A. Peditto. "Hunters have quickly adopted the new procedures and are demonstrating their honesty and dedication to the sport by reporting their harvest with the new system.

"Telephone and Internet check-in is more convenient for most hunters, allows faster retrieval of accurate harvest data, and can be operated at a reduced cost. However, we realize some hunters miss the fellowship associated with the former check-station model; Look for new opportunities to restore the camaraderie associated with our former outdoor retail partners in the future," Peditto concluded.

Local Instructor Certified In Pilates For Golf

Jennifer Christophel, owner of the Balanced Body Studio and Wellness Center, Deep Creek, was recently certified in Pilates for Golf™. She was trained and certified by Sarah Christensen, developer and owner of the program. Christensen originally trained (and still works with) Butch Harmon, coach of Tiger Woods.

The Pilates for Golf certification process is a trademarked and sports-specific conditioning program that is open only to previously comprehensively - certified Pilates instructors fully certified in all levels of mat and equipment.

Instructors are schooled on how to give golf-specific body assessments to test the performance of the most common movements required for a good golf swing. They are then taught what exercises to prescribe using the Pilates mat work and spring-loaded equipment exercises. A program can then be tailored for a golfer's individual needs.

"Pilates for Golf will help you consistently hit the ball farther and straighter, while reducing the risk of injury and back pain," Christophel said. "The golf-conditioning program builds strength while simultaneously increasing stability, flexibility, balance, and core control: all the elements proven to be essential for a great swing."

Ram Grapplers Take Second At Horz Tourney; Huskies Fourth

An impressive second-place team finish was recorded Saturday by the Southern High School wrestling team in the highly competitive Max Horz Memorial Tournament, hosted annually by Berkeley Springs High School.

The Rams amassed 217.5 points to finish second only to Damatha Catholic with 236 points in the 29-team tournament.

The Northern High Huskies also fared well as a team, finishing fourth with a total of 137 points. They were edged by third-place Hedgesville with 140.5 points.

Leading the Rams were 152-pound Justin Ratliff and heavyweight Sean Sisler, who each captured individual championships.

Ratliff recorded two pins and a major decision before topping Jeff Pettit of Cameron, W.Va., 9-6, in the title bout.

Sisler pinned his first opponent, decisioned his second, and pinned Charlie Kopp of Hedgesville in the championship clash.

Winning runner-up honors for the Rams were Daniel Carr at 135 pounds, Jeremy Gregory at 160, and Justin Fitzwater at 189.

Carr won all of his matches before being outpointed 9-2 by Reggie Parker of Damatha. Gregory was edged in his title bout, 3-1, by Tyson Bennett of Berkeley Springs, while Fitzwater was decisioned 9-1 by Scott Miller of Damatha in the 189 championship round.

Two-time defending Maryland state champion Casey Kamp of Northern also finished second, as he was upset in the finals of the 125-pound division by Dustin Haislip of Musselman, falling by a 9-2 decision.

Finishing in third place for Southern was Andrew Pritts, who pinned Shawn Flynn of Hedgesville in the consolation final. Northern's Josh Duckworth also earned a third place in the 103-pound division by pinning Southern's Josh Arnold, who placed fourth. Also gaining a fourth place was Nick Payne of Northern, as he was nipped 6-5 by Nick Cocina of James Wood High School (Va.) in the 189-pound consolation final.

Taking fifth places for Southern were Jordan Skipper (119), Cory Reckart (140), and Brandon Manko (215). Huskies finishing in fifth place were Brandon Opel (171) and Dean Rounds (heavyweight).

Finishing behind the Rams and Huskies in the tournament were: Millbrook (Va.) in fifth place with 126.5 points; James Wood, 121.5; Musselman, 111.5; Strasburg, 103.5; Sherando (Va.), 95; Berkeley Springs, 88; Cameron, 73; Martinsburg, 35.5; Fayetteville (Va.), 21, and Turner-Ashby (Va.), 19.

The next encounter for the Southern Rams, who are coached by Dave Taylor, will be on the road this Saturday against Harford Tech and Westminster, and they will compete at Buckhannon/Upshur next Thursday.

The Huskies, coached by Scott Stough, will host a strong Beall team next Wednesday in a 7 p.m. start.

PART OF ME

Part of me wants to hold back.
Part of me wants to tell it all.
Part of me fears I will crack.
Part of me says please leave me alone.
Part of me says please stay near.
Part of me says are you listening to me?
Part of me knows that you hear.
Part of me wants to give up and die.
Part of me wants to live.
Part of me feels it's okay to be selfish.
Part of me feels I should give.
Part of me feels I am in this alone.
Part of me knows others care.
Part of me wonders where God has gone.
Part of me knows that He's here.
Part of me says to run and hide.
Part of me says I should stay.
Part of me knows I am not the same person.
Part of me knows that's okay.
Part of me says I can't face this day.
Part of me says I must try.
Part of me knows there are few answers.
Part of me needs to know why.
Part of me says to deal with the pain.
Part of me says to pretend.
Part of me feels this hurt will not leave.
Part of me feels I will mend.
Part of me wants to scream and shout.
Part of me silently weeps.
Part of me says this can't be real.
Part of me knows it's for keeps.
Part of me died that day with you.
Part of me had to stay here.
Part of my future is gone.
But part of my future is here.
I miss you! Love,

Lawmakers Hear

agency, such as the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, to save money.

"There has to be some sort of health care insurance relief for small businesses," Moe said. "I know some businesses that have received notices of a 28 to 35 percent increase in their insurance."

Susan Athey-Oxford also stressed the need to find a way to provide workers with health insurance. "People in this county deserve to have some modicum of health insurance," she said.

"It's before my committee and is an issue of major concern," said Hafer, who chairs the Senate Finance Committee. He and Edwards said legislators were looking at various kinds of non-profit agencies that could offer blanket coverage for small businesses.

The local lawmakers noted that the Fair Share Health Care Act, better known as the Wal-Mart bill, would probably be the first topic addressed next month. Approved by the General Assembly during the last session, the bill would require businesses with 10,000 or more employees to spend at least 8 percent of their payroll on health insurance for those employees, or pay more into the state's Medicaid fund. Wal-Mart is currently the only company in Maryland with that many employees.

The governor, however, vetoed the bill. Legislators must now decide whether or not to override that veto.

"There will be a huge attempt to override the governor's veto, and I also think there will be a major lobbying effort not to override it," Hafer said. He and Edwards support the governor's veto.

The bill has already cost the state two distribution centers and the jobs that would have come with them, Hafer said. Prior to the legislation, Wal-Mart had proposed building a distribution centers in Garrett County and on the Eastern Shore.

Edwards was concerned that the Wal-Mart bill could set a precedent, allowing the state to tell businesses how much they had to spend on health insurance.

"This year it's 10,000 employees. What's it going to be next? Five hundred employees? Every company? We just need to be very careful with this type of thing," he said.

Grantsville resident Kathy Tunney said the 8 percent standard was a reasonable one. She noted that tax payers are the ones who end up paying for those without insurance.

"I don't think we have to be so concerned about the 'slippery slope,'" she said.

Other bills expected to be discussed in the General Assembly include those pertaining to tougher regulations for registering and monitoring sex offenders; providing tax credits for military retirees; defining imminent domain; the governor's Healthy Air Act; and Workers' Compensation

The 421st session will run from Jan. 11 to April 10.

"Keep in touch, and let us know what's on your mind," Edwards said. He can be reached in Annapolis at 1-800-492-7122, ext. 3435. Hafer can be reached at the same number. His extension is 3436.

Grantsville Women Offer Their Help In Kenya, Ethiopia, Malaysia

by Brenda Ruggiero

It began with a simple dinner, but it led to a journey that would leave two Grantsville area women forever changed.

Carolyn Harriger and Rachel Stanton both attend the Church of the Redeemer in Grantsville, where they heard about Wycliffe Associates. The organization assists in Bible translation throughout the world, and has numerous volunteer opportunities for missionaries, both short- and long-term. The group often holds informative banquets to share their story.

"I had attended a banquet the year before," Rachel noted. "The speaker that night was a lady who taught in schools, and it was just so amazing. I was thinking that I could do that, but I was maybe 17 at the time, and thought that my parents would never agree to it. So I'd been praying about it for a good year, and then [Carolyn and I] both went to the next banquet."

Carolyn said she thought the concept was great, too, but thought that she was too old to be involved except through a donation.

"After the second banquet, I finally mentioned it to my parents," Rachel said. "My father (Joe Stanton) said that if I could find someone else to go with who he was comfortable with, I could go. A month or two later, I was at our church looking at the bulletin board, where there were announcements of upcoming Wycliffe opportunities. Carolyn walked by and asked if I would like to go."

Rachel followed up with an e-mail, and the two began discussing the possibility of a trip together. They discovered that they were both interested in children's ministry — Carolyn's background involved teaching, and Rachel is currently studying to be a teacher. After much planning, they were able to travel to Kenya together in July of 2004.

"Kid Zone and Kid Zone International is the specific ministry that we participated in," Carolyn explained. "What happens is that groups of missionaries in a region will get together and have what they call their conference, at which they plan and rejuvenate themselves. Our job is to come in and literally take care of their children so they are free to do their work."

Looking back, Rachel said she realizes that they had no idea what they were getting into. She was most surprised by the cultural differences involved.

"They were still kids — kids are kids wherever — but there were so many little differences in the expectations of what they were used to doing or how things work," she said.

Carolyn came to a realization during her trip as well.

"When I first got there, I looked at everything through United States of America eyes, only to find that we really are a minority in the world, from many different aspects."

The journey continued from there. Last March, Carolyn traveled to Ethiopia with Wycliffe, and Rachel went to Malaysia in August.

"I feel very fortunate that I've had these opportunities," Carolyn said. "I think every young person should be able to — or should have to — go through two weeks somewhere to see that we really are a minority. It was important not only to work with the missionary children for me, personally, but to see some of the culture outside of the missionary thing."

Both ladies hope to take more trips in the future.

"I've been asked to go back to Ethiopia in March, so I'm praying about that," Carolyn said. "Part of me would love to go somewhere else just for the experience of seeing another part of the world, but there was something about Ethiopia..."

Rachel noted that through her experience, her world was "completely enlarged."

"You know it's out there, but it's a lot different to see pictures of Kenya in an encyclopedia or learn about it in school. Being there and seeing that people actually live like this really opened my eyes."

Carolyn noted that people skilled in various areas are needed on Wycliffe trips, including construction, computers, accounting, and teaching.

"No matter what skill you have, they will find a place for you," she said. "No matter how much time you have to give, they will find a place for you to go."

The 10-week academic contest asks student investment teams to manage a portfolio of stocks by conducting fundamental and technical analysis strategies. The girls' team finished 3rd among high schools in the Western Region, which includes teams from Garrett, Allegany, Washington, and Frederick counties. Lisa Bender's economics students discover the importance of both short- and long-term investing strategies during their financial literacy unit for the class. RAM BATTALION GETS TOP NOTCH INSPECTION RATING

The Southern Garrett Rams Battalion recently completed its first 3rd Brigade Cadet Command JROTC Inspection on Dec. 7. The inspection program looked at the JROTC program overall, the Corps of Cadets, the Color Guard, Platoon Drill, curriculum knowledge, and school support. The cadets presented a Cadet Command & Staff Briefing discussing the state of the Rams Battalion as well as having their areas of responsibility inspected. The Cadet Command Inspectors interacted solely with the cadets and would have actually deducted points if either one of the two instructors (LTC Riley or SFC Kulcsar) got involved or answered. The Rams Battalion scored a record high 92.44%.

CPR IS "THE MOST IMPORTANT MOVE" IN EMERGENCY MEDICINE according to Garrett County Memorial Hospital education coordinator Bethany Browning, RN, CCRN, who noted that the hospital's CPR class recently received perfect marks in an evaluation by the American Heart Association. "Performed properly, CPR could mean the difference between life and death," Browning explained. "There are many reasons a person's breathing or heartbeat might stop, including a heart attack, stroke, drowning, electrocution, or overdose. At that point it becomes vital to put oxygen into the victim's lungs by performing rescue breathing, and circulating the blood through the body with chest compressions." Pictured from the left during one of the hospital's CPR classes, which are offered to the public on the first Tuesday of each month, are Gloria Kitzmiller, Linda Denjou, Lucy Burnett, and Browning. CPR guidelines will be changing in early 2006, and persons interested in signing up for one of the hospital's classes can call 301-533-4318 to register.

Weather Hinders Blood Collection; Drives Scheduled

Relatively severe weather conditions over the past few weeks have caused the cancellation of many scheduled blood drives along the east coast, according to American Red Cross Blood Services officials.

Locally, the potential to collect more than 135 units of blood was lost since last Thursday. Sister Red Cross regions in the Mid-Atlantic area lost more than 1,200 units.

"In order to avoid a critical blood shortage, people are encouraged to try to schedule an appointment or visit a blood drive in their local areas," said Taunia Oechslin, senior director, recruitment.

There will be two visits of the bloodmobile to Garrett County next Monday, Dec. 19. Donors will be welcomed at the Grantsville fire hall form 12:30 to 6:30 p.m., and at Garrett County Memorial Hospital in Oakland from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Local hospitals and communities could be adversely affected if blood supplies are not replenished on a regular basis," said Oechslin. "Since blood collections historically decline over the holidays, we are greatly concerned that winter storms could hinder turnout at local blood drives when we need to build reserves for the holiday."

According to Oechslin, supplies of type O negative blood, considered universal because it may be transfused to all blood types in an emergency, were already critical before the storm hit.

"All donors, and especially those with O negative blood, are encouraged to help during this time."

Potential donors should weigh a minimum of 105 pounds, be at least 17 years of age, and be in good health. To schedule an appointment, donors may call 1-800-GIVE-LIFE (1-800-448-3543).

Home Energy Program Sets Enrollments

The Garrett County Community Action Committee's Office of Home Energy Programs will be taking applications for the Project Heat Up Program starting on Sunday, Jan. 15, and continuing through Friday, March 31.

Project Heat Up – a supplemental program, not a crisis program – is designed for households that exceed the maximum income requirements for the Maryland Energy Assistance Program (MEAP). This special one-time project will assist households with income ranging between 150 and 175 percent of the federal poverty level with MEAP assistance only, with benefits that will only cover approximately 25 percent of a household's fuel costs. (Households with incomes from zero to 150 percent of the poverty level are eligible for regular energy assistance.)

The household income limits for this program are as follows (broken down by number of individuals residing in the household):

- 1 person – $1,395.62 per month, $16,747.50 per year;
- 2 people – $1,871.04/mo., $22,452.50/yr.
- 3 people – $2,346.47/mo., $28,157.50/yr.
- 4 people – $2,821.89/mo., $33,862.50/yr.
- 5 people – $3,297.31/mo., $39,567.50/yr.
- 6 people – $3,772.73/mo., $45,272.50/yr.
- 7 people – $4,248.16/mo., $50,977.509 yr.
- 8 people – $4,723.58/mo., $56.682.50/yr.
- For each additional person – $475.42/mo., $5,705/yr.

In order to receive assistance through the program, an applicant needs to provide proof of income for 30 days prior to the date of application, social security cards for all household members, an electric or gas bill, and a driver's license for the applicant.

For further information, persons may call the GCCAC Office of Home Energy at 301-334-9431, ext. 114, or 1-888-877-8403, ext. 114.

The Ultimate Connection

Communication is a basic need in our world. The telephone was the first form of instant communication, we could pick up the receiver and hear a friend or loved one speaking! We are more connected than ever before with cell phones and computers; not only can we hear a voice on the phone, we can transmit text and pictures in a flash. Now, whether we phone or e-mail next door or thousands of miles away, we expect to make that instant connection.

Now, let us consider another invisible, more unearthly form of communication ..prayer. Each time we come to God with faith and the acceptance of His will, we can expect to connect with Him, our source of all that is wise and good. Mark 11:24 confirms this as we read.."Therefore I tell you, whatever you ask for in prayer, believe that you have received it, and it will be yours." Keeping in touch with God through prayer can have an incredible impact on our lives each and every day!

As we worship God this week, may we remember to thank Him for the divine communication of prayer, the ultimate connection.

Does Year's End Make You Sad?

Psychiatrists and psychologists tell us that more people become depressed at the end of the year than at any other time. Some people's moods are actually sensitive to the amount of light in their environment, and therefore as we approach the winter solstice (the shortest day of the year), these people find their moods declining. This affliction is known by the acronym "SAD," which stands for Seasonal Affective Disorder, and for most people suffering from this, it results in mild to moderate depression. Some people, however, suffer from more severe depressions at this time of year, perhaps because they have sad associations with the holidays, or because they are alone, and they see others happily enjoying the festive season with friends and family. The end of the year can also be a particularly lonely time for single people without friends or family with whom to spend the holidays.

If you are feeling sad and lonely as we approach the year's end, don't think that you have to just "tough it out" or go it alone. Talk to a trusted spiritual advisor, your doctor, or a therapist. Help is readily available, but you have to seek it out. Also, try to find people to spend time with at the holidays, whether they are supportive friends or family members.

And finally, don't forget to ask God for His help.

> Ask, and it will be given you;
> seek and you will find;
> knock and it will be opened to you.

Milk Thistle for Cancer & Liver Disease

Milk thistle (Silybum marianum) is an herb that was used in ancient Greece to treat diseases of the liver and gallbladder. Recently, it has been studied for use as an anticarcinogen (anti-cancer), and to treat alcoholic liver disease. The active ingredient in milk thistle is called silymarin. This herb has demonstrated protective effects on nerve cells in laboratory studies. Protective effects have also been shown on the pancreas, kidney, and liver in animals.

Human studies evaluating protection are limited; however, milk thistle was shown to improve the results of liver function tests in 30 people with a history of chronic exposure to hepatotoxic (toxic to the liver) chemicals. Milk thistle has demonstrated activity against prostate, breast, skin, colon, tongue, and bladder cancers in animals. A trial evaluating milk thistle to treat prostate cancer in humans is currently ongoing. Studies in the treatment of alcoholic liver disease have shown conflicting results. Larger studies of a longer duration are needed to fully evaluate the role of this herb in treating alcoholic liver disease.

Accident Man Handed Two-Day Jail Sentence

An Accident man received a two-day jail term during a recent Garrett County District Court hearing involving charges of driving while impaired (DWI) and illegal prescription of a prescription narcotic.

Daniel Wayne Wilt, 44, Accident, pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a 60-day sentence, all but two days of which was suspended, and was fined $455 and placed on one year of supervised probation by Judge Ralph M. Burnett. Wilt also pleaded guilty to illegal possession of a prescription medication and was handed a probation before judgment (PBJ), filed when sheriff's deputies found five Percocet pills in his pocket during the course of the July traffic stop on Garrett Highway.

In other District Court news, an Oakland man was deemed not guilty after his alleged victim refused to testify against him. Bushrod Kenneth Hardesty Jr., 25, had been arrested by Oakland police officers in June after a domestic altercation at his Water Street apartment. Hardesty reportedly threw a woman to the ground during the incident.

Jamie Lee Fazenbaker, 26, Grantsville, pleaded guilty to second-degree assault and was handed a 60-day sentence, all but two days of which was suspended, along with a $100 fine, one year of supervised probation, and 30 hours of community service. The charge stemmed from an April arrest by state troopers after Fazenbaker punched his girlfriend in the eye and struck her on the leg during a domestic assault.

Brandon Alan McCartney, 21, Buckhannon, W.Va., pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a PBJ and a 30-day suspended sentence, a $500 fine, one year of unsupervised probation, and 30 hours of community service. His June arrest came after sheriff's deputies discovered a smoking bowl with marijuana residue and a quantity of rolling papers, in his car during a Pleasant Valley traffic stop.

Timothy Allen Welch, 40, Mtn. Lake Park, pleaded guilty to second-degree assault and was handed a 30-day suspended sentence, fined $100, and placed on one year of supervised probation. Sheriff's deputies jailed Welch in September after he shoved and cursed a neighbor who had asked him to slow down after witnessing him repeatedly drive recklessly on their road. Welch was reportedly intoxicated at the time of his arrest.

Dustin Allen Guthrie, 23, Kitzmiller, was handed stet rulings on charges of second-degree assault, trespassing, and telephone misuse. The charges were filed after a September domestic altercation that was investigated by sheriff's deputies.

Thomas Ray Thorne, 24, Masontown, W.Va., received a stet ruling on a misdemeanor theft charge filed by sheriff's deputies after he allegedly stole an acquaintance's purse while they were out together at a McHenry establishment. An additional charge of felony theft was filed in connection with the same incident when he also took a purse belonging to a second acquaintance that contained in excess of $500. The felony charge was not prosecuted.

A stet ruling was handed down to Bryon Ray Payne Jr., 30, Morgantown, W.Va., who faced a violation of ex parte charge filed by sheriff's deputies after he called his ex-girlfriend at her Swanton home while the order was on file. An additional charge of telephone misuse was not prosecuted.

Joshua David Crosco, 19, Oakland, was not prosecuted on a second-degree assault charge.

Jose Pachecho, 23, Oakland, was not prosecuted on charges of second-degree assault and disorderly conduct.

Thomas A. Bodalksi III, 18, McHenry, and Michael F. Chapman, 23, Oakland, were each not prosecuted on second-degree and disorderly conduct charges.

David Ellis Jackson, 21, Burlington, Vt., was not prosecuted on marijuana and drug paraphernalia charges.

Matthew James Gibellino, 41, Accident, was not prosecuted on a charge of illegal possession of a prescription drug.

Ashley Nicole Collins, 20, Mtn. Lake Park, was not prosecuted on charges of possession of cocaine, marijuana, drug paraphernalia, and a prescription medication.

Ronald Eugene Tasker, 24, Kitzmiller, was not prosecuted on a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Crystal Maria Armstrong, 22, Oakland, was not prosecuted on charges of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

Shawn Christopher Simmons, 29, Mt. Storm, W.Va., was not prosecuted on two counts of second-degree assault.

DUI/DWI CASES

A number of DUI (driving while under the influence) and DWI cases were heard in traffic court recently.

Craig Eugene Hood, 40, Pa., was deemed to be in violation of his DUI probation, which was revoked as a six-month jail term was reimposed.

Michael Leroy Brown, 47, Md., pleaded guilty to DUI and was handed a 90-day sentence, all but seven days of which was suspended, and was fined $350 and placed on two years of supervised probation.

Charles Markwood Powles, 43, Texas, pleaded guilty to DUI and was handed a 30-day sentence,

TV-PIPELINE

Actress' run on drama hasn't gone 'Cold'

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Kathryn Morris

Q: Why has Lilly Rush, played by Kathryn Morris, been reduced to a supporting role in "Cold Case"? She is my favorite character in the show. –Judy Rosebrough, Columbus, Ohio

A: Rest assured that Morris is still the star of the CBS drama series, although to give her a break that we're sure is much-needed, certain episodes of the show play up some of the other characters a bit more. That's not out of the ordinary for a program that has one central performer, especially when it's several seasons into its run.

Q: I miss the show "Scrubs." When, if at all, will it be returning to the NBC lineup? –Adam Kaufman, White Plains, N.Y.

A: At this writing, the network was still saying "midseason," which could mean anytime after the first of the year. New episodes are definitely in production, since singer-actress Mandy Moore has been cast in a couple of them; she'll be acting opposite series star Zach Braff, her real-life boyfriend of late. If it's any consolation in the meantime, the entire second season of the show recently was released in a DVD set.

Q: Has "Threshold" been canceled? We've not seen it for a few weeks, although it has been listed on the television page. –Debby Sheets, Toledo, Ohio

A: CBS made a relatively late decision to switch the time slots of the Friday thriller "Threshold" and the Tuesday drama "Close to Home" in recent weeks, to see how the shows would fare ratingswise. The timing was why some television listings, which had already gone to press, didn't reflect the change. The experiment was at least halfway successful; "Close to Home" fared well enough to remain on Fridays, and as of this writing, the jury was still out on "Threshold."

Q: I am trying to remember the name of a movie, and I can't remember if it was made for television or just shown there after it was in theaters. It starred Burt Lancaster as a man who was not well and is in his room while his children are preparing a birthday party. At some point, he tells his grandchildren he wants a Viking funeral. –Glen Lo Cascio, Bronxville, N.Y.

A: It's "Rocket Gibraltar," a 1988 drama that was made for theatrical release. Besides Lancaster – whose next-to-last big-screen film it was, "Field of Dreams" being the last one – the cast included Kevin Spacey, a pre-"Home Alone" Macaulay Culkin, Frances Conroy ("Six Feet Under"), John Glover ("Smallville") and Patricia Clarkson.

Live Nativity Scene Set At St. Paul's Church

A live nativity scene will be portrayed on the lawn of St. Paul's United Methodist Church next weekend by the church's Sunday school students and youth.

The live nativity will be held on Friday, Dec. 23, from 4 to 8 p.m., and on Saturday, Dec. 24, from 2 to 6 p.m. Children from second grade through high school will portray the scene.

"To celebrate the tremendous year of growth of the Sunday school and youth program, we wanted to portray a live nativity scene," said Traci Royce, Sunday school superintendent. "Everyone is welcome to stop by and feel the warmth and mystery of our Lord and Savior's birth."

AIDING IN THE GREAT AMERICAN SMOKEOUT – In honor of the Great American Smokeout this November, Outreach Workers from the Garrett County Health Department worked with Community Planning Groups and local worksites to encourage tobacco users to quit for 24 hours. A total of 57 Garrett County residents pledged to quit and 29 were successful. Each successful quitter was awarded a 10 lb. turkey, compliments of Browning's Foodland and the health department. Pictured above is staff from the Dennett Road Nursing Home who participated in the Smokeout either by quitting for the day or adopting a smoker. From left to right in the front row are Liz Goldsborough (adopter), Janice Lewis (adopter), Dottie Alexander (adoptee), and Cathy Savage (adopter). In the back row are Kim Sharpless (adoptee), Sue Schwab (adopter), Elizabeth Kelly (adoptee), Beverly Hipp (adoptee), and Liz Haskiell (adoptee). Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• Bermuda has more golf courses per square mile than any country in the world.

• In an innovative — though not particularly ethical — attempt to earn some extra income, a Chinese peasant farmer decided that he would roll large rocks onto a nearby road. The aim of his scheme was to charge motorists to repair the cars that would be damaged by hitting the rocks. Unfortunately, five people were killed in an accident caused by the rocks. The peasant was charged with murder, found guilty and sentenced to death as a result.

• The word "giraffe" comes from an Arabic word meaning "one that walks quickly."

• Much research has been done on death and dying; one of the results of this research is that we now have some idea of when a dying person's senses stop functioning. Sight is said to be the first one to go, followed by taste, then smell, then touch. People can usually hear right up until the very end. I wonder, though: How did researchers determine the order?

• Keep this in mind the next time you're heading to poker night with your buddies: The periodical Gambler's Digest once reported that there is more cheating in private, friendly games than in all other gambling games put together.

• "She's the kind who can marry anyone she pleases. Too bad she doesn't please anyone." It's still not known who made that statement. Or — perhaps more importantly — about whom.

• The number-crunchers at General Motors say that it costs between $3 billion and $9 billion to conduct the research and development necessary to design a new vehicle. And that's before the costs of producing the vehicle for the masses are figured in.

All I Want for Christmas Is ... a Puppy!

Q. My nephew Stephen has been begging for a puppy for several months now, and his parents and I are considering buying him one for Christmas. I have my reservations because Stephen has never kept a pet before, not even a fish. Do you think it's a good idea to give a 7-year-old a dog? — Auntie in Birmingham, Ala.

A. Ultimately, Stephen's parents must decide whether giving him a dog is a good idea. However, bringing a puppy into the family during one of the busiest (and most stressful) times of the year is not always the best idea for anyone.

The puppy will be stressed-out, feeling displaced and homesick; Stephen will be busy playing with all his other presents; and the adults will be running around in the kitchen and dining room, preparing dinner or talking to relatives. So both family and puppy may not have the chance to just spend time together and get to know each other — and start important things like housebreaking and obedience training.

Instead, why not prepare Stephen for the arrival of a new puppy by giving him books or interactive materials on different dog breeds, care and training? The American Kennel Club, for example, offers a trivia game called "Best In Show," where players can learn more than 200 canine facts. It's available at toy stores or at www.akc.org.

Or, if his parents have already decided to get a dog, talk to them about giving Stephen the accessories first (collar, leash, food bowl, etc.) and choosing a puppy after Christmas when the hustle and bustle has died down. That way, the family can give its undivided attention to its newest member at a crucial period in its development.

Q. I have a tumbler that was made with Pittsburgh Glass. I have been told that it is quite early. I love the tumbler and want to learn more about this type of glass. — Susan, Naperville, Ill.

A. According to the 20th edition of Schroeder's Antiques Price Guide, window glass and hollow ware were being produced in the Pittsburgh area as early as 1797. Coal was used instead of wood to fire the large glass furnaces. At one time, more than 150 glass companies flourished in the region. During the Victorian era, dozens of free-blown, pattern-molded and flint glass were produced. I suspect your tumbler was probably made sometime during the late 19th to early 20th centuries. One of my favorite reference books is Glass A-Z by David Shotwell (KP Books, $24.95).

Q. I love to gather arrowheads on our family farm in Oklahoma. Can you recommend a good reference book for me? — Clay, Roland, Okla.

A. The Official Overstreet Indian Arrowheads: Identification and Price Guide by Robert M. Overstreet, now in its seventh edition, features more than 8,000 actual-size photographs, many in full-color. There is a guide on how to buy authentic relics, tips on grading and thousands of new illustrations of points, both common and scarce. It can be purchased at most larger bookstores or through Gemstone Publishing, Inc. and its toll-free telephone number: 1-888-375-9800.

DENNIS MURRAY'S HOME INSPECTION SERVICE

INSPECTOR ADDED TO BUSINESS – Glenn Champlin, on the left, has joined the team of Dennis Murray's Home Inspection Service. Champlin recently earned his certification in home inspections and water and mold testing. For home inspections or environmental testing, persons may call 888-918-5134. Champlin is pictured above with Murray, president and owner. See story.

Dennis Murray, president and owner of Dennis Murray's Home Inspection Service, recently announced he has added a real estate inspector, Glen Champlin, to his team. Champlin will serve Garrett and Allegany counties in Maryland, Preston and Monongalia counties in West Virginia, as well as neighboring parts of Pennsylvania.

Champlin has completed the required classroom and field training, along with passing a required exam, so he can provide home inspection services to area homeowners and buyers. He also completed the certification courses for water and mold testing.

"Glen's previous experience and expertise will serve him well in this field and will give him an edge in becoming an extremely competent and professional inspector," said Murray. "I am pleased to have him as a member of my organization."

Dennis Murray's Home Inspection Service is affiliated with Building Specs, a national home inspection company. Murray is also a member of the National Association of Home Inspectors, Maryland Association of Home Inspectors, and West Virginia Association of Home Inspectors.

"My goal is to be able to familiarize prospective buyers or sellers about their investment so that they can make a more informed decision," said Champlin. "I will review some of the advantages of the home, troubleshoot any potential damages, plus discuss preventive maintenance going forward for their investment. Denny and I will be working closely together to provide a one-stop shop for home inspections and environmental testing for area realtors, financial institutions, and for consumers who are purchasing a new home or selling the home. I am excited to be affiliated with such a professional and well-respected home inspection business, such as Denny's."

APPRECIATION PARTY

There will be a customer appreciation party held Tuesday, Dec. 20, at the Kitzmiller Post Office from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. Santa will be arriving at 9:30 to visit with the children and take their requests for Christmas.

CHRISTMAS EVE SERVICE

A Christmas Eve worship service will be held at the Kitzmiller Assembly of God Church, beginning at 6 p.m.

FUNDRAISER SUCCESSFUL

Lighting and trimming of the Kitzmiller Christmas tree was a successful event for the approximately 100 in attendance on Friday at the Kitzmiller community building.

White ribbons to honor police/fire/rescue personnel, red/white/blue ribbons in support of country and military, red ribbons in remembrance, and gold ribbons for honor were placed on the tree during a service led by Nancy Brady. There was Christmas caroling, and refreshments of hot chocolate and cookies were shared.

Sleigh rides were provided to those who brought canned goods or one dollar for each ride. The sleigh traveled up Center Street, across Third Street, down West Main, onto Route 38, and back to Center Street. Buck robes and blankets were provided to help fend off the cold during the ride.

A large amount of food and $300 was raised for the fire department's Christmas project.

"Tree Of Lights" Benefit Under Way At GCMH

"Celebrate Your Holiday With a Gift of Love" is the theme behind the annual Tree of Lights program fundraiser initiated each Christmas season by the Garrett County Memorial Hospital Foundation. Funds raised through the Tree of Lights program are used toward the purchase of equipment that is vital to patient care.

Individuals who purchase a light on the Tree of Lights are sent a holiday postcard that they can send on to the appropriate person in notification of the light purchase. The Tree of Lights is located in the hospital lobby and remains lit throughout the holiday season for the enjoyment of patients, visitors, and staff.

"This is the twelfth year for the program and many of our donors comment that the Tree of Lights is a great way to remember loved ones during the holiday season, as well as, provide an opportunity to recognize someone special," explained GCMH Foundation chairperson Louise Conjura.

For more information on the Tree of Lights, persons may call the GCMH Foundation office at 301-533-4178.

Group Working To Reduce GC Rate Of Suicide

by Glenn Tolbert

Another in a series of meetings was held this week at the Garrett County Health Department by a committee investigating ways to reduce Garrett County's high suicide rate.

Called the Suicide Prevention Committee, the group consists of a mix of some 20 health care professionals, educators, mental health care clients, and others.

Among the achievements to date, the group has agreed to sponsor a suicide prevention program for those in the community who deal daily with the public about the warning signs often displayed by those contemplating suicide.

This second session may be more open to the public, depending upon the level of interest indicated.

The sessions, scheduled to begin in February, will each be two days in length. The first one will be by invitation only and will be aimed at everyone from certified public accountants to those involved in helping persons find employment, as financial difficulties and loss of a job are but two of the primary reasons often suspected for suicides in Garrett County, and in the country in general.

Other reasons include relationship problems, sexual orientation issues, depression, and loneliness.

The programs, called ASIST, will give participants "gatekeeper" roles, teaching them to be able to:

•recognize that caregivers and persons at risk are affected by personal and societal attitudes about suicide;

•discuss suicide with a person at risk in a direct manner;

•identify risk factor alerts and develop safe plans related to them;

•demonstrate the skills required to intervene with a person at risk;

•list the type of resources available to a person at risk, including themselves;

•make a commitment to improving community resources;

•recognize that suicide prevention is broader duun suicide "first-aid," and includes "life-promotion" and "self-care" for the caregivers.

Fred Polce, director of the Garrett County Core Service Agency, opened the meeting by pointing out that 21 people committed suicide in Garrett County from May 2000 through September 2005.

Despite these numbers, Polee and other health care professionals had nothing but praise for the efforts of the local school system in promoting mental health.

"Keeping a healthy desire for life is a lifelong process," Polce said. "It has to start early, and if it doesn't take, it's often hard to explain to someone feeling depressed why they should go to a doctor."

Maryland's crisis hotline is open 24 hours at 1-800-422-0009. For more information on Garrett County mental health activities and services, persons may call 301-334-7440.

Swan Meadow Students To Hold Annual Bake Sale

Swan Meadow School's 6th through 8th graders are hosting their annual Christmas Bake Sale on Tuesday, Dec. 20, from 3 to 6 p.m., in the lobby of Browning's Foodland in Oakland.

The school's families will provide three tables of homemade Christmas goodies, like cutout cookies, rings of cinnamon rolls, cakes, oatmeal raisin bars, pies, and loaves of whole wheat bread. Sugar-free goodies, like frosted cupcakes and gingerbread biscotti, will also be sold.

Proceeds from this annual sale will be used for school field trips, including a canoe trip by the class in the spring, and service projects. The students always send a portion of their earnings to local, national, and international organizations that serve people in need.

This year funds were sent to Warm the Children Fund in Oakland and to Christian Aid Ministries to serve people affected by the hurricanes in the South and people affected by floods in Romania and the earthquake in Pakistan.

They also sent funds to the Peace Corps to help a high school girl complete her education in Niger, the country in which Matthew Bachtel, local Peace Corps volunteer from Aurora, W.Va., is currently serving.

HEALTH SCARES ON TV

by Dr. Thomas P. Sheahen

Q. I saw on a TV show that chemicals in food wrappers can cause cancer. Is that something I need to worry about?

This is an example of the way TV hypes up a non-story to generate some excitement (without excitement, people might change the channel).

Here is the way these hyped-up things usually go: some celebrity says something like "Chlorofluorocarbons have been detected in food wrappers. The amount being given off is 3 to 4 times the rate originally thought. This substance has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

That sounds pretty scary, gets your attention, and keeps you tuned to that channel. But the question a hypester never answers is "How much?"

For this sort of nonsense to be successful in getting people fired up, it is first necessary to take advantage of the fact that people don't pay much attention to the actual amount of an substance.

A kilogram equals 2.2 pounds. A gram is one-one thousandth of a kilogram; a milligram is one one-thousandth of that; and a microgram is one one-thousandth of a milligram. Each of those comparisons differ by three orders of magnitude. Going on down, a nanogram is 1/1000 of a microgram. So a nanogram is one part in 10^{12} of a kilogram -- 12 orders of magnitude.

Now, the real question is: how much does it take to hurt you? What is a harmful dose? Remember that the mass of a human body is typically between 50 and 100 kilograms.

There are a whole lot of poisonous substances where a gram can be fatal. A rattlesnake bite contains much less than a gram of venom. But a nanogram of practically any chemical cannot make much difference to your health, because it is such a tiny fraction of your body mass. Some very tiny bacteria and viruses can be devastating because they multiply rapidly, and don't stay in the nanogram range for long. But non-living chemicals cannot do that.

To put this all in perspective, it is good to remember that pure, distilled water is fatal – in doses ten feet deep. The size of the dose is extremely important, and that is what never seems to get mentioned on TV. Right now your body contains a certain amount of arsenic, uranium, mercury, radon, cadmium, dioxins, and so forth. Tiny traces of various elements actually are helpful to keeping your body functioning well.

With modern instrumentation, it is possible to measure the presence of chemicals at levels much lower than what was possible [illegible] term "parts per million" refers to amounts measured in micrograms, and "parts per billion" refers to nanogram quantities. Today you can find low levels of strange things in your bloodstream with a level of accuracy in the "parts per billion" range.

If the rate of something giving off one part per billion increases by a factor of 3 or 4, is that worse than something around one part per million increasing by 1%? No! It's the total dose that counts. When people don't take that into account, they can be persuaded of lots of imaginary dangers that really aren't worth thinking about.

Examples of this sort of scaremongering are plentiful; radioactivity in the air, mercury in fish, chemicals from plastic bottles getting into the water supply. These hazards are very small compared to other commonplace health hazards that we ignore every day.

So next time you're watching television and a report about dangerous chemicals comes on, listen very closely and see if they mention how much is the dose. If they don't bother to say, chances are it's just one more hyped-up story of no real importance.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

In case anyone forgot what real winter is like in Bittinger, they got a reminder Sunday morning. Church went on as usual, with blowing snow on top of ice. It was bitter cold, too. But traffic was heavy as usual on Sunday morning. We were lucky we didn't have more fresh snow, because if we had, Rock Lodge Road and Rt. 495 would be closed. However, most of the congregation turned out at Emmanuel Lutheran Church and most stayed for the annual congregation meeting following the service to approve next year's budget and to amend some changes in our constitution.

Council members for the next term were elected. Personally, I admire anyone willing to take on that job, taking the time to attend council meetings, and dealing with administrative details. One of the most important changes was to add a budget line for World Hunger, in addition to the amount that is given by congregational members. The three people willing to serve on the council were Jenny Hady, Lynn Newman, and Larry Maxim. It is a hard job, but someone must do it.

Although it was snowing hard with a muddy mess on the field in Pittsburgh on Sunday afternoon, the Steelers did the stellar job in defeating the Chicago Bears. It was not even close to the winter weather we were having, as certainly no team could possibly play football here in December. Certainly passing would not be attempted with the wind.

Yesterday, Jack Beitzel cleared my lane, but it is already drifted shut again. Keeping the lane open is almost a daily task. My new driver, Caitlin, does not have much experience in drift busting.

It looks like the wooly worm was right, showing a normal winter, meaning a little winter in November and then full blast of winter in December, which is a sure bet for a white Christmas. We have gotten a fresh coating of lovely fluffy snow almost every day since the first of December.

When I was an enthusiastic skier, [illegible] the bumper sticker, "Pray for snow." Someone must be praying pretty hard so far this winter. It is not a thing I would pray for anymore. Snow only makes my hard life even harder. Actually, snow is not so awful; it is the hard winds we seem to have here in Bittinger most of the time.

I am proud of myself because this year I sent most of my important Christmas cards before the last week before Christmas. I started before my girls' photographs came back so lots of people should not have received them.

It is hard to focus on that job when my outside world is a Christmas card coming to life. Today the sky is pale, robin-egg blue, and the fresh snow from last night makes it look like diamond dust. It is light and crisp, and a perfect snow fit to ski on. The icicles along my roof make another spectacular view.

As far as I know, not much is going on in Bittinger just now, except people busy with holiday preparations. The one noticeable decoration is a big red ribbon on the mailbox in Brenneman's Grove belonging to the Wagner and Housley households.

A live Christmas tree was planted and is to be decorated on this Tuesday evening on the parsonage lawn in honor of Pastor Jim Mitchell and his ministry. The congregation's members will also sing Christmas carols.

THE [illegible] hosted its Christmas party at the Mountain Glade Adult Day Care Center recently with approximately 30 members of the Southern Garrett County Republican Woman's Club and guests in attendance, including Maryland House minority leader George Edwards, Garrett County commissioners Dave Beard and his wife Beverly and Fred Holliday and his wife Joan, and Registrar of Wills Joe DiSimone. Those on hand donated items for the club's "No Child Left Behind" school supplies project and other efforts. Pictured are auction assistant Carl Rebele, left, and auctioneer Carl Roberts.

Local attendees at the 23rd annual recognition luncheon for the board, volunteers and staff of Hospice of Garrett County held at the Will o' the Wisp on Saturday were Don and Jane Sealing and Ruth DiPaolo.

Accident Church To Hold Candle Lighting Service

The Bear Creek Church of the Brethren will hold a candle lighting service on Sunday, Dec. 18, at 7 p.m. at the church. Special music will include presentations by the adult choir, the men's trio, and the children, as well as instrumental and vocal solos.

There will also be the lighting of the advent wreath, scripture readings, and congregational singing of traditional Christmas carols. A time of refreshments and fellowship will follow the program.

The community is invited to attend this service. Upcoming activities at the church include Christmas caroling on Friday, Dec. 16, at 6 p.m., and the Women's Fellowship Christmas party at Penn-Alps on Sunday, Dec. 18, at 12:30 p.m.

The church is located on Brethren Church Road, just past Accident Elementary School.

West Virginia

News from Preston, Tucker, Grant and Mineral Counties.

AWP's Mt. Storm Sawmill Closes After 28 Years

Allegheny Wood Products (AWP) closed its Mt. Storm sawmill facility on Friday, Dec. 2. The mill began operation in 1977 and recently employed 34 people, each of whom has been offered jobs at other AWP operations.

"The hardwood industry is experiencing difficult economic times that force us to look closely at all facilities," said company president John W. Crites. "Our decision to close this operation was based on a number of factors but foremost is the ability for AWP to remain competitive in the global marketplace."

Hardwood products from around the world have caused lumber prices to decline in recent months. The costs of hardwood logs have remained high, and fuel costs have escalated to unprecedented levels, according to the company executive.

"The West Virginia timber industry is in critical condition because of rising costs," Crites commented. "The majority of our operations are in West Virginia and we have higher taxes than any of the states that surround us. No other state that borders West Virginia imposes a severance tax on timber and as of December 1 this severance tax was raised by 56 percent on those who purchase timber," he stated. "Loggers have a 52 percent rate for workers' compensation. We simply cannot absorb these rising costs or pass them all along to our customers."

Domestic markets for hardwood lumber continue to change as the wood furniture industry moves manufacturing facilities to southeast Asia, according to Crites, who explained that competition for these markets is extremely high and requires the American hardwood industry to focus on efficiency.

"AWP will survive these challenging times but it requires difficult decisions that impact the people who work with us," he said.

Grant Co. Hospital Offering Children's Diabetes Programs

Grant Memorial Hospital, in conjunction with the Eastern West Virginia Rural Health Education Consortium, is mounting an effort to address children's diabetes in Grant County.

A program titled "Diabetes and Children" is slated for 7 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 7, in the Grant Hospital cafeteria. This program is free and children are invited to attend with their parents. Surveys for the formation of a Diabetes and Children Support Group will also be available at this program.

Those surveys are also being sent home with the county's elementary schoolchildren this week that parents of children having diabetes are being asked to fill out. The surveys will assist hospital outreach workers in forming a Diabetes and Children Support Group. The first meeting of the group is slated for 7 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 2, in the hospital cafeteria.

Attached to the survey will be a sheet of suggested topics that could be used as program guides for future meetings. Information about the possibility of planning a Day Camp for children with diabetes will also be included in the information being sent home with the children.

Persons interested in participating in the Diabetes and Children Support Group can call Linda Philbrick at 304-257-5127, or Grant Memorial Hospital at 304-257-5806.

Garrett County To Host One Of Three Hay, Pasture Conferences

Three hay and pasture conferences co-sponsored by the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRSC), the Maryland-Delaware Forage Council, and Cooperative Extension in Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, will be held in Maryland (one in Garrett County) and Delaware January 18-20.

These conferences will address key management topics for increased yield and quality of hay, silage, and pasture. Participants will hear from Maryland and Delaware Extension and NRCS personnel, as well as renowned industry and university forage experts from Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin.

The conferences will begin at Garrett College in McHenry, a location easily accessible for producers, agribusiness representatives, and agency and Extension personnel from the Maryland/Pennsylvania/West Virginia region. This new event has been named the Tri-State Hay and Pasture Conference to reflect its regional nature. The conference will rotate annually among the states.

The Southern Maryland Hay and Pasture Conference will be held at the Izaak Walton League Outdoor Education Center near Waldorf on January 19, and the Delmarva Hay and Pasture Conference will be held January 19 (evening) and 20 at the Delaware State Fairgrounds in Harrington, Del.

Similar topics will be covered at all locations. Dr. Mark Sulc, forage specialist at Ohio State University, will share thoughts on new management tools for producing high yields of quality alfalfa. Richard Kauffman, regional manager and agronomist with W-L Research in Columbia, Pa., and Jeff Roberts, president of Harvest Tec Inc. in Hudson, Wisc., will discuss:

- emerging technologies such as Roundup Ready alfalfa;
- the latest in hay moisture monitoring equipment; and
- the use of preservatives to reduce hay spoilage.

Other speakers will cover a wide range of other topics. More detailed program information and directions to each conference date are available on the Web at www.agnr.umd.edu/ForageEvents or from local county Extension offices.

Pre-registration for the Tri-State and Southern Maryland conferences is requested. The registration fee for each conference is $12 if received by January 10, and $16 after January 10. Persons should send checks for the Tri-State conference along with name, address, and phone number to William Lantz, Maryland Cooperative Extension, 1916 Maryland Highway, Suite A, Mm. Lake Park, MD 21550. Checks should be made payable to Garrett County EAC.

33 YEARS OF SERVICE by Preston County Farm Service Agency (FSA) Committee member Milford Gibson was recognized recently with a certificate and celebration at the Kingwood USDA office. The Bruceton Mills area dairy farmer began his committee service in 1972 with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, FSA's predecessor agency, and among the many changes he has witnessed was the major restructuring of the USDA in the mid 1990s. Gibson was elected to the new Preston County FSA Committee in 1995 by his peers in Local Administrative Area (LAA) 1, which consists of the Grant and Pleasant Districts, and this month he completed his third term as a Preston County FSA Committee member. "Milford's service to the farmers of LAA 1 and all of Preston County is greatly appreciated and will always be remembered," said Preston County FSA executive director Eric McCartney. Gibson is shown with cake as McCartney presents him with a plaque and several gifts from the Preston farming community.

Soil pH Levels Important To Crops, Animals

by Chad Bucklew, district conservationist,
USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service

One of the most important aspects of soil chemistry is that of pH (potentia hydrogenii, Latin, meaning "strength of hydrogen"). The pH value of a soil affects several management properties of the soil, including nutrient availability, crop quality, herbicide performance, and animal health.

The soil pH value ranges from zero to 14, and is a measure of how acidic or basic the soil is. A pH value of 7 indicates that the soil is neutral. Soil pH values of 0 to 7 are acidic, and soil pH values of 7 to 14 are basic. Soils in Garrett County tend to be acidic. Soils that have been limed in the past may have pH values below 5.

The pH level of the soil is very important to the availability of soil nutrients to crops. Most crops will perform best with a soil pH of 5.8 to 6.5. Alfalfa, clovers, and other legumes will benefit from pH that is between 6.5 and 7.0. These are ranges at which the nutrients these crops need are at their maximum availability.

At a pH below 5.8, some nutrients, particularly phosphorus, are bound too tightly to the soil to be available for plant roots to absorb them. Nitrogen availability is also reduced below a pH of 5.8. A soil pH below 5.8 reduces the effectiveness of applied fertilizer because fertilizer nutrients become bound to the soil rather than being available for plant uptake. Lime applications on fields with low pH can release previously unavailable nutrients in the soil. As a result, some nutrient deficiency symptoms can be fixed simply by correcting soil pH with liming.

Most grass and row crops will not realize their optimum yield unless pH is between 6 and 7. When nutrients are the most available, the nutritional quality of the crop has potential to be at its best. The proper pH is important for producing a good yield of a high nutritional quality crop.

Good soil pH can also help minimize weed problems in crops. Crop plants growing under optimum soil conditions are at their most competitive with weeds. A vigorous crop is better suited to outgrow and shade out weeds than one that is limited by low nutrient availability. Soil pH that is near-neutral is also important for weed control with herbicides. If the soil pH is not in the range specified on the herbicide labeling, the herbicide may not act effectively, or may not degrade properly.

Liming to improve soil pH should be based on results of a soil test. A soil test will measure the acidity of the soil, and assess the balance of soil nutrients to make recommendations on the amount and type of lime needed to effectively manage the intended crop. The availability of soil magnesium is particularly important for liming recommendations for fields that will be grazed. Low magnesium levels, and the balance of magnesium with other nutrients, are important factors in addressing the risk of grass tetany, a potentially fatal nutrient deficiency in grazing animals. Magnesium levels in the soil will determine whether high magnesium lime (dolomitic) or high calcium (calcitic) lime is most appropriate.

The amount of lime needed to increase the pH of soil increases progressively with lower pH values, because the pH scale is logarithmic. A soil with a pH of 6.0 is ten times more acidic than a soil with a pH of 7.0. A soil with a pH of 5.0 is ten times more acidic than a soil of pH 6.0, and one hundred times more acidic than a soil with a pH of 7.0. Soils with a low pH may require multiple lime applications before the pH of the soil improves dramatically because there is more acidity to neutralize with the lime.

For more information on how soil pH affects soil fertility, persons may contact the staff of the Garrett County Soil Conservation District at 301-334-6950 or at 1916 Maryland Highway, Suite C, Mm. Lake Park, MD 21550.

WHEN IN DOUBT

Home values have been rising, and while some homeowners have been able to capitalize, others are suffering from "sticker shock" when they see their property tax bill.

Property tax – the biggest source of income for most local governments – is the biggest expense for most homeowners outside of mortgage payments. Lenders may keep a portion of your payments in escrow to pay those taxes on your behalf, so you might not be aware of the impact. However, you should be aware of how your tax is determined, and whether it's accurate.

Because there are various ways to calculate property tax, errors can sneak in. The National Taxpayers Union claims that up to sixty percent of property may be over-assessed, but only one in fifty owners ever challenge their assessment.

It's wise to confirm the data upon which the tax is based, like your home's square footage and number of bedrooms. Make an appointment or check online with the assessment office. You can check your property card, compare your neighbor's cards, and get an explanation of how your home's value is calculated.

Property taxes are based on the value of your home, so when home values go up, it's natural for assessments to rise as well. However, if this is your principal residence, Maryland law caps your annual tax increase. Check your tax bill to make sure the information on it is correct. It's time well spent if you have any doubts!

If you'd like to buy or sell a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call today!

Md. Agricultural Land Preservation Foundation Notes 25th Anniversary

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the first easement purchase by the Maryland Agricultural Land Preservation Foundation (MALPF), one of the nation's earliest and most successful farmland preservation programs.

MALPF has permanently preserved a total of [illegible] acres of farmland, with land preserved in each of Maryland's 23 counties, representing a public investment of over $333 million. This is the greatest ratio of farmland preserved to total land mass by any state. Together with other state and local agricultural preservation programs, more than [illegible],000 acres of farmland are protected in the state.

"Farmland preservation is a strong investment in our economy, our environment, and our quality of life," said Agriculture Secretary Lewis R. Riley. "Today's farmers are facing skyrocketing land prices and extraordinary development pressure. Sometimes selling easements for permanent land protection is the only way a farmer can continue farming, keep the farm in the family, or expand the business. Governor Robert L. Ehrlich, Jr. is committed to protecting land for farming."

MALPF purchases agricultural preservation easements that forever restrict development on prime farmland and woodland. The foundation's program is operated by a 12-member board of trustees and a staff of five. Local governments [illegible] Riley. Each county has a designated program administrator to act as the primary contact with and liaison between the agricultural community and the Foundation. The counties also each appoint an advisory board to approve and rank easement applications and assist in the review of other requests. In addition, they contribute funds to assist in the purchase of easements.

In addition to local government participation, the U.S. Department of Agriculture offers grants to help purchase easements through its Farm and Ranch Lands Protection Program. Over the history of the program, Maryland has received more federal funds for agricultural land preservation than any other state, totaling $24.2 million through 2005. This high level of federal support is evidence of their confidence in Maryland's farmland preservation programs, according to Riley.

According to a survey conducted by the Schaefer Center for Public Policy last year, public opinion supports this investment. A full 88 percent of respondents believe that it is important that the state preserve farmland for farming. Marylanders believe that farms and the products they produce should remain a part of the state's culture and economy.

In the past three years, the Board of Public Works has approved 200 easements, protecting 25,362 acres of prime farmland for more than $70 million in local, state, and federal dollars. The program expects to preserve an additional 15,000 acres by June 30, 2006.

DELINQUENT FEDERAL DEBTORS INELIGIBLE FOR FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

The Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996 (DCIA) provides that a person owing a delinquent non-tax debt to the federal government is ineligible for any USDA Farm Service Agency financial assistance.

Treasury regulations provide for purposes of determining eligibility for federal financial assistance, a debt is in delinquent status if the debt has not been paid within 90 days of the payment due date. The regulation further provides that the payment due date is the date specified in the creditor agency's initial written demand for payment or applicable agreement or instrument (including a post-delinquency repayment agreement.)

For the purposes of determining eligibility for FSA [illegible] Loans, Farm Storage Facility Loans (FSFL), Marketing Assistance Loans (MLA s), Recourse Loans, and Loan Deficiency Payments (LDP s), FSA shall use the Treasury's definition of delinquent status when determining whether an applicant meets the requirements of DCIA.

To obtain further information regarding the Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996 and how it may effect one's eligibility to receive federal financial assistance, persons are invited to visit the Preston County Farm Service Agency, located in the Corner Mall of the Kingwood Plaza, or telephone 304-329-1923.

The children listened to Christmas stories and sang and danced with bells on their wrists to the tunes of "Frosty the Snowman," "Jingles Bells," and "We Wish You a Merry Christmas." When Joyce Joslin, library associate, opened the book The Christmas Alphabet, they eagerly gathered round to guess the Christmas word associated with each letter of the alphabet, she said. Juniors Should Research Colleges Over The Break

For high school juniors wondering what to do over the winter break, the Maryland Higher Education Commission has a couple of suggestions: research colleges and financial aid.

"The holiday break is a perfect time for students to search for colleges," said Dr. Calvin W. Burnett, secretary of higher education. "It is also a good time to become familiar with scholarships and financial aid that is available. The earlier you apply, the greater the chance you have of gaining entrance to college and receiving aid."

Following are resources and websites for students seeking higher education information:

*The Maryland Higher Education Commission provides an exhaustive list of Maryland colleges, universities, and private career schools along with financial aid sources and how to's at www.mhec.state.md.us www.mhec.state.md.us. On the web site, students and parents may download the 2006-2007 edition of the "Student Guide to Higher Education and Financial Aid in Maryland," which offers thumbnail sketches of every college and university in Maryland, a comprehensive list of academic programs offered in the state, and details about state financial aid programs.

*National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators provides information about financial aid and other useful industry information at www.nasfaa.org.

*www.finaid.org is a one-stop-shop for all types of financial aid information.

*Sallie Mae is helpful for student loan borrowers. It features calculators that determine how much it costs to repay loans. The address is www.salliemae.com.

*College Scholarship Financial Aid Profile – The College Board has downloadable applications for the form required by certain colleges at www.collegeboard.org.

*UNCF/The College Fund – Lists scholarships available to students attending historically black colleges that are members of the Fund – www.uncf.org/scholarships/index.asp.

*FastWEB – Lists thousands of private scholarships available. This site boasts one of the largest free scholarship databases with over 1.3 million listings – www.fastweb.com.

*Scholarship Resource Network or SRN Express – Features a database with mostly private, non-needs based scholarships – www.srnexpress.com/index.cfm.

*CollegeNet Mach25 Scholarship Database – Offers over 500,000 scholarships from sponsor organizations. Web site will allow students to save listings and create letters requesting information – www.collegenet.com/mach25.

*Sallie Mae's Online Scholarship Service provides access to a College Aid Sources for Higher Education database, one of the oldest scholarship databases – www.salliemae.com/plan/freemoney/search.html.

*The Coalition of America's Colleges and Universities has developed resources to help parents and students who are looking for answers. The Coalition's web site address is www.CollegeIsPossible.org. It is a one-stop-shop with links and information on books, web sites, and brochures recommended by admissions and financial aid professionals.

*College Goal Sunday is a resource to help students apply for financial aid. The web site address is www.go2goal.org.

The Office of Student Financial Assistance at the Maryland Higher Education Commission administers almost $95 million in financial aid annually. For more information about scholarship programs, persons may telephone MHEC at 410-260-4565 or 1-800-974-1024, or visit MHEC's web site at www.mhec.state.md.us.

SPREADING SOME CHEER — A group of Girl Scouts from Route 40 Elementary School recently visited St. Vincent De Paul nursing home for Christmas caroling. The children delivered door hangers that they created for the residents. Photo by Lori Burdock.

GET THE DOG READY FOR CHRISTMAS — The Homeless Animal Rescue and Transport organization (HART) of Garrett County Inc. will host a one-day dog grooming fundraiser at the Garrett County Animal Shelter on Saturday, Dec. 17, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. The grooming will include a bath, blow-drying, and brush-out. Dogs will also receive Christmas bows and goodie bags. All grooming will be done for monetary donations to benefit the homeless animals at the shelter. (Dogs must be current on rabies and distemper/parvo vaccinations before participating.) Owners may either drop off their dogs and pick them up in about an hour, or wait in the lobby. HART is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit organization that works to find rescues and no-kill shelters to take adoptable animals from the local shelter before they are euthanized. "We are a small group, but we work very hard to save as many lives as possible," said Candy Virts, HART president. "We need more funding for the animals, and are grateful to the Garrett County government officials for allowing us to hold our charity grooming event at their facility. We hope many dog owners in the area will bring their beloved canines in for a 'holiday cleaning,' and help the county's less fortunate pets get to safety and find their 'forever homes.'" The shelter is located at 182 Oakland Sang Run Road. In the photo is Deal, a Labrador mix, who was rescued from the local shelter by HART of Garrett County. HART relocated him to a rescue in Virginia, and he was soon adopted by his new family, who promptly took him to see Santa (although he obviously already got his wish).

God's Beautiful Garden

God looked around His garden and he found an empty place.
He then looked down upon this earth and saw your tired face.
He put his arms around you and lifted you to rest.
God's garden must be beautiful,
He always takes the best.
He knew that you were suffering,
He knew you were in pain.
He knew that you would never get well on earth again.
He saw the road was getting rough and the hills were hard to climb.
So He closed your weary eyelids and whispered, "Peace be thine."
It broke our hearts to lose you but you didn't go alone;
For part of us went with you
The day God called you home.

Products for Contact Lens Care

Over 30 million Americans wear contact lenses, and 90% wear such lenses for vision correction. At the present, there are more than 100 non-prescription products available for contact lens care, which makes maintenance and care of lenses confusing. Three types of contact lenses exist: hard lenses, rigid gas permeable lenses, and soft lenses. Each type of lens requires different methods and products for maintenance; therefore it is important to ensure familiarity with the specific contact lens type a person may be wearing.

Care of soft contact lenses includes daily cleaning, disinfecting, and weekly enzymatic cleaning. Daily cleaners remove dirt and dust that has gathered on the lens during the day. Weekly enzymatic cleaners further remove tough particles. Saline solutions are used for rinsing and storing. New to the market are multi-purpose products that contain various combinations of daily cleaners, disinfectants, and saline solutions. Multi-purpose solutions are best used with disposable lenses and are not intended for extended wear soft contact lenses. Consult a pharmacist or eye care professional for help in choosing the appropriate products to ensure that lenses are comfortable and lasting.
